MANASSAS BATTLE COMMEMORATION

Anniversary Celebration of Bull Run On Saturday.

INTERESTING PROGRAM FOR THE ENTIRE DAY

Confederate Veterans, U. D. C. Chapters, and Their Friends Are Especially Invited.

The grove at the Henry House will be the scene on Saturday of the anniversary celebration of the Battle of Manassas, Bull Run, when General Bee rallied his South Carolinians with the now historical phrase "See the Virginians Standing Like a Stone Wall". It was this phrase which brought to General Jackson the nickname "Stonewall", and to his brigade, the sobriquet "Stone Wall Brigade".

It was at the grove at Henry House when General Bee was later killed; where Rickett's Battery advanced, supported by the New York Zouaves, faced by the gallant Georgians, and it was from this spot that the Northern army finally was driven in precipitous flight. It is also the site where the severe fighting of the Second Battle of Manassas terminated with the route of Pope's army.

While the battle to be commemorated actually was fought on July 21, Saturday, the 20th, was picked as best suited for the occasion. The program will be under the direction of John W. Rust, of Fairfax, assisted by Robert A. Rust, of Haymarket, and F. R. Fravel of Ballston, while Dr. Clarence J. Owens and J. Roy Price, trustees, of the Association, will be present.

Interesting addresses will be made, a quartette will entertain during the afternoon under the direction of Arthur C. Smith, commander of D. C. Maryland division, Sons of Confederate Veterans, and Mrs. Elizabeth G. Fred, president of Stonewall Jackson Chapter, U. D. C. The Falls Church cornet band will during the day.

Under the plans people are expected to bring their lunch and spend the day, and for those who do not care to bring refreshments, food will be on sale.

"GUARD AGAINST UNSANITARY CIGARS"

"Smoke Cremo,
it's certified sanitary . . . safe for your mouth!"

Says

Alfred W. McCann
D. Litt., A.B., LL.D.,

famous pure food expert, long active in crusades for pure foods and sanitary factories.

"Germs don't carry red flags. For safety's sake demand cigars that are certified."

"I heartily endorse Cremo. Every tobacco leaf entering the Cremo factory is scientifically treated by the U. S. Government approved methods . . . and kept clean along every step of the way!"

"Cremo is made in air-flooded, sun-bathed, scientifically clean factories! Not by antiquated methods . . . but by modern inventions that fold, wrap and tip the cigars."

"This Cremo purity is quickly sealed . . . in separate sanitary foil wrappers . . . giving you the scientific health protection that comes with certified milk!"

Cremo's superiority starts with the choicest and tenderest leaves, ripe and mellow, and continues in goodness through a slow, expensive maturing and mellowing process . . . topped off with the finest imported Sumatra wrapper! Cremo contains no scrap—no floor sweepings—all long filler—all fresh, tender leaves. Over $7,000,000 was spent in perfecting the certified "Cremo-method" of manufacture that insures uniformly fine, clean cigars. Foil-wrapped . . . sanitary . . . crush-proof . . . the kind of cigar that the late Vice-President Marshall must have had in mind when he said: "What this country needs most is a good 5 cent cigar."

Do you remember the old, filthy shop where the man in the window rolled the leaves with dirty fingers . . . and spit on the ends? What a far cry this is from the modern, certified "Cremo-method" of manufacture!

THINGS OF THE SOIL

The Manassas Journal's Complete Agricultural Service
By DAN VAN GORDER

Questions of lawns, gardens and general farming are discussed in this department each week. Readers of The Manassas Journal are invited to use this new column for the answer to their question and the solution of their problems. Address all inquiries to The Manassas Journal Information Bureau, Van Gorder News Service, Manassas, Virginia.

LEAKS IN THE AGRICULTURAL INDUSTRY.

The so-called American farm problem touches the present and future welfare of every man, woman and child in the United States, regardless of location, occupation or rank. Into the ultimate solution and adjustment of this perplexing question of agricultural solvency every citizen should exert his interest, influence and assistance.

It would perhaps be irrelevant to discuss contemplated legislative efforts to solve the farm problem, in this column. But there are some vital angles that need be treated here where the practices of every-day gardening, orcharding and farming are discussed. These phases of the problem are in the hands of many of the regular readers of this department to supply the remedies to a distressing malady.

