

R. WALTON MOORE LAUDS SENATORS

Statement Comes After Discussion of Alleged Decadence of Upper House

By R. M. LYNN.
Washington, Dec. 14.—No State is better represented in the United States Senate than Virginia, in the judgment of that veteran in public life, R. Walton Moore, now representing the Eighth District in the House. He is convinced that the State has no less reason to be proud of her senatorial representation, Claude A. Swanson and Carter Glass, than of her representation in the days of James Barbour and William Giles.

In a recent conversation with The Times correspondent, Mr. Moore expressed his high estimate of the Old Dominion's senatorial team. The discussion started with some references to the low estate into which the upper house of Congress seemingly has fallen in public opinion. Mr. Moore made the point that certainly the Virginia members had conducted themselves with circumspection and had demonstrated ability of the first order, and could not be charged with any responsibility for adverse public sentiment.

Asked For Written Statement.
The writer urged Mr. Moore to reduce his estimate of the senators from Virginia to writing, using the argument that a great many readers would welcome an opinion from one of his judgment, fairness and long and intimate acquaintance with both men and his background of information with respect to the senatorial line in Virginia. At first he declined, but subsequently was prevailed upon to prepare the article, which appears below. It may be added that neither senator has the slightest intimation of its preparation, and they will not know of it until they see it in print.

By R. Walton Moore.
Following is the article:
There are many who concur in the view expressed by Mr. Dawes when he became Vice President, that the Senate should change its rules so as rigidly to limit discussion, but there are many who hold the opposite view, indicated by Mr. Coolidge when he became Vice-President. Aside, however, from this matter, it is clear that the most severe critics of the talkativeness of the Senate can find no fault on that score with the Virginia Senators. For example, what they have said in the course of the long tariff debate would probably not fill two pages of the Congressional Record, and their remarks were always pertinent to what was under consideration at the moment.

None Better Represented.
Basing my reply to your specific question upon a decade of very close observation, I can say with the utmost confidence that no State is better represented in the Senate than Virginia. Our senators are in the very front rank of the members of that body, because of their ability and experience and their record of achievement.

There might easily be a long enumeration of measures enacted for the benefit of Virginia through their initiation and effective support, and the disadvantages proposals which they have effectively opposed. In the body where they serve, the interests of Virginia have never been more diligently and wisely guarded.

In connection with the business of the Senate pertaining to the nation-at-large, they are among the outstanding members. Mr. Swanson is the ranking Democrat on the committee on naval affairs and the committee on foreign relations, and should our party obtain control, he would have the choice of the chairmanship of those great committees.

The present chairman, Senator Hale of Maine, and Senator Borah, of Idaho, are not more active and influential in shaping the policies which the committees primarily consider, and frequently Senator Swanson has assumed the leadership and his arguments in committee and on the floor have prevailed over those of the leaders of the dominant party. This may soon again happen when the world court matter comes along for consideration. Whatever he says about foreign affairs and naval affairs carries very great weight, and he has made addresses on other subjects, for instance his quite recent discussion of

HAYES URGES CAR OWNERS BUY NOW

Suggests Securing License Tags Next Week To Avoid Rush.

Motorists are advised by James M. Hayes, Motor Vehicle Commissioner, to secure their 1930 license tags within the next week if possible, in order to avoid the rush and confusion incident to the last day of grace allotted to owners of 1929 licenses.

While January 15 is the legal time limit for the use of 1929 tags, Commissioner Hayes yesterday pointed out that the period of grace really expires on January 14, inasmuch as all State offices will be closed on January 15, the day of Governor-Elect Pollard's inauguration.

In addition to the curtailment by one day of the normal time-limit given motorists, Commissioner Hayes emphasizes the fact that his employees will have half-holiday on New Year's Eve and full holiday on New Year's Day.

"Few license tags have been issued thus far," Mr. Hayes stated. "This means inconvenience to thousands of persons later on. There were more than 400,000 licenses issued in the state in 1929, and we expected an increase over this year's total. Richmond and immediate vicinity alone will require 50,000 tags for automobile and trucks, and for the convenience of all parties concerned. I would greatly like to see this matter given prompt attention by automobile owners."

