

WHETSEL CASE OFF
TILL OCTOBERJuror Upsets Court by Open
Remarks in Trial

A very unique twist in legal procedure came on Thursday last, when C. J. Gilliss, of Haymarket, one of the jurors, took issue with a witness relative to the accident in which Grant Whetsel and three other lads were killed at Bristow over a year ago.

The case was in its third day when certain remarks developed the fact Mr. Gilliss had been at the scene of the accident some time after it happened. Attorney Barbour immediately claimed a mistrial, and the case will go over until October 6.

James Gill, Eppie Woodyard and Caton Norman all plead guilty to violating the prohibition laws. Gill was fined five dollars and given six months for manufacture and possession, Woodyard fine fifty dollars and suspended sentence of thirty days for unlawful possession. Caton Norman plead guilty after his jury was unable to decide his case. He was given a fine of fifty dollars and put under bond for $1000 for a year and suspended jail sentence.

Judge McCarthy tried the cases of E. T. Grant, George Shoemaker and Andrew Cornwell on prohibition charges and found each not guilty.

The case against V. C. Donaldson for peddling without a license was dismissed.

A capias was issued for Ada Robinson.

DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE PERMITS
CANDIDACY OF MR. KEITHPrevious Action Reversed to Allow Last Minute Entry of Fairfax Candidate for CongressKEITH'S NAME TO APPEAR ON THE BALLOT

The Democratic Committee of the Eighth Congressional District at a meeting Wednesday at the office of Gardner L. Boothe, chairman of the committee, decided to permit Thos. R. Keith, of Fairfax, to have his name entered on the ticket in the race for Congress in his district in the Democratic primary to be held August 5 next.

This action was necessary on the part of the committee in view of its recent ruling that all persons seeking to enter the race must file notice by June 1.

The members of the committee reversed themselves in view of the fact that Mr. Keith had complied with the state primary law in filing within the 60-day period which was several days after the date set by the committee, it was announced. This, therefore, ends the matter as far as the committee is concerned.

The five candidates in the race are Judge Howard W. Smith, Alexandria; E. H. DeJarnette Jr., Orange; Crandal Mackey, Arlington County; Frank L. Ball, Arlington County and Thos. R. Keith, Fairfax County.

Attending the meeting Thursday were Gardner L. Boothe, Alexandria, chairman; Robert S. Cochran, The Plains; John S. Barbour, Fairfax; G. B. Wallace, Fredericksburg; W. L. Bragg, Arlington. The following letter from Judge Howard W. Smith, one of the candidates, was read to the committee:

June 6, 1930.

To the Democratic Committee of the Eighth Congressional District:
Gentlemen:

We publish elsewhere in this issue the account of the meeting of the Eighth Congressional District Committee held for the purpose of deciding whether Mr. Thomas R. Keith, of Fairfax, could be permitted to file his notice of candidacy after the time fixed by the resolution of the Committee.

Of the four candidates who had filed their notices in the proper time, Judge Howard W. Smith was the only one to come forward and deal with the situation in a graceful and unselfish manner.

In a letter to the Committee, urging that Mr. Keith be permitted to become a candidate, he placed loyalty and harmony in the Democratic Party before selfish interest as a candidate. Candidates in our primaries too often forget that they are representing a great party and indulge in methods that bring discord and disrepute to the Party.

Judge Smith will undoubtedly be the victor in the primary of August 5th, and it is encouraging to know that the Democratic Party of the Eighth District will have a leader at the helm of sufficient calibre to put the interest of the Party before personal ambition. His whole campaign so far has shown a calm demeanor and dignified bearing that is sure to commend itself to conservative voters.—The Fauquier Democrat.

WARNING OF HOT WEATHER EATING

Beware Summer Food Poisoning

Every housewife should read the story "Beware of Summer Food Poisoning," says Uncle Sam in the magazine of next Sunday's Star. It contains vital information given by food and health authorities for the safe preparation of food in Summer time. Prevention of food spoilage; how to judge the condition of canned goods; preparation of raw and cooked foods, are some of the items covered. And it includes a list of simple rules prepared by the Food and Drug Administration to be followed in Home Canning proceedings. Also of interest to the housewife is an article on Uncle Sam's Kitchen, where, through Government tests, many new and little known edibles from far corners of the earth are being made palatable. Other articles and stories in this issue will interest and entertain every member of the family.