In many of our eastern and central western agricultural regions, soil depletion has gone from bad to worse year after year, decade after decade, until in many states five acres of pasture land are required to maintain one unit of livestock through a short pasturing season. Wheat is produced in this country at the rate of approximately 14 bushels per acre; corn 26 bushels. The U. S. Department of Agriculture says millions of dollars are lost annually by the faulty practice of permitting the male bird to remain with the laying hens after the hatching season is over, producing fertile eggs that become unfit for use before reaching the consumer. Rats are taking an annual toll of several more millions. Preventable insect ravages are reducing our vegetable garden to approximately 50 per cent of their possible productivity. In several of our leading dairying states it is estimated that the same quantity of milk and butterfat could be produced from one-third the number of cows that are now kept.

It has been estimated that a hen that produces less than 90 eggs a year is kept at a loss by her owner, yet poultry records reveal that a large percentage of American farm flocks fall below this average.

The United States farming industry is the greatest business institution in the world. Despite this fact it is operated almost entirely, except in isolated cases, without a semblance of bookkeeping of any kind. Very few farmers and growers of fruits and vegetables maintain any record of purchases, sales or production costs.

The U. S. department of soils estimates that four hundred million tons of rich surface soil are carried down our rivers and smaller streams to the seas each year. This tremendous loss could be curtailed by permanent pasturing, fruit growing and other farm practices on many soils that are too steep for annual cultivated crops.

There is a tremendous loss among fruit growers from insect and disease attacks. Proper spraying and dusting have been demonstrated to control a large percentage of these losses.

There is much talk of over-production, but little investigation of high production costs. Legislators wrangle and many theorize over means of enabling the American farmer to enter his products in the world markets with a proper margin of profits, but little is done to widen that profit margin back at the source of production. Attention is focused at the sales point and detracted from the production point. Costs are lost sight of in the discussion of sales price levels.

While the sales of a product is always and should be considered important, yet it must be studied in relation to production. It can safely be assumed that a manufacturer facing an unprofitable existence by finding his products entering the market with production costs at such a height as to preclude profitable continuation, would call together his representatives and department heads, and with minute records of past productions and sales before them, center their efforts on lowering production sales and distribution costs. It is far-fetched to believe he would seek any other method of solution, especially some strange, unknown panacea from governmental hoppers. Newer machinery would perhaps be considered; increased utilization of by-products would be instituted; study of different and better grades of raw materials made; and in fact, a general renovating of production methods would follow. The product that the sales representation would take out into the world's markets would perhaps be, not only of superior product, but surely one where production costs were lower, one that would find a market at prevailing price levels without the necessity of economic experimenting to permit a profitable sale.

It is not idle speculation to state that American farm land is drifting down through practices of depletion to a point where production at profitable standards is fast becoming impossible. Estimate place our worn-out, waste and semi-waste land at 400,000,000 acres, with a heavy addition each year. Continued robbing of Nature's storehouse is bringing the inevitable penalty. As with our forests, so have we impoverished our soils with little thought of the morrow. Our average acre production total is so near the red side of the ledger, and in many cases already dropped below the danger line, that there is not a sufficient margin to carry on a working farm capital and permit necessary expansions and rehabilitation. We know of scores of farms whose owners are financially unable to purchase the needed equipment and materials to permit soil improvement.

We believe that an impartial survey of the farm problem in the United States will reveal that no constructive program of farm relief can be devised that does not make paramount the building up of our production averages through soil improvement and closer utilization of farm products. For no profitable market will ever be discovered, or method of marketing originated, that will make possible the sale at a profit of an article that is unprofitably produced. It is an economic impossibility.

I count this thing to be grandly true

That a noble deed is a step toward God.

Lifting the soul from a common clod

To a purer air and a brighter view.—J. G. Holland.

CHRISTIANSON WAS RIGHT.

Governor Theodore Christianson, of Minnesota, warned President Hoover on Friday, July 12, that the dissatisfaction in the Northwest with the Hawley tariff bill would be likely to show itself in next year's Congressional elections.

The opposition to the measure was presented by the Republican Governor of Minnesota as deep and widespread, the farmers feeling that the House bill failed adequately to protect agricultural products or to give the farmer the even break with industry which the President had promised in his campaign speeches. The Governor also told the President that any elation the farmers had over the passage of the agricultural relief bill was modified, if not entirely wiped out, by the impression that the revised tariff would not give them the assistance promised in last year's campaign.