Worth Stork at the Peoples National Bank, is ready to issue Prince William tags.

TOTAL OF 1,000 MILES OF GAPS IN VIRGINIA ROADS

Mileage additions made to the state highway system by reason of the Vaughan act of 1928 have caused approximately 1,000 miles of gaps in the system, it was learned at the state highway department today.

The general assembly in the Vaughan act added 1,587 miles to the state system and instead of leaving the distribution of this mileage to the state highway commission arbitrarily distributed it to the various counties on the basis of area, with certain maximums and minimums. As a result of this there are hundreds of odds and ends of state system roads all over the state and many of these have absolutely no relation to the state system as it existed before the passage of the law.

Henry G. Shirley, state highway commissioner, said today that the closing of this additional 1,000 miles of gaps was a problem with which the commission likely would have to wrestle for years.

PRESIDENT EXPIRES AT 64

Madisonburg, W. Va., Dec. 26.—Almon W. Smith, 64, president of the Berkeley County Court, died at a local hospital today after a four-day illness resulting from a perforating ulcer.

SALARY ADVANCE IS SOUGHT FOR GOVERNOR

Assembly May Be Asked to Consider Legislation In Advance of Appropriation Measure.

Richmond, Dec. 26.—A bill providing that the governor's salary after 1930 shall be $10,000 per year will be introduced at the beginning of the session of the general assembly, and may become the first law of the 1930 assembly, it was indicated today.

The measure already has been drafted by its sponsors, who will include Senator W. A. Garrard, of Henry; Senator B. F. Buchanan, of Marion; and Senator Waller Holladay, of Richmond city.

Immediate action will be sought on the measure because it must become law before the term of the next governor begins on January 15 due to a constitutional inhibition preventing the raising of a governor's salary during his term of office.

The salary of the governor now is $5,000 per year, lower than the salaries of a number of state officials.

For the past twenty years the salary has been entirely inadequate to carry the living costs of the office, and all of Virginia's governors have gone to heavy personal expense to serve their state.

A salary increase bill was one of the governmental reorganization measures of 1928, but after passing the house, it was allowed to die in the Senate.

The budget of 1930 contains a provision for a $10,000 salary, but since the budget may not be acted upon in time, the assembly may be asked to consider the salary appropriation in advance of the regular appropriation bill.

Cora Elizabeth Fisher and Edward Bauserman Have Pretty Wedding in Washington.

The Epworth Methodist Episcopal Church parsonage, Washington, was the scene on Thursday, December 26, at high noon, of a lovely wedding, when Miss Cora Elizabeth Fisher, of Manassas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Fisher, became the bride of Mr. James Edward Bauserman, of Harrisonburg, Va. The Rev. John C. Copenhaver, pastor, performed the ceremony.

The bride wore a dress of brown flat crepe with accessories to match. The ceremony was performed in the presence of the bride's parents, her brother, a student at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and the groom's cousin. Following the wedding the couple motored to the bride's home where the couple were given a small and informal reception. They received many handsome and useful presents of silver, fine linens and other articles.
The couple will be at home to their friends after December 27th, at McGaheysville, Va., where the groom is an instructor in the McGaheysville High School.

Pass Budget.

Alexandria, Dec. 26.—The city council held a special meeting yesterday afternoon and passed the tax ordinance, or city budget.

NEWS OF WEEK IN OLD VIRGINIA

Fifteen Theaters Sold.

Winchester, Dec. 26.—Reports current recently have been confirmed by Isaac Weinberg, veteran theatrical manager, that fifteen theaters of the Shenandoah Valley Theaters Corporation, a subsidiary of the Universal Pictures Corporation, have been sold to the Paramount-Famous-Players-Lasky Corporation through its subsidiary, the Publix Theaters Corporation. The consideration was not announced, but it is understood to involve about $2,000,000.

The theaters thus acquired and added to the Paramount-Publix chain in the South are situated in Winchester, Staunton, Harrisonburg, Lexington, Clifton Forge, Bedford and Danville. Mr. Weinberg said he retained his interest in the corporation and will remain as general manager of the chain in Virginia. The Paramount-Publix Corporation is said to hold dominating position in the South, or from New Orleans, La., to Winchester, and that acquiring the Virginia theaters links the Southern with its Northern and Eastern chain. It is the intention to retain the present personnel at each theater.