Miss Violet Hart and Mrs. Bywaters attended the graduation exercises at Gallaudet College on Tuesday.

ALUMNI MEET
AT MANASSASLargest High School Association
in Northern Virginia
Holds Annual Feast

The ancient and honorable Alumni Association of Manassas High held a most enthusiastic and affectionate assembly last Saturday evening when they gathered for their annual banquet in the Parish Hall.

Miss Sara Donohoe, retiring president, kept excellent order among the children, both young and old, except for temporary outbreaks such as a class yell for '05 from Rev. Joseph F. Gulick and Mr. Wheatley Johnson.

The talks of the evening were built up around what would be done by each if he or she were to succeed Miss Donohoe. Miss Susie Gibson wanted International Fashions brought into the classroom. Mr. Alvin Compton urged teaching of Trades. Miss Lucretia Larkin wanted to form a Booster's Club. Miss Edith Haydon desired special instruction in History, developing the idea brought out by Miss Gibson. Miss Anna Bruce Whitmore argued for extensive commercial training. Mrs. Irene Haydon, Just More Work generally. Mr. Dwight Hopkins wanted Better Pay for Teachers. Last but not least, Miss Emily Johnson made a stately plea for Higher Standards in Instruction.

The Broilers were welcomed by a recent alumnae, Miss Virginia Corner. The response came from Mr. Beverly Weir-Mitchell of '30.

Under the soothing guidance of Big Rooster, Wheatley Johnson, the young fowls were coaxed into cackling a little. That is except Misses Jessie Raney, Eloise Compton, Thomasson, Spinks and Moser, who flew the coop and went to roost before their turns came to speak. The boys all stood by their guns nobly and gave their elders several laughs and also something to think about.

The real speech of the evening came from one of our leading boosters and big brothers, O. D. Waters. Mr. Waters took a serious vein and made a number of searching and grasping remarks that took his audience into many far reaches of human kind.

The hour of midnight now being at hand, our efficient acting principal, Miss Lulu Metz offered the toast to those who had gone before and the gathering formed a human chain and sang with feeling "Auld Land Syne."

Officers for the next year elected are as follows: President, Mrs. R. C. Haydon, V. P. Hawes Davies, Esq., Treasurer, Mrs. Dudley Martin and Secretary, Miss Gladys Ball.

Talent from the Temple School was present and delighted their hearers with several instrumental and vocal solos.

ADDRESS OF MAYOR DAVIS

From our Issue of May 29

Little attention has been paid to the financial activities of Virginia towns as a group, yet the incorporated towns of the State are the source of two million dollars in taxes annually derived from real estate.

The towns' contribution represents, roughly, one-twelfth of the total taxes on real estate collectible from cities, counties and towns combined.

There are 167 incorporated towns in Virginia, with an estimated population of 212,000 which, it is interesting to observe, is also about one-twelfth of the present population of the State.

Unlike the cities of Virginia, the towns constitute a part of the county financially as well as politically. Residents of such towns are required to pay taxes upon real estate and tangible property for general county purposes and more commonly for roads and schools. Besides these obligations the towns' charters as a rule grant the privilege of laying additional taxes by the towns' authorities for special town purposes.

The extent to which these special rates are substantial depends somewhat on the nature and scope of activities in which the town governments engage.

In addition to the 167 towns, there are 23 municipalities in Virginia that are classed as cities and in the past year these 23 cities collected approximately sixteen million dollars from owners of real estate exclusive of taxes on public service corporations.

Reduced to a per capita basis this amounted to $20.75. On the same basis, the 167 towns collected approximately two million or a per capita payment of $9.96. The rate of tax per $100 assessed value was $2.52 in the cities and $3.20 in the towns.

What is the explanation of the lower per capita assessment in the towns as compared with the cities and the higher rate on assessed value?

The answer lies primarily in the manner of the assessment of town and city property. City property is generally assessed at more nearly its true or market value than is the property in towns. In consequence of this, higher rates must be imposed upon property of equal worth in the towns than in the cities in order to secure like amounts of revenue.

The rates which are actually laid by the local authorities in both the towns and cities of the state do not furnish us with an index of the true rate borne by property.

As was just noted, property in different places is not assessed in a uniform manner. If a town "A" pays a rate of $2.50, and town "B" imposes a rate of $1.00, it appears that town "A" property is being subjected to a greater burden than town "B" property. But if it develops that town "A" is assessed at only 50 per cent of its market value while town "B" is assessed at three-fourths of its fair value, then the real burden is identical if the same sort of services and benefits supplied in town "A" are found also in town "B." And the true or real rate of taxation in both is $1.25.

