BI-CENTENNIAL OFFICIAL HERE

Tells Enthusiastic Story of Progress.

Hon. John Gibbs of the National Bi-centennial Commission was the guest speaker at the regular meeting of the Kiwanis Club last week.

The club greatly enjoyed his expression of the work still being carried on by the hundreds of committees functioning under the commission.

"There is but country in the whole world," declared Mr. Gibbs, "where there have been no Washington celebrations. That country is so busy with its five-year plan, so busy tearing down its churches and so busy sending out communistic literature that there has been no time for a Washington celebration."

The speaker declared that one of the most impressive and permanent memorials had been dedicated this year at Johannesburg, in South Africa.

"The Commission has not cost the government a cent," he stated, "and not only that, but we hope to return a million and half above that which we were supposed to get but which could not be actually appropriated. And if the year had cost the government ten billion dollars and our efforts should bring to the country another Washington, it would be money well spent."

Mrs. C. R. C. Johnson, head of the Civilian Relief, was present and told the club of the serious labors ahead of her committee. In the matter of employment relief, she was promised constructive counsel and assistance.

Tomorrow evening, the club will leave town in a body at about 5:30 and go to Aden where the community league will serve supper.

CONGRESSMAN SMITH ADDRESSES MEETING

A large and enthusiastic crowd, composed of both men and women, assembled at the court house on Monday night, August 5, for the purpose of organizing a Young People's Democratic Club, and William Hill Brown, Jr., and Jas. J. Davies were elected temporary chairman and secretary, respectively.

Mr. John Galleher, of Leesburg, president of the Virginia State Club, explained the purpose of such organization in a clear and forceful manner. The maximum age is 45 years and the minimum 18 years, but all over 45 years may be enrolled as honorary members, with the right of designating a young Democrat to vote and act in his stead in the club.

After his address, a nominating committee, composed of Claude H. Smith, Chas. C. Lynn and Noel Lynn, Jr., was appointed and after due consideration, the following were recommended in their report as officers of the organization: W. H. Lynn, Occoquan; Mrs. Janie Abel, Dumfries; Bradford Lowe, Coles; Mrs. W. S. Brower, Gainesville; Lester Huff, Brentsville, and H. Thornton Davies, Jr., Manassas. The report was accompanied with a further recommendation that the vice-presidents select their own committeemen in their respective districts. Upon motion the report was unanimously accepted and adopted, and President Leachman took the chair.

The president then called upon our popular Representative, Hon. Howard W. Smith, who delivered an excellent and interesting talk, stressing especially the importance of suffrage to the young people and why they should avail themselves of this great privilege.

There being no further business, the meeting adjourned after enrolling a large number as members of the Prince William Club, among whom are the following:

U. D. C. MEET WITH MRS. WASHINGTON

The regular meeting of the U. D. C. will be held at the Grove, the home of Mrs. M. M. Washington, on Wednesday, Sept. 7, at 2:30 p.m., with Mrs. N. K. Middleton and Mrs. John Ellis as assistant hostesses. A large attendance is requested, as the annual election of officers for the coming year will be held at this time.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO SCHOOL PATRONS

School books may be bought at all of the schools in the county from September 8 to 18. Parents are requested to see that pupils take all usable old books to school the first day. The teachers will assist them in making such exchanges in old books as are reasonable and fair. Pupils will be given a list of the books required and prices of each, so that parents may know how much money to send for the books. The pupil or parent may return the list with the amount of money indicated and the teacher will deliver the books to the pupil and assist in seeing that they are properly labeled for identification. The school is acting in a distributing capacity only and it is necessary, therefore, that cash be paid before any books can be delivered.

After September 18, all unsold books will be returned to the School Board office at the Court House. Persons who desire to buy text books after that time will have to obtain them at the office.

This arrangement has been made for the convenience of the public and it is hoped that everyone will get the books while the teachers are handling them.

R. C. HAYDON,
Division Superintendent.

As announced last spring, the commercial department of Manassas high school will offer this year a one-year intensive course in short hand and typewriting which will complete the work in these subjects usually given in the regular two-year business course and will prepare as fully for stenographic office work. This intensive course will only be open to high school graduates or to adults of equivalent preparation.

Tuition fee for high school graduates, $3.50 a month. For special students, $5.00 a month.

R. C. HAYDON, Supt. of Schools.

Manassas high school office will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday, Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 3, 5 and 6, for parents and students wishing consultation in reference to courses of study.

CARY PELHAM BAILEY.

Great, great grandniece of the gallant Pelham, who unveiled a marker to her celebrated relative's memory in Culpeper last Friday. The young lady made quite a hit in the historic old town.

The Prince William County Democratic Executive Committee and the newly-organized Roosevelt-Garner-Smith Club met together this afternoon, from one in an adjourned meeting from last week and the other to elect officers.

The executive committee came into session first, primarily to fill vacancies on the committee. The new members are as follows: Coles district, L. B. Cornwell and A. F. Woodyard; Dumfries district, C. C. Cloe and Mrs. Janie Abel; Gainesville district, W. T. Sweeney and J. W. Alvey, and Occoquan district, L. B. Morgan and G. C. Russell.

The preamble upon which the Roosevelt-Garner-Smith Club was formed reads as follows:

"Whereas, the undersigned citizens and qualified voters of the county of Prince William, Va., feel that the unprecedented depression prevailing over this nation, can be remedied and improved by proper legislation, provide employment for the unemployed, finances to carry on legitimate business and the improvement of the welfare of the citizens; therefore, be it,

"Resolved, That a club be organized to be designated as the Roosevelt-Garner-Smith Club, with the avowed purpose of soliciting the aid and urging the voters of said county to support and advance the cause of the candidates above named for President and Vice-President of the United States and Representative of the Eighth Congressional Virginia District; be it further,

"Resolved, That the officers of the said club shall consist of a president, two vice-presidents, treasurer and secretary, and one additional vice-president for each voting precinct in said county."