Alexandria Bonds Bought.

Alexandria, Dec. 24.—Lewis E. Smoot, of Washington, brother of Mayor William Albert Smoot and a former Alexandrian, now engaged in business in Washington, was awarded the $750,000 four and a half per cent city of Alexandria annexation, public improvement and funding bonds by the city council this afternoon, his bid being the highest for the bonds. There were seven bids submitted including the one of Mr. Smoot's which was $735,000 for the entire issue.

Bid On Danville Utilities.

Danville, Dec. 23.—The People's Light and Power Company, of New York, was the only bidder today for the city gas and electric utilities on which proposals were received by the city council.

The power concern offered $3,750,000 for the two utilities and outlined its proposed Patrick County hydro-electric station at the Pinnacles, where sufficient power would be generated to supply electricity throughout this rural section. The council referred the bid to the finance committee, asking that a report be made next Monday night.

Richmond Rector Resigns.

Richmond, Dec. 26.—The Rev. Dr. John Yates Downman has resigned as rector of fashionable All Saints' Protestant Episcopal Church here. His resignation was accepted after resolutions regretting his action were adopted.

He became rector in 1888, when All Saints' was established as a mission of Monumental Church, and had served continuously in that capacity ever since.

The present imposing edifice on West Franklin street, near Monroe, was built in 1900. For many years Dr. Downman had drawn a salary of only $2,500 a year, refusing repeatedly all proposals of his congregation to increase the amount. A native of Fredericksburg, Dr. Downman was educated in the private schools of the State and was graduated from Virginia Theological Seminary, near Alexandria, 1882.

Radio Survey Made.

Lynchburg, Dec. 26.—Because of complaints of owners of radio sets here as to interferences, C. A. Ellert and H. A. Cohen, of the radio division of the federal department of commerce, have been engaged here this week in a survey to locate the cause of the trouble. The report will go to the department of commerce, which will make its findings public later. The two experts are located at Fort McHenry, Baltimore.

Agriculture Agents Organize.

Blacksburg, Dec. 26.—Organization of the Virginia County Agricultural Agents Association, which will be drafted into permanent form at a meeting next summer, was the outgrowth of the annual meeting at Virginia Polytechnic Institute of county farm demonstration agents of the state.

The new association has as its announced objectives the promotion of better fellowship among the agents and the building up of a more coordinated effort to increase the effectiveness of co-operative agricultural extension work in Virginia.

Temporary officers were elected and a committee named to draft a constitution and by laws and nominate permanent officers before a meeting next summer at an unannounced date. The officers selected were J. S. Willis, Botetourt County, president; D. T. Painter, Grayson County, secretary-treasurer.

Members of the nominating committee were named as follows: W. O. Strong, chairman, Accomac; M. G. Lewis, Rockbridge; E. V. Breeden, Madison; N. H. Williams, Mecklenburg; H. E. McSwain, Charlotte.

Apple Shipments Drop.

Richmond, Dec. 26.—Three hundred and fifteen car loads of apples shipped in Virginia during the week of December 8-14 made a total second to only one State in the Union, it was revealed by figures on shipments made public today by H. M. Taylor, agricultural statistician. During the same week in 1928 apple growers in Virginia shipped 273 car lots, the compilation showed. The total to date, however, is less than last year, 12,114, as compared with 16,966 in 1928.

Other car lot shipments of fruits and vegetables for the week of December 8-14, both years and the total for each year, were reported as follows:

Spinach, 208 cars for week of December 8-14, 1929, compared with 247 cars last year; total of 868 cars for 1929 and 1,084 for 1928.

Mixed vegetables, 58 cars for week of December 8-14, 1929, compared with 81 cars last year; total of 2,069 cars for 1929 and 1,957 for 1928.

Sweet potatoes, 29 cars for week of December 8-14, 1929, compared with 20 cars last year; total of 6,868 cars for 1929 and 6,227 for 1928.

Why He Failed.