For the purpose of casting light on the situation, suppose the real estate values in the towns were adjusted to an approximate market value on the basis of the ratios of true to assessed values obtaining in the respective counties, and a similar adjustment for the cities on the basis of ratios determined for each of the areas, the resulting computations will show that if property in the towns were assessed at its fair market value in all instances the average rate of taxation would have been reduced to 92 cents on the $100 valuation. The difference between this rate and the rate of $3.20 which was actually imposed represents the average discrepancy between assessed and market value of property. Moreover, it indicates the extent to which local assessing officers have in the past been remiss in their duties through failure to comply with the requirements of the statutes of Virginia requiring property to be assessed at its fair market value.

The true tax rate for the 167 towns, covers a wide range of levy, the smallest, that of Saltville, being 35 cents on the $100 market value of property, and the highest, that of Galax, being $1.25.

It might be interesting to know what the true rates are of some of the towns known to you and remember that these rates represent the basis of localities which include the county, district and town as a total rate to produce the present revenue at the higher rates.

Town	Per $100 true value
Remington	.44

Culpeper	1.08
Herndon	1.18
Orange	1.23
Manassas	1.24
Farmville	1.37
Warrenton	1.40

Even here the differences to be observed afford no index to the justness of the rates. Special study of the benefits secured from town taxes alone can reveal whether or not the levy is too low in the low rate towns or too high in the high rate towns. Obviously some towns have more to offer in the way of services and public conveniences than others, and where more is done for property holders, the greater will be the tax contribution asked of the property owners, other things being equal.

It behooves the local property holder to ask fairly whether the contribution made by him represents a payment for value received. No study of tax burdens can be complete, nay, even well begun unless it seeks to present a picture of what is returned by the governmental authorities in return for the moneys taken by it in the form of taxes.

Studies of local governmental services and costs are one of the great problems awaiting careful and exhaustive inquiry.

Total per capita tax for the Town of Manassas is $25.65, of which $13.87 goes for county and district levies and $11.88 for the corporation levies. Based on true or market value, town would be 50c and county and district 74c.

SERVING MANY BUSINESSES

Experience of large fleet owners reveals the unusual reliability and economy of the new Ford

A SIGNIFICANT TRIBUTE to the value of the new Ford is found in its increasing use by Federal, state and city governments and by large industrial companies which keep careful day-by-day cost records. In most instances, the Ford has been chosen only after exhaustive tests of every factor that contributes to good performance—speed, power, safety, comfort, low cost of operation and up-keep, reliability and long life.

Prominent among the companies using the Ford are the Associated Companies of the Bell System, Armour and Company, The Borden Company, Continental Baking Corporation, Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, General Electric Company, Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Kellogg Company, Knickerbocker Ice Company, Morton Salt Company, Pillsbury Flour Mills Company, The Procter and Gamble Company, and Swift & Company.

Each of these companies uses a large number of Ford cars and trucks. The Associated Companies of the Bell System use more than eight thousand.

Modern business moves at a fast pace and it needs the Ford. Daily, in countless ways and places, it helps to speed the production and delivery of the world's goods and extend the useful service of men and companies.

Constant, steady operation over many thousands of miles emphasizes the advantages of the sound design of the Ford car, its high quality of materials, and unusual accuracy in manufacturing. Beneath its graceful lines and beautiful colors there is a high degree of mechanical excellence.

An example of the value built into the Ford is the use of more than twenty ball and roller bearings. They are hidden within the car and you may never see them. Yet they play an important part in satisfactory, economical performance. Their function is similar to the jewels of a fine watch.

Throughout the Ford chassis, a ball or roller bearing is used at every place where it is needed to reduce friction and wear and give smooth, reliable mechanical operation.

At many points, as on the transmission counter-shaft, clutch release, fan and pump shaft, and front drive shaft, these ball and roller bearings are used where less costly types of bearings might be considered adequate.

Additional instances of the high quality built into the Ford are the extensive use of steel forgings, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, Rustless Steel, four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, torque-tube drive, three-quarter floating rear axle, and the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield.

The Ford policy has always been to use the best possible material for each part and then, through large production, give it to the public at low cost.