To all this, according to the New York Times, the President made no reply beyond the remark that the Republican party should "make good" on his pre-election promises.

The Governor particularly protested that the duty on hides would be of no benefit to the farmer inasmuch as the compensatory duties on boots and shoes, which the Republican House imposed as a condition on putting hides on the dutiable list, would more than eat up the concession to the farmers and stock-raisers. The duties on building materials were another ground for the Minnesota Governor's complaint.

"The only way the disparity between the farmer and industrialists can be corrected," said Governor Christianson, "is to increase the duty on farm products and leave the duties on manufactured articles unchanged."

The menace to the re-election of Republican congressmen, particularly in the Northwest, was conveyed in even more definite form in the recent election held in Minneapolis to fill the Congressional vacancy left by Walter Newton when he resigned his seat in order to become one of President Hoover's numerous secretaries.

The Republican primaries in the Fifth Minnesota district turned down Arch Coleman, the choice of the Hoover administration, and W. W. Heffelfinger, its second choice, who had the endorsement of Secretary of State Stimson and House Leader Tilson, and nominated Lieut. Governor W. L. Nolan. Nolan was elected, but by a bare plurality of 3,500 over Einer Hoidale, the Democratic nominee, in a district which gave Walter Newton only a year ago a majority of nearly 50,000. Nolan pulled through by grace of a Farmer-Labor candidate, who divided the votes of the Progressive element. The 6,000 ballots cast for Lundeen, the Farmer-Laborite, were all that saved Nolan, for his total vote was less than that of Hoidale and Lundeen combined.

The result of this election caused the Republican St. Paul Pioneer Press to say: "Minneapolis Republicans have more explaining than celebrating to do as a result of this victory. And," it added, "from an insignificant third party in 1926, the Democrats of Hennepin county have become a respectable opposition, at least for the time being."

Hoidale, who so narrowly missed the election, made a Fourth of July speech, in which he pointed out that under Roosevelt, LaFollette and Lowden, the agricultural section had tried in vain to break the control of the Republican party "by the interests that have been responsible for the unfavorable and unjust conditions in which we find ourselves today." Carrying on his thought, he continued: "What sense would there be in trying to do again what Roosevelt, LaFollette and Lowden, with the whole agricultural West behind them, failed to do. You might try a thousand times and you would always be met at the convention door by the same combination, the same control and the same power that met you and turned you away at Kansas City only a year ago."

Directly, Hoidale said the same thing as Governor Christianson conveyed in more diplomatic language at the White House last Friday.

"Is it not true," said Hoidale, "that the only way to make the Republican party and its leaders understand that we mean business is to build up an opposition strong enough to quit the Republicans if they go back on their promises? As long as we vote for them, no matter what happens to us, they will laugh at us and our demands."

"We can't afford to split our forces. Those who think alike on these questions must get together in one camp and fight as one man in a common cause. The fight can be won and must be won, but in order to win we must do something besides send petitions to Washington."

The magnitude of Hoidale's accomplishment and the extent of dissatisfaction with the Republican administration in that stronghold of the G. O. P. may better be appreciated when it is recalled that ordinarily in the Fifth Minnesota district the Democrats cast fewer votes than the Farmer-Labor tail-enders. Lundeen got in the recent election. Commenting on it, the Minneapolis Star, usually an administration paper, said editorially:

"The vote given the Republican candidate was the smallest given any Republican candidate for Congress from this district since women were voting."

"By his candidacy, Einer Hoidale, Democrat, has rendered a real service to Minneapolis and the Northwest, an opportunity to demonstrate that it does mean business when it insists on the fulfillment of campaign pledges." All of which indicates that Gov. Christianson's warning to President Hoover had a pretty solid foundation and that the prospects for Democratic Congressional gains in the next election in a district that did not give a single Democratic electoral vote in 1928 are bright indeed.

If a Democrat in a district where his party was almost nonexistent can cut down a Republican lead from 50,000 to 3,500, what is going to be the result in districts with the same grievances in which the Democrats, even in Presidential years, constituted a strong, well-organized and formidable minority?

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

FOR JULY 21, 1929.

The International Sunday School Lesson For July 21, is "Ezekiel's Vision Of Hope"—Ezekiel 47:1-2. By WILLIAM ELLIS.