A young man undergoing an examination was asked to describe different electric batteries, among them one named the Daniel cell.

His reply was: "About Daniel's cell very little is known, but it is generally supposed to have been a beast den furnished with lions. As Daniel is dead and the lions are dead, what on earth is the good of raking up an old story?"

IN THE east of a cloudless sky shone a bright star as a beacon, over the town. Groups of town folk hurrying in its direction appeared as the wise men who followed the star of old.

Every one would be attending the Christmas entertainment given at the church, so no need to keep his fruit shop open, decided Matt Hughes, as he joined the happy joyous throng bound in that direction.

From where he sat he could plainly see the star, and he fell to dreaming of another Christmas when that same star shone as brightly as now, but instead of the snow-clad hills of New England there was the wide expanse of the California desert. Across that desert toward the star rode a lone horseman, a song on his lips and a smile on his face. From his saddle hung several packages in the bright holiday wrappings.

As he drew near a cabin the song changed to a shout of greeting which died to a low exclamation of surprise as he saw there was no welcoming light. After searching in the dark he had struck a light, and then had come the discovery of the written message. It was the same old story—unaccustomed to the desert the problems confronting one trying to conquer it had proved too big. Howard James, the playmate of his childhood, college friend and later neighbor out here in the West, proved now to be the real love of Dolly Hughes instead of Matt.

One day the name James Howard was spoken in his presence; the similarity in the name of his former friend caused him to locate the man. Then he learned that Dolly had not survived long after reaching there.

Matt Silently Extended His Gift.

With a curse on his lips the husband left, and although the two had lived in the same village for several years, they had never spoken to each other; but Matt had never revealed the identity of the other man.

Words of the program mingled with his dream, such as "The Glory of the Lord shone round" and "They brought Him gifts" and the words of the minister at parting—"Little children love one another."

An idea which formed quickly in his mind crystallized into action and Matt found himself hurrying first to his shop and then to a little home in the other part of town. Entering the presence of his once while friend, Matt silently extended his gift.

"Matt!" the word was half a question and half an exclamation. The one addressed placed his offering in the other man's hands.

"Howard," he said, "I have brought a token of forgiveness." As he saw what the basket contained Howard clasped the gift more tightly.

"A basket of California grapes!" he cried over and over. "Just what I have longed for."

"Why it's only a basket of grapes," stammered Matt.

"No," Howard after a moment replied in a choked voice, "it's much more than that; it's an answer to prayer."

"Well," Matt said as he turned to go, "I'm glad that you like them." At the door he turned and extended his hand.

"Merry Christmas, Howard," he said.

The other grasped the outstretched hand—"Merry Christmas Matt, and God bless you." And the next moment the bearer of the gift was out under the stars.

MAKING AN OASIS.

A recent trip through the eastern and southeastern states revealed remarkable progress in growing food crops as well as tobacco, cotton and other products necessary for food and wearing purposes. Modern methods have supplanted many of the high production cost practices of the past decades. Good roads have made possible a higher standard of living in rural regions, while at the same time markets of the world have been brought almost to the door of the food producer. These blessings in concrete, macadam, brick and tar, as expressed by one southern business man, "have taken the city into the country and brought the country into the city".

But scattered here and there over the various states, as is also found in the mid-western farming area as well, is usually one or two outstanding accomplishments, an oasis in the desert of mediocre farming, a man who has out-distanced all his neighbors and is making more profit from his far mand living on a higher plane of progressiveness. These pioneers of prosperity quite often have a story to tell that will serve as a beacon to those who are struggling with tired, worn out soils. They are establishing a new frontier. And the key to their attainment is invariably, "I am putting more back into my soil than I am taking from it". And their soil substantiates their claims.

Fifteen years ago a North Dakota farmer and his wife, after several years of wheat growing with ordinary success, decided that the rigors of the northern winters were too severe for them. A trip into the tobacco growing region of North Carolina convinced them that here were opportunities in this decadent soil, depleted to a large extent to unprofitable fertility by constant tobacco growing and injudicious farm practices. They purchased a 160-acre farm near a growing manufacturing city, and began to apply restorative methods to the soil. Cows, chickens, hogs and fruit were chosen as the vehicles for their venture, although none of these activities was succeeding, or in fact tried, in this part of the state.