Liming for Vegetable Crops

An excellent bulletin has been gotten out by the Quality lime Institute, on "Liming for vegetable crops, a summary of which will be given."

Most vegetable crops do best on soils well stocked with lime. Some soils contain sufficient lime naturally to meet the needs of the truck crop and for normal soil functioning until such time as this lime is exhausted. Other soils contain insufficient lime, either naturally or as a result of depletion, and are in need of liming in order to bring them up to the level of meeting crop preference and proper soil performance.

Lime in the soil serves vegetable crops in a number of ways.

1. By providing food lime.

Vegetable crops, as a group, consume much lime as food. Their food needs are two to three times as great as that of cereals and grasses and are excelled in greediness for lime only by the legumes. An acre of onions we are told contains about 75 pounds of lime, while in an acre of cabbage are to be found about 110 pounds of lime. To the rich lime content of certain vegetables is due much to their nutritional value as human food.

Ford Offers New De Luxe Sedan

Ford De Luxe Sedan

THE De Luxe Sedan, recently added to the Ford line, is designed for those who desire distinctiveness and unusual comfort in an automobile. The interior is inviting and roomy with wide doors to both compartments. Absence of rear quarter windows gives the car a striking individuality and affords privacy to the occupants.

Interior trimmings and appointments are luxurious. Upholstery is either in brown mohair or a deep tan Bedford cord patterned after that used in high-priced cars.

Other refinements include arm rests for the rear seat, mahogany finished garnish mouldings on the windows and beneath the windshield, flexible robe rail and hardware in an attractive pattern.

The front seat is adjustable within a range of four inches to suit the convenience and comfort of the driver. It is moved quickly and easily by a small, inconspicuous handle in the front center of the seat just above the floor.

The De Luxe Sedan, like other Ford body types, can be obtained in any one of several color combinations.

CULPEPER PAPER FOR JUDGE SMITH

The Culpeper Star, of Thursday, June the 5th, says:

"The eleventh hour announcement of Thomas R. Keith, of Fairfax, in yesterday's daily papers, and he will have to hurry to legally qualify, of his intention to file as a Democratic candidate on a platform favoring a change in the national prohibition laws for nomination as representative in Congress from the Eighth District of Virginia, came as a surprise to his friends in this part of the district.

"Tom Keith is a prominent attorney and a splendid citizen. Nevertheless, in view of the fact that there are already two candidates in the race with similar views on the prohibition subject, and many of those who could probably favor his candidacy are now pledged to either Mackey or DeJarnette, the reason for his late announcement is somewhat of a puzzle.

"Mr. Keith has long been associated with the law firm of Moore, Barbour, Keith and McCandlish, of Washington city and Fairfax, and, as his former law partner, the Hon. R. Walton Moore, has for ten years represented the district in Congress, it seems that Mr. Keith's backers in Fairfax should be willing to agree that the honor of succeeding Mr. Moore in the House should now be accorded to another county.

"The Virginia Star has always been a strong supporter and admirer of our present Congressman, and, should he have consented to again be a candidate, we would still be among his enthusiastic supporters. Since, however, because of ill health and acting on the advice of his physician, he has decided to retire from public life, we have no hesitancy in stating that, in our opinion, Judge Howard W. Smith of Alexandria, is better fitted to serve the counties of the Eighth Congressional District following Congressman Moore's retirement than either of the estimable gentlemen aspiring for the office."

QUESTION BOX

Agricultural Problems
Of the Season

Questions that come to the county agent on various subjects.

What to do, when bugs attack the young cucumber and squash plants as soon as they come out of the ground. We have had good success with making a wide ring around the young plants with fine tobacco dust. This prevents the bugs from working down around the stem and attacking the underground portion of the plant. Tobacco is a repellent and not a medicine. After the plants come up large enough to spray, a mixture of Bordeaux and lead arsenate will control these insects. For full information as to sprays of all kinds write to your congressman or county agent for a copy of Farmer Bulletin 1371.

Cabbage Blackleg

It sounds like a joke to hear some call a disease of cabbage blackleg, when we only consider cattle subject to such a disease. To the truck grower who sees large numbers of his fine young cabbage plants wilt down and die it is no joke, no matter what the disease may be called. Black rot and blackleg are two serious diseases and there is no known remedy after the disease once gets started. Prevention is the best means of fighting the disease. Treating the seed before planting with mercuric chloride and planting in soil known not to be infected is the finest known method. After the disease is noticed in the field pull all the infected plants and burn them, simply throwing them on the ground will do no good. In black rot the heads may almost mature, then begin to decay and have a very foul odor. In blackleg the disease attacks the underground portion of the stem and produces a blackening and rotting of the stem causing the plant to wilt down and die.