War books are the day's vogue. Nearly all of them are microscopic studies of the soldiers' life. Therefore they reveal the brutalized horror of war, its agonies, its waste, its folly. And that is well, if ever we are to have a warless world.

But there is another view. From this distance, it is possible to get a telescopic view of the war, and to see it in its larger aspects and consequences. The present Lesson constrains us to this. And we may discern how God makes the wrath of man to praise Him. Evil beyond measure the war wrought; but also good beyond the mind of man to understand.

By the war the progress of humanity was set forward centuries at a leap. Old insularities were abolished. The racial and national stagnations of ages were destroyed. Vast new understandings of life's possibilities, and of human rights, took possession of hundreds of millions of people. All the world was brought into a common consciousness of unity. In an incredible new sense, man learned to inherit the earth, because of the convulsions of war which awakened the remotest people. Not since the beginning of time has there been such a wholesale educational experience for humanity. The war gave us a new world, in compensation for its bitter cost.

What Lies Ahead?

Not only have the oldest, largest nations, like China and India and Egypt, been rejuvenated as a consequence of the war, and a mood of nationalism and self-assertion and progress created throughout the whole earth, but new and permanent ties of world solidarity have been created. Airplanes have winged their way across the Dark Continent and above the forgotten centers of Asia. The radio has come, singing its psalm of universality, to bring a common understanding and interest to the whole round world. Automobiles now speed along the ancient caravan trails which, for millenniums, were devoted to the slow-stepping feet of camels and donkeys. The general dissemination of news concerning conditions every-

Here are rules for bathing and swimming by Health Commissioner Wayne of New York city:

Don't go swimming alone.

Don't stay in the water too long.

Don't go into the water immediately after a heavy meal.

Don't swim until completely tired out.

Don't enter the water if feeling below par.

Don't go into the water if subject to fainting or epilepsy.

Don't enter the water if suffering from kidney or heart disease or high blood pressure.

Don't try to find bottom.

Don't change seats in small boats.

Don't let this season pass without learning how to swim.

INSECT REMEDY.

For every insect pest, with few exceptions, there is a remedy.

Vegetable insects will eat up 50 per cent of the great American garden this year. Proper precautions against these ravages will hold this loss down to a negligible amount.

Are you going to contribute your 50-50 division with the enemies of your crops among the late garden plantings?

Through this department every reader may obtain all the information needed in the warfare against plant and crop insects and diseases. Information is furnished immediately following receipt of inquiry.

where is putting a period to old exploitations and injustices by setting up a new tribunal of world opinion. Even the timeless ills that have always racked the human body are being sought out and conquered by modern medicine.

Standardization is not merely the new note in western industry: it is the keynote of the age in all departments of life. With a speed which has left us bewildered, Asia and Africa have cast off the habiliments of the ancient East, and have adopted western garb and western ways. Science has put new tools of conquest and of comfort into the hands of everybody everywhere. "Old things have passed away; behold, all things have become new."

Now What Next?

Last evening a friend asked me, "Have you any idea of what is to follow all these wonderful changes that have been crowded into the years since the war?" She cited the stupendous advances in public thought and in world politics; the new discoveries and inventions; and the readjustment of the world's mind toward

What answer could I make, except that, for some reason outside of our deserving, we have come to a fullness of times which the Infinite God is preparing for His Own purposes. Certainly God is getting the world ready for something. With a swift-foot that fairly startles us, He whose other name is Providence, has brought mankind to a realization of the unsatisfactoriness of merely material things. Despite the automobile and the airplane and the talking motion picture and the radio and the almost sup-human manufacturing machines, man and woman are feeling and expressing a great unfulfilled void in life. All of the marvelous material gains of the past fifteen years have not brought satisfaction to the human spirit. Probably there never before was so much outspoken discontent in the world as now.

Like Ezekiel's river, which is the theme of today's Lesson, life has rapidly expanded from waters up to the ankles, up to the knees, up to the loins, and then a stream to swim in, which cannot be passed over. This old prophetic foresaw a strange increase and expansion of Divine goodness. His picture of the kingdom's increase was one of growth beyond man's power to encompass. And in the last stage, the everwidening and ever-deepening river was one of spiritual beneficence.