A sub-soiling plow was the first implement purchased. With this the hard stratum of clay lying near the surface was broken and various legumes employed for green manure crops. Five years later some of the finest corn, wheat, beans, barley, clover, alfalfa and other crops grown in the state were produced on the red clay farm of this pioneer for the north. Apple and peach trees, dewberries and other small fruits were bringing in revenue or nearing the production age. The chickens and cows were not only keeping up the household expenses, paying taxes and providing manure for continued enrichment of the farm, but they were paying the wage of one hired man, reducing the labor requirements of the owner.

Today this man's farm is a model of productivity, visited by scores of neighboring county farmers. The soil is as rich as the famed Nile valley where Nature provides an annual deposit from the fertile lands of the head waters. But where Nature was given a chance to employ her marvelous processes of rejuvenation through a reversal of the steps by which the soil had been depleted of its humus and other plant food elements.

The nation, listening to the echoes of much talk of marketing, distribution, surpluses, over-production, supply and demand and other angles in the national discussion of the so-called farm problem, is likely to overlook what is surely one of the basic principles of farm prosperity,—the lowering of food production costs by raising production levels and decreasing by that process the unit overhead expense. That our low acreage yields are playing an important role in agriculture is apparent in the records of these outstanding farms where success is following closely the attempts of increasing the fertility of the soil. There are few states, none known, east of the Mississippi river where there are not several farms with records of this scope to demonstrate the possibilities of practical farming.

Of course, it may readily be claimed that if all farms were brought back to maximum production there would follow a demoralizing over-production of food crops. This would perhaps be true were it not possible to admit that much of our land in eastern United States now under a hit-and-miss, unprofitable form of cultivation should be devoted entirely to forest production. Then too, permanent pasturage holds not only a solution to hill farming problems where the soil is fast disappearing by erosion, but increased dairy and livestock resulting therefrom would not soon imperil production.

We are importing large amounts of forest products, fruits and other food products that can be grown in eastern United States. Danrying interests seek higher tariffs to protect them from European competition. So long as these conditions apply and our consumption of home grown products remain below the maximum, there is opportunity in every state to raise the productivity of our soils through "putting mere back into the soil than is taken from it".

These are phases that are near the heart of the so-called farm problem. One of these farms that is an oasis in the common humdrum of unprofitable agriculture, is a challenge from Nature for a chance to pour her cornucopia of richness back on to the land.

PAYROLLS VS. POLITICS

An English member of Parliament a few years ago wrote a level-headed commonsense book that outsold all others and the title was "Industries versus Politics".

His argument was that steady employment and good payrolls were more important than the ordinary political palaver one heard or read in the newspapers or that was talked on the hustings.

A newspaper that gives a good share of its space to news about payrolls and industries is more humanly interesting than the most learned disquisitions about the claims for this or that political party.

It is of great importance for the press to make itself the community exponent of payrolls and industries that add men and women to the payroll column.

A newspaper which dedicates itself to the idea of making its home city and district an industrial center and pledges itself to give a fair amount of space to industrial development, renders a public service of inestimable value which should receive hearty support from all citizens.

STOCK VALUES STABILIZED BY INDUSTRY.

The great stock market break caused some millions of people to begin to think in terms of facts instead of tailor-made theories.

There was a time when many persons thought that one could go to California or Alaska and pick gold out of the streets.

In the stock market or the gold fields ignorance or greed pays a heavy price for experience.

Stock selling and buying and gold mining are indispensable to our industrial structure, but the vital point that must not be overlooked is that industry and actual production lie behind the ultimate success of both operations.

The foregoing is a simple statement of fact—so simple and self-evident that periodically it is overlooked in the mad craze to acquire wealth without a fair return in service. The end is always the same if such a policy is pursued long enough.

The investment of capital, the development of industry and the employment of labor is the sound foundation upon which community prosperity and success depends.

Industrial development is not just the "other fellow's" business. It is everybody's business.