A trucker near Camp Humphrey had a fine prospecting field of several acres of cabbage. Our attention was called to a number of good looking plants wilting down. They were examined and blackleg was found. The specimens were saved and are now in the agricultural museum at Fairfax for any one to see who is not familiar with this disease. That the disease was transmitted by the young plants is assured as there had been no cabbage grown upon this ground.

A lady who had been losing a large number of baby chicks asked for assistance. While they appeared droopy there was no sign of diarrhea or constipation. There were evidences of indigestion, and despite the fact that they were less than 4 weeks old there were positive signs of Coccidiosis. The addition of 30 per cent of dried buttermilk, and 25 pounds of yellow corn meal to the mash was advised. As a precaution the use of the Coccidiosis medicine was recommended. Within a few days the losses ceased and the chicks began to grow rapidly and have since done fine. There may be some criticism to this so called guess work in treatment, but that is just what many a doctor has to do when he cannot properly diagnose a case. Now we can not just tell to what medium to give the credit, but little do we care. When you are losing 15 to 20 chicks a day and they are worth 40 to 50 cents apiece, a very low price I am sure, such a little thing as credit is lost sight of these hard times. This same prescription has been given in over a dozen cases this spring and in every case has it given success. This is not a criticism of the different highly concentrate starting and growing mashes, but the weak chicks do not seem to thrive upon it, as do the large strong fluffy chicks that Mr. Piggott was telling us about at our last radio period.

One of our 4-H Club members has lost a number of fine baby chicks from head lice, and wanted to learn a remedy. It has been said that the training of the child should begin with the grandmother. The same thing might be said in raising chicks. We know that the raising of good big fluffy chicks, the kind that live and grow, really begins with the selection of good healthy breeding stock. You can not have these with lousy houses. The best way to cure lice on baby chicks is to delouse your hens before the breeding season begins. Sodium fluoride is the best dusting powder, although there are other excellent dusts. Buy only those made by well known manufacturers who have a reputation to sustain. A very simple way is to paint your roosts and the supports upon which they rest, with Nicotine sulphate commonly called Black leaf 46 just before the hens go to roost, or at least not earlier than sundown. The fumes arising from the Nicotine will treat the hens without the handling.

If you have only a few hens, the sodium fluoride will be the cheapest of learning.

We have had a number of requests from flock owners who are complaining of the falling off in egg production. This should not occur unless your hens are all going broody. One of our best poultry keepers, Mr. Miller, who is a great believer in winter egg production says there is no credit in getting a big lot of eggs in the spring and summer. Any old thing will lay eggs at that time. In a number of cases, investigation showed the trouble to be severe attacks of lice, more cases, it was due to mites hiding under the supports of the roosting poles, but in the majority of cases it was due to worms. With the exception of our professional poultry keepers who look after their fowls better, the majority of our flocks are more or less affected with worms either round or tape, perhaps a combination of both. If many of your hens have pale combs and are not doing well you had better look into the matter. First examine your hens for lice. Then examine the roost-pole and supports for mites. For lice and mites, a cheap method but efficient is to paint the poles with crank case oil several times a year. Painting the roosts with black leaf 40 will clean out the lice. For worms the old standby is 2 pounds of tobacco dust per 100 lbs. of mash fed dry for three weeks and follow with a dose of epsom salts. In small flocks there are several good worms tablets that will do excellent work, and it will pay for the handling. There are two bulletins that every flock owner should have, they are Farmers' Bulletin No. 1337 on Diseases of Poultry, and Farmers' Bulletin 801, Mites and Lice on Poultry. These can be had by applying to your Congressman, county agent, or by writing direct to the Office of Information, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

are very large the hand dusting will but not the best. Where the flocks are prohibitive in cost of handling alone. Well, this is enough lecturing we will get back to the chicks. If the mother hen is still lousy and she will be, because every time the chicks hover under her there is an exodus or migration from one to the other. This is a case where dusting will have to be practiced, both hen and chick. Don't dose the chick too heavy, you may kill it. Some people have good success greasing the heads of the chicks but the hen must be treated to prevent fresh attacks upon the chicks. If any of my hearers have better methods of treatment of chicks please let me know. This is an age

Soil Functioning Hinges on Lime.