So it seems now. The next step—to answer my friend's question—surely must be a world-wide realization of man's spiritual possibilities. With all the new tools and powers that have been placed in his hand, man simply must experience an awakening to his own soul-capacity. All that has hitherto come to us in this flood of invention and discovery and mastery is only a potential menace unless it is wielded by men and women whose spiritual powers are equal to their opportunities and tasks. Surely be universal spiritual ferment of our day is but a getting ready for a new and larger experience of God.

Seers Of Optimism.

In a day of pessimistic philosophy, which is sending an appalling number of educated youth to suicides' graves, we need to remember that like Ezekiel, the Bible writers are optimists. Because they postulate God as the first factor in life, they are confident of life's outcome. The Bible is the Book of a triumphant kingdom.

Mood used to say that "some people have only enough religion to make them miserable." Ezekiel portrayed God's grace as "waters to swim in." There is depth and breadth for the exercise of the fullest powers. Nobody has come up to the standard of either the Old or New Testament who has not realized the adequate fullness of the powers of grace; and that "everything shall live whither the river cometh." The "good time coming," of which all great poets have sung, is inseparable from the reign of the Almighty, who is our Father in Heaven.

As Christians pray daily "Thy kingdom come," they should pause and add "And we thank Thee that it is coming." All of the transformations of the social order which have followed the war are signs of its coming; and evidence that "Thou hast put all things under His feet." Confidence in the Kingdom's conquests should be habit of mind with Christians. They should read the news of the day as the evidences manifest on every hand.

This morning's mail brought me letters from Persia, Egypt and Turkey; and each one contained a report of the victory of those forces which represent the kingdom of God. Jesus rebuked religious leaders of His day because they could not discern the signs of the times. Joyce Kilmer's lines are apropos:

"No longer of His be it said
"He hath no place to lay his head."

"In every land a constant lamp Flames by His small and mighty camp."

"There is no strange and distant place
That is not gladdened by His face"

"And every nation kneels to hail
The Splendor shining through His veil."

In a dire and dark day, Ezekiel the seer beheld victory. Amidst the ruins of the nation that was heir to countless promises, he still saw the triumph of God's will and the better estate of God's people. Although the night was dark, the stars of the Eternal Goodness shone forth in guidance.

Clearly, if this watchman on the broken walls of a defeated and dispersed nation could cry, "The morning cometh!" There is no reason for despair on the part of present prophets. We have seen the fulfillment of many prophecies; and others are coming to pass before our eyes.

Ezekiel's river is flowing—flowing to a fullness that holds more of hope for humanity than possibly even he perceived.

Important Notice

The Town Treasurer has turned over to the Town Manager an unusually large number of delinquent bills for electric current and water, which bills were payable on or before July 10th.

The Town Ordinances give the Treasurer no authority to extend the time for the payment of these bills and the Town Manager has no alternative but to discontinue service as soon as delinquent bills are reported to him.

The Mayor and Council have notified the Town Manager that they expect him to promptly fulfill his duty in regard to the above, and while he will be reluctant to deprive any one of the use of current and water, these orders must be obeyed.

THEREFORE, THE WORK OF DISCONNECTING ALL SERVICES, UPON WHICH BILLS ARE STILL DUE, WILL BEGIN AT ONCE AND PROCEED AS RAPIDLY AS THE WORK CAN BE CARRIED ON.

SPECIAL ATTENTION IS CALLED TO THE FACT THAT NO SERVICES WILL BE RECONNECTED UNTIL THE RECONNECTION CHARGE HAS BEEN PAID IN ADDITION TO THE ORIGINAL AMOUNT OF THE BILL.

PEANUT ACREAGE GAIN
OF 5 PER CENT IN STATE

August 1, July 17—The peanut acreage of Virginia has been increased 5 per cent this year over the 1928 acreage, according to a report of Henry M. Taylor, federal-State agricultural statistician, made public yesterday.

Favorable weather conditions at planting time and low prices prevailing at this time are said to have produced an even greater increase of this crop than was planned by farmers, the report states. There is also shown a decrease of from 10 to 15 per cent in the acreage planted to the Spanish type. Growers are favoring the large type peanuts.

The condition of peanuts in the United States generally was "80 per cent" or slightly poorer than usual at the time of year, according to the report of Mr. Taylor. No estimate of production will be made until September 1, when information on the probable acreage to be harvested will be available.

Increased acreages in cotton are reported in all cotton-growing sections of the State, with the greatest increase being along the northern and western edge of the cotton district. The report stated that weather con-