After the stock crash, what is the country turning to for salvation? Industries! Immediately the cry went up that industry must be kept moving, labor employed and money put into constructive enterprise. In other words, the real values of all industries depend upon production and earnings.

The public is becoming more industrially minded. Industries today are our national salvation and through their earnings will bring back the values of securities which were in many cases needlessly destroyed in the hysterical "gold rush", which we have passed through.

GET DOWN TO FUNDAMENTALS.

In any consideration of the automobile accident problem and its proposed cures we must get down to fundamentals.

It has been conclusively proven that accidents cannot be legislated away; so long as the legislation takes the form of merely providing indemnity for the injured. Compulsory insurance, from the standpoint of prevention, has proven a colossal failure. It has but added more complexities to an already complex situation.

On the other hand, tests conducted in many cities and states have proven that logical traffic laws, intelligently enforced, will produce a decrease in the accident record. Fines or jail terms for the irresponsible, incompetent, drunken or careless drivers—the 10 per cent who cause 90 per cent of all accidents—work wonders.

The fundamental problem is to prevent the accident from occurring. Until we provide and enforce laws that keep the highways clear for the competent and the careful, every year will doubtless witness further increases in the victims of the mishandled automobile.

IMPROVED FARM MARKET ROADS ESSENTIAL.

According to an authoritative survey, about 30 per cent of our highway system should consist of high-cost roads, and 70 per cent low-cost.

Many communities, in the urge to build more and better highways, have committed the error of constructing expensive highways in sections where the amount of traffic does not justify them.

Scientifically balanced road building programs will permit a community or state to construct a maximum mileage of useful roads from funds available. At the present time there is a strong trend toward extending moderate cost highways of oil or asphalt in rural sections. Such improved secondary or market roads must be given to the farmer and country dweller.

Return of the Muff.

The muff, observes the St. Paul Pioneer Press, is coming back. A new York woman has appeared on the streets of Winnipeg, Manitoba, wearing one. Replying to cautious inquiry by a reporter she advised him that muffs are decreed by fashion for the coming winter.

That may mean little or nothing to the newer generation which regards muffs as relics of the time when women fainted and wore stays. But to the grey-haired man who remembers slipping his hand into his mother's muff for a momentary bit of warmth or comfort, it will be like meeting an old friend. The muffs of those days were generous affairs and constituted a sort of furry mine for coins and bits of candy by those who had staked a claim. No picture of a skating girl was complete without the muff pressed against her face to ward off the wintry breeze. As an aid to better understanding and promotion of the art of holding hands, the muff was in winter what the parasol was in summer and something better.

Up until the time of the Restoration in the seventeenth century, men wore muffs but women put them to so much better use than mere protection for the hands that men gave them up and pretended to scorn them as effeminate. Modern woman may decline to return to long skirts and a corseted waistline, but it is at least

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
FOR DECEMBER 25, 1929

The International Sunday School Lesson for December 29 is, "Some Social Teachings of the Bible Fellowship Through Worship"—Psalm 122:1-9; Hebrews 10:22-25.

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

I have gone with multitudes of members of all Christian communions to celebrate Easter and Christmas in Jerusalem; I have shared in high days in Westminster Abbey in London and in St. Peter's in Rome; I was one of the myriads of Christian Endeavors who once thronged Boston to the number of more than fifty thousand, and I was also with the multitudes of Sunday school workers in their great Washington Convention. I have also gone along the Pilgrim Road to Mecca with Moslems from half the world; I have moved amidst the thronging Hindu pilgrims at Benares and with the Japanese Shintoists at the Imperial Shrine of Ise. In many lands on many occasions, I have witnessed the worship of uncounted people of many faiths; so I need no books to tell me that the instinct of worship is one of the deepest and most ineradicable instincts of the human heart.

Long before the days of the singing Hebrews, who hymned immortal praise to Jehovah, the incense of worship was rising to many strange gods, all over the earth. As I have travelled in savage lands, and noted the heaps of carefully piled stones in the wilderness, the fluttering rags on sacred trees, and the many curious totems and images, it has been borne upon me that when man lifts his face in worship to any Higher Being, he is fulfilling the fundamental law of his nature. That he walks upright and yet bows low in adoration, are two of the first facts about man. The streams of worshippers on the way to Church upon any given Sunday—and it is a wonder that the tone of our statistics-mad moderns have estimated their aggregate length!—are but part of the oldest and longest procession of the ages. He who has set eternity in the heart of every mortal has thereby made himself homesick for God.