To get the best results from your soil rests in part upon the lime content. Lying back of this are definite reasons.

1. Legume cropping calls for lime into legume growing for soil building.

The truck grower is being forced. The supply of animal manures is on the wane. Resort to legumes for substitute organic matter and bulk nitrogen throws the grower into the liming problem since most legumes require a near neutral soil for successful growth. Clovers, vetch, and soy beans are each responsive to liming on acid soils. Nodule organisms of legumes are known to be sharply dependent upon near neutral reaction or their growth and activity of nitrogen gathering.

We might add at this point that growing soy beans upon our acid soils will not add nitrogen to our fields, for unless the bacteria are present and nodules are added to the roots, the crop will take the nitrogen from the soil as will the wheat or other crops.

2. Nitrification and Decay aided by Lime.

The good office of lime does not stop with producing organic matter and nitrogen. It goes further. Lime aids in making the material effective usable. It encourages decay. With reference to organic matter the soil may be regarded as a great digestive tract, and lime is an aid to the digestive process. Without lime, the soil becomes a place for the preservation of organic matter.

3. Lime favors fertilizer efficiency. Lime promotes fertilizer efficiency. The Kentucky station has stressed the reinforcing value of lime in bringing out the full measure of effect from phosphorus and other fertilizer treatment on acid soils.

A Massachusetts circular states many acres of land are devoted to the growing of vegetables that are not yielding up to their capacity because of acid soils. The additional use of fertilizers will not make up for the lack of lime. Where lime is greatly needed the application of fertilizers is not as a rule economical. The acidity should be corrected first and then the fertilizer applied.

4. Good till of heavier soils aided by lime.

AGRICULTURE NEWS

On soils short of available lime, a vegetable crop may actually suffer for want of food lime. The more acid the soil the greater is the possibility that the crop will suffer this way.

2. By correcting Soil Acidity.

Most vegetable crops are exacting with respect to soil in reaction. A reaction approaching neutral usually suits best. Vegetables develop reaction meets this condition. They and function more freely when the will, however, grow outside their specific range, but this growth is not of the best.

Strawberries grow well on acid soils. However the Market Garden Field Station in Massachusetts reports that where unsatisfactory yields of strawberries were produced on soils that had become strongly acid, they have increased the yields by moderate applications of lime. At the Virginia truck experiment station at Norfolk strawberries planted on plots of varying degrees of acidity, gave failure on the slightly acid plots, while they grew best on plots which were medium acid. It might be well for our Fairfax Strawberry growers to look into this matter of acidity.

The potato plant will do best on a soil approaching neutral but potato growers usually can not maintain their soils at the reaction naturally preferred, because potato scab attacks the tubers and reduces the yield of marketable potatoes.

It is almost impossible to state specific soil reaction which will suit all potato growers over a wide territory. The variation is due to farm practices, different soils, and variety of potatoes.

On Long Island we are told potatoes follow potatoes year after year, with a cover crop of rye planted after each harvest. Two varieties are grown, "Green Mountain" and "Irish Cobblers," both of which are susceptible to the attacks of potato scab.

However when we consider potato growing in Pennsylvania and Western Maryland, conditions change. These growers usually plant their potatoes in a three year rotation, plowing down a legume cover crop just before planting the potatoes. The varieties belong to the "Rural" group for the most part, these being a variety not so susceptible to the attack of potato scab.

Lima beans are usually rated as a low lime requirement crop. However it does not necessarily follow that they must be planted in an acid soil to secure the best results. Blair of New Jersey states as follows: "Vegetable crops, especially, will respond to a judicious use of lime. This year (1929) for example lima beans, string beans, peppers, and sweet corn, failed on experimental test plots which had not been limed for a number of years, whereas on other plots, properly limed, these same crops gave good yields."

It is stated that the lime requirements are high for beet, onion, cucumber, egg plant, squash, pepper, celery, rhubarb, pea, pumpkin, asparagus, raish chard, cauliflower, and cabbage. The following have a medium lime requirement in the order given. Parsley, carrot, white bean, sweet corn, and tomato. The lima bean has a low lime requirement and watermelon the least requirement.

3. By protecting vegetables against toxic substances.

Many vegetables possess low resistance to toxic substances common to acid soils. While not every acid soil exerts toxicity and acid soils are not toxic in direct proportion to their reaction, yet toxicity is linked in a general way with acidity. Liming is a corrective for aluminum toxicity. One of our good authorities is responsible for the statement that toxicity is a more serious factor than acidity. I might add that we have fields in Fairfax county in which the toxic condition is so great that few crops can be profitably grown upon them.

Hartwell states phosphorus carrying fertilizers will give fair crop of vegetables on acid soils, but that additional yield will come from bringing the soil reaction around by liming.

4. By creating proper soil reaction for germination.

For certain seeds, a near-neutral soil reaction is necessary for good germination. Blair of New Jersey states that an acid soil is not ordinarily a favorable medium for the germination of seeds. He points out that on some strongly acid plots carrot and beet seeds germination was almost a complete failure whereas the same kind of seed germinated well on adjoining plots of the same soil that had been limed for four years previous. Moreover the only successful yields were on the limed plots, the growth on the unlimed plots being of little value.

5. By protecting against certain diseases.

Lime is a protective measure against certain truck crop diseases. Malnutrition and disease of truck crops are usually identified with acid conditions of the soil. Susceptibility of spinach and cabbage to disease is easily overcome by applications of lime, at the same time increasing the yield. Club root of cabbage is held well under control by liming of acid land where this disease is prone to flourish. Set onions according to Jones in Massachusetts, reflect the ill effects of soil acidity by the appearance of discolored leaf tips. In some cases the yellowing of the tips extends to the body of the leaf. The leaf may grow limp, and gradually curl downward and die. He says that the yellow tips are always suggestive of an acid soil and the soil test usually confirms it. With seed onions, malnutrition due to acidity manifests itself by less yellowing, but by an observable stunting of growth and lack of bushy appearance. Those vegetables which are protected from disease by lime, will have ample lime for that purpose if the soil reaction has been brought up to the point suitable for the plants best growth.

TWIN CITY GOSSIP (Occoquan and Woodbridge)

Tou Pee Davis, is nursing a bald spot, old and worn. Advice gladly welcomed. How to grow hair where the hair ought to be. Uncle Nick knows his tobacco. Just shipped a carload of the Maryland variety of smokes and chews to Baltimore last week. Say she has another carload in the making. Uncle Nick is a product of Maryland himself, naturally understands raising, handling and chewing his lady nicotine in a bombastic style that insures himself plenty of juice for social diversions. Bombardier Wells has drifted south in search of rest, his repair garage is now occupied by a colony of bats and a lone hoot owl. Jigs Embrey, of the State Highway Department, has polished one shoe. Had to stop to role a Ciggie. Must have forgotten about the other shoe. Col. Allen still shoving the broom, boo hooing and exhorting about hard times. When the girls come around the Colonel altho meticulous to the nth degree executes single handed metamorphosis. Roustabout Terrell, one of our genial and general merchants, has worn another hole in the third patch, center Department, knees of said pantaloons in perfect condition. Little Danny is quite quiet at this writing. All arrangements settled, waiting on boxing commission. Sulphurice Speakes, one of our nervous dairymen, is poorer but wiser, having lost his days supply of milk by betting on an uncertainty. Gallon Joe swallowed two quarts of sulphuric's lacteal fluid and cried lustily for more. Half Ton Petlett threw down nearly three quarts at one drinking. Petlett did 4* not bust. Jake Clarke, Uncle Sam's postmaster, is not the fastest man our good old Uncle employs, but he is a game sport, baseball fan and Ciggie addict, can walk a mile in two hours most any cool day. Dromedary Bryant is unable to get enough sleep until past meridian. His wife complains. Hippo Woodyard advises lambasting him with a well known household utensil. Old man Billy Lynn says, hard times has put him on half rations. Windy Brunt, our lovable bank cashier, is still talking fine finance. I understand that his good wife has advised him to join up with Andy and help to put the Madam Queen Beauty Shoppe stock over. We are all betting Windy can do it. Twiddle Dee Morgan, has a fine flock of chickens, and is now in market for a serviceable set of false teeth. Owners of false teeth give Morgan a change. A fit is a sale. T. N. T. Hammill, who was in an auto wreck near Camp Humphrey's a short while back, advises he has his annual bath. Alexandria Hospital did the honors thirty days early. The Katchjammer Bros., are still exceedingly busy trying to keep from finding work. They are experts in their peculiar line. Rainbow Burke, of Tyson Janney Inc. reports that his firm has made a large deal on automatic can openers. An absolute necessity in this age of picking up a can and running. Boys let me have the news.