Why We Look Up.

Man is most man when he is lifting up his soul in adoration of the Most High. "Thou hast made us for Thyself, O Lord," cried St. Augustine, "and our hearts will never be at rest until they rest in Thee". To even the most thoughtless of us there come moments when we know ourselves to be but sojourners on earth; and that our real home is with Him who made us and planted in our deepest being desires and emotions which nothing on earth can satisfy. The riper we are in sainthood, the more constantly our hearts look up in worship of "Him, Whom having not seen, we love".

Our practical generation has made much of ministry, and of a religion of activity. Yet what is more practical than the experience of worship, not inconceivable that she will restore the muff to favor. The modern muff is small, not much larger than a double mitten, but the size is really immaterial.

All-Inclusive.

Springfield Republican—While all Gaul, according to Caesar, was divided into three parts, the Senate is now divided into Republicans, Democrats, coalition, Old Guard, insurgents, poletics, sons of the wild jackass and Young Turks.

Now You Know.

Cincinnati Enquirer—One reason why so many modern girls will grow up to be grass widows who splurge on alimony is because they refuse to let their mammas bring them up to be nice, old-fashioned wives men can live with long enough to celebrate golden weddings.

He Would Have Invested.

Kansas City Star—Two hundred fifty-five years ago yesterday Pere Marquette rowed up to the shore of Lake Michigan and landed on the spot which is now Chicago. And, we often wonder, had he possessed the gift of foresight, would he have landed?

Beware of Wild Jackasses, Cal!

Atchison Globe—Calvin Coolidge is being urged to run for United States senator. We doubt that he will consent to become a candidate. You see, he made a pretty good President; and retired with honors, and probably does not want to take a chance that might spoil that record. And it's so easy to make a jackass of one's self in the United States Senate.

which not only fulfills a deep need but also vitalizes the very springs of power? We are our truest selves when we are in most harmonious relationship with God.

This experience of worship somehow smooths out the wrinkles and the roughness of life. It is succor and shelter for the spirit. As the old hymn says:—

"From every stormy wind that blows,
From every swelling tide of woes,
There is a calm, a sure retreat;
'Tis found beneath the mercy-seat.

"There is a spot where spirits blend
Where friend holds fellowship with friend,
Though sundered far; by faith they meet
Around the common mercy-seat."

Bishop Manning's Blunder.

In worship of the one God and Saviour all Christians know themselves children of the same Father, members of the same Family, parts of the same Church. The modern mood, especially in religious education, is to stress the importance of worship in all Christian activity. Before the Church can be a working Church she must be a worshipping Church: her center and spring is the loving God whom she adores.

By no means have we heard the end of a recent incident in the movement for Christian unity, when Bishop Manning, of New York, forbade one of the churches of his diocese to hold a union celebration of the holy Communion, presided over by a Presbyterian clergyman. The whole Christian world was shocked by this outspoken declaration that all Christians may not meet on a common level as brothers in Christ. A similar incident came near to being the undoing of the Lausanne Conference. How many disciples of Jesus hope to stand together in heaven if they may not kneel together about the Lord's Table?

For if fellowship may not express itself in worship, how may it continue in work?

A Syrian Story of "The Pair"

In an old magazine article by an English minister, Rev. James Learmount, I found a strange and beautiful story of "The Pair". According to the tale, there once lived in the Syrian highlands a man who was nicknamed "The Pair".

He was a well-to-do landowner, had a family, a large number of servants, numerous friends, and yet he was scarcely ever seen in society. He always went about alone, and yet not alone. When he walked along the road, he always took the worst, the wet or rough path, so that the good path by his side remained free, as if for a companion whom he wished to honor. And yet no one was ever seen walking by his side. At home, at every meal, a special cover was laid in the place of honor; it consisted of white china and silver, which had always to be bright and clean. The large table was well filled, the father sat at the top, but the place on his right hand remained empty. And yet the Syrian leaned respectfully to that side as if a distinguished guest sat there. After dinner the food set before, the invisible guest was given to the poor.