A Washington's Birthday Tea Party Without Tax

By JOSEPHINE B. GIBSON
Director, Home Economics Dept.,
H. J. Heins Company

AMONG the many opportunities for delightful entertaining that come with the winter season, none is more appropriate than a tea to mark the birthday of George Washington.

This need not be an elaborate event, with many guests and service that imposes a heavy tax on one's time and strength. Indeed, just a group of friends gathered about a cheerful fire to chat and enjoy a bit of refreshment seems far more in keeping with the pioneer life of our patriot First President.

In the menu printed below you will find suggestions that all will enjoy. If even these prove slightly more elaborate than you had planned, the fruit sherbet may be omitted, or you may simply serve cherry preserve tarts in place of the sherbet and jelly roll.

Menu

Small open sandwiches
(Minced Ham and Chopped Stuffed Spanish Olives; Sliced Hard Cooked Eggs and Sweet Cherkines)

Cherry Sherbet
Individual Jelly Rolls
Lemon Slices with Whole Cloves Tea

Cherry Candies
Open Devilled Ham Sandwiches—Spread small rounds or oblongs of bread with devilled or minced ham, and decorate at tractively with Stuffed Spanish Olives.

Sliced Egg Sandwiches with Sweet Cherkines—Spread rounds of bread thinly with butter, then with Mayonnaise Salad Dressing. In the center of each place a slice of hard-cooked egg, and radiate tiny strips of gherkin from the egg to the edge of the sandwich.

Both of these sandwiches are easily prepared and most attractive. You will find too that these combinations will please almost every taste.

Cherry Sherbet—Crush 2 cups sour pitted cherries, and add to 2 cups sugar which have been boiled for five minutes with 1 1/2 cups water and then cooled. Add one teaspoon vanilla and freeze until mushy. Add 2 stiffly-beaten egg whites, and freeze until very stiff.

Individual Jelly Rolls—Beat 3 egg whites stiffly, and gradually fold in 1/2 cup sugar. Add 3 egg yolks beaten until thick and lemon colored, and 1/2 teaspoon vanilla. Then add 1/2 cup flour sifted with a few grains of salt. Spread in square or oblong pan about 1/4 inch thick. Bake in a hot oven for 10 minutes. Turn out on a damp cloth. Remove crusts, and spread quickly with Currant Jelly. Roll and cover with a damp cloth until cool. Cut into two inch pieces. The jelly roll may be frosted thinly, and decorated with candied cherries.

P. S. BUCKLEY.

Our entire community was saddened by the death of Powhatan Smith Buckley, one of its most respected and life-long citizens.

Though in ill health for the last two years, the end, apparently, was sudden. The last three days showing rapid decline until last Wednesday he quietly passed away.

He was a man of loving, quiet and noble character, held in high esteem by a wide circle of friends. He was born January 1, 1856, son of the late Albert Buckley and Britania Smith Buckley.

One sister, Mrs. Marcia Cockerill, who has resided with him since the death of her husband, is the only survivor of this large family.

He was ever mindful of this sister whom he commended to the care of his two daughters, requesting that they care for her with loving kindness.

In 1903 he was married to Miss Katherine Shackleford, who survives. Also two daughters, Gertrude and Ruth, and one Nephew, Johnson Hibbs, of Washington, D. C.

After the funeral at his home, conducted by Rev. V. H. Connell, assisted by Rev. C. F. Phillips, he was laid to rest in Sudley Cemetery. The pall bearers were: F. H. Sanders, J. W. Alvey, D. S. Collins, H. J. Matthew, C. L. Anderson and I. E. O'Meara.

Miss Maron Broadus Graduates

Miss Broadus was one of the four year graduates of the State Teachers' College at Fredericksburg, Va., on June 9, 1930.

She not only made a creditable report on her major subject, Latin, and other subjects but took an active part in the social life of the college being a reporter on the newspaper staff, the Bulletin, and a member of the Literary Society and other clubs.

Melt butter and blend thoroughly with flour. Add milk, salt, pepper, and onion juice. Stir until thick and creamy, add chicken or veal, and the Olives cut in slices. When boiling take from the fire and add the well beaten egg yolks. Serve on toast or in bread cases.