It was on account of this companionship with an invisible being that the man was called "The Pair". If he was asked what it meant, he either made no reply, or said mysteriously, "But He is there". It was well known whom "He" meant—the Lord Jesus. The man took the bad or dirty path out of love and honor to Him; out of love and honor to Him a place was set at the table. When he was at work or taking his rest, he was always calm and cheerful, and behaved as if he were in company with another Person of distinction, whom no one ever saw.

Before he had attained a great age, the man fell mortally sick. Then a chair was placed by his bedside, and he put out his arm as if he were holding some one's hand, and carried on a low-toned conversation with the invisible Occupant of the chair. When he was dead, no one ventured to move the chair from the bedside. His grave in the churchyard was near a white marble monument representing the Good Shepherd. And as the good man's coffin sank into the earth it seemed, as the friends stood there, that a white light gleamed into the open grave from the figure of the Good Shepherd, shining brilliantly in the sun.

"Closer is He than breathing, Nearer than hands or feet."

The Mystic Fellowship.

That companionship portrayed in the Syrian tale represents the supreme reality of millions of human lives today, whose fellowship with Christ is more vital than association with their fellowmen. And even where this degree of mystic communion has not been attained, there is a sense of solidarity with fellow Christians in the great actuality of worship.

In the unity of common worship, individual disciples find themselves lifted to higher levels of fellowship and of adoration. The oneness of the friends of Christ—their comradeship with one another and with Him—manifests itself best in public worship in church on the Sabbath.

IN MEMORIAM.

In sad but loving remembrance of my dear mother, Minnie E. Windsor, who departed this life fourteen years ago today, December 23, 1929.

Fourteen years have passed, dear mother, Since you were called away. How well do I remember That sad and dreary day.

I have only your memory, dear mother To remember my whole life through, And you are the one I shall never forget.

For I am always thinking of you. The years may wipe out many things, But this they wipe out never; The memory of those happy days When you and I were together.

We may all have our sorrows, Some griefs quickly die away, But the parting of you, dear mother, Grieves my heart from day to day.

Keep her, Jesus, in Thy keeping, 'Till I reach the shining shore; Then, oh Master, let me have her, To love and cherish as before.

Another sad year nearly ended, Another sun has set; I still think and weep for you, dear mother, How can I ever forget.

I have only your memory, dear mother, To remember my whole life through. But the sweetness shall linger forever, I treasure the image of you.

Weep not for me, little daughter, dear, For I am only sleeping. Hear some day, some time you shall be, Live the life and follow me.

By her loving daughter, ELIZABETH WINDSOR.

the constitutional amendments adopted after the Civil War, which have attracted widespread attention. Due to his engaging personal qualities, his exceptional popularity with his colleagues, which is stressed in the recollections of Vice-President Marshall, is one of the factors contributing to his usefulness.

Glass' Opinions Valued.

Mr. Glass, like his colleague, was for years a member of the House, where he secured the passage of the bill leading up to the enactment of the Federal Reserve law, which gives him enduring fame. For that reason and from his familiarity with the operations of the Treasury Department, acquired while secretary, there is the utmost deference to his opinion on all major propositions relative to the financial structure of the government.

Being of the minority, he is, of course, not the chairman of the committee on banking and currency, but he is the one member of that committee who will be more influential than any other in considering the modification of the Federal Reserve act, about which much will probably be heard in this Congress. Serving with undiminished vigor, he displays in the Senate the same fine power as a debator which distinguished his career in the Virginia Legislature and our constitutional convention and in the House of Representatives. The Senate has not had a stronger debator in my time.

I am not one of those who think that Virginia leadership has disappeared. On the contrary, I am convinced that we have no less reason to be proud of our representation in the United States Senate at this time than when in the earlier days James Barbour and other Virginians served on the committee on foreign relations of which Senator Swanson is now such a conspicuous member, and William B. Giles and other Virginians dealt with the class of subjects which Senator Glass is an acknowledged master.—The Roanoke Times, Roanoke, Va.