Immediately after this reading, a lengthy petition was presented to show that there was popular sentiment in favor of such a club. Following the mandates of the resolution, officers were first elected. The honor of being president fell to Charles B. Allen of Gainesville district. Mrs. Ruth S. Hooff and Mrs. Egbert Thompson were elected vice-presidents, H. Thornton Davies, sr., secretary and Marion G. White treasurer. The district officers are as follows:

Three special resolutions were passed. They read as follows:

"Whereas the formation of Young Democratic Club of America has been perfected in this county; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the Democratic County Committee and the Roosevelt-Garner-Smith Club, now in joint session, do hereby endorse said movement and pledge our support and encouragement and invite their co-operation in our efforts, and that a copy of this be forwarded to said Young Democratic Club of America.

"Resolved, That in the event the officers elected of the Roosevelt-Garner-Smith Club decline to serve, that the respective district committee and district members that may be present be and they are empowered to fill any vacancies."

D. J. Arrington made the hearts of old timers feel glad when he harkened back to the days of the barbecue and flag raising. This aroused instant and hearty enthusiasm. The time and place were not fixed on today.

With the double organization this week and the unusually good attendance at each, it is safe to say that Prince William has gone into the forefront for Democratic organization in the district.

Circuit Court will be in special session tomorrow, the main business being the appointment of a member of the Board of Supervisors for Coles district.

Only Two Telephones?

In The U. S. 70,000 Communities Are Served By Nearly 20,000,000 Telephones

Once upon a time only two telephones serving the average city or town would have caused no surprise. Today in this modern age of efficiency and speed such a fact would be startling. Just think of the impatience people would display while waiting for one person to complete a conversation with "the other telephone" while time was slipping by.
Conditions such as this could hardly exist in America today, for no matter how small the community, there is telephone service to meet its requirements. More than 70,000 cities, towns and rural communities are now reached by the far-flung network of the Bell Telephone System. Connections can now be had with telephones serving more than forty countries on six continents.

SECRETS OF WAR
CHEMISTRY DISCLOSED

EXPLOSIVES, FERTILIZERS
AND OIL MADE FROM AIR, WATER AND COAL BY
HYDROGENATION

It is now revealed that in the discovery of "hydrogenation" Germany's ability to "carry on" may be explained. Hydrogenation provided for an unlimited supply of explosives and fertilizer. It even promised a solution of the oil problem.

STANDARD OIL
ACQUIRES
HYDROGENATION

The development of the process of hydrogenation (the catalytic hydrogenation of petroleum) to make motor oil is generally regarded as one of the greatest importance to the oil industry and to the world.
The American rights to the process of hydrogenation have been acquired by the Standard Oil Company (N.J.) from the I. G. Farbenindustrie of Germany. (Copyright 1932, Esso, Inc.)

HYDROFINED OIL
REPLACES
"STANDARD" MOTOR OIL

Essolube, the only hydrofined oil, is now available to every motorist at the price of ordinary motor oils.

This oil is a result of the great hydrogenation discovery. Hydrogenation of atmospheric nitrogen was the chemical secret that enabled Germany to produce unlimited quantities of explosives and thus to "carry on" years after the experts considered her continued struggle impossible.

Hydrofining, developed by the Standard Oil scientists, is an advanced process which makes the hydrogenation of motor oil commercially possible.

Hydrofining gives Essolube all the five essential qualities for complete lubrication.

Paraffinic oils have three of these essential qualities. Naphthenic (Asphaltic) oils have two of them. Essolube, by hydrofining, combines all five qualities. There has been no commercial method before hydrofining that could combine in one lubricant the good qualities of these two types of oil.

Essolube is so superior to all other oils that we are not only proud to name it after its companion product in quality, Esso, "more powerful than any gasoline," but we have replaced the widely known "Standard" Motor Oil with this new product.

Hydrofined Essolube sells at no extra cost.

It is on sale at all stations and dealers of the following companies: Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, Standard Oil Company of Pennsylvania, Standard Oil Company of Louisiana, Standard Oil Company, Incorporated in Kentucky, Colonial Beacon Oil Company, Inc.

Essolube

FREE BOOKLET—"Essolube, A Five-Star Motor Oil," gives you the story of the great hydrofining invention which makes Essolube possible. Ask for it at your "Standard" station.

TO DRS. BOSCH
AND BERGIUS

HYDROGENATION SCIENTISTS GET HIGHEST HONOR

Announcement of the division of the 1931 Nobel Prize for chemistry between Dr. Bosch and Dr. Bergius, both of Heidelberg, Germany, brings before the world the story of what is perhaps the most important single achievement of modern industrial chemistry—the fixation of hydrogen to reproduce by synthesis a variety of natural basic products of enormous commercial importance.
Although not collaborators, and only by chance both residents of this same ancient seat of European learning and romance, the activities of these two scientists followed converging lines almost from the beginning of their labors, and from the standpoint of chemical industry merged in the achievement of commercial hydrogenation of a new type.

New Type Radio O. K., Says Capper

Senator Arthur Capper believes that the development of the new air cell radio receiver offers the final solution to the farmer's radio problems.

"I find great interest among rural people in the new type air cell receiver for farm use," says the Senator. "It seems to offer the final solution to satisfactory reception on farms not served by power lines."

"This new type of air cell receiver seems to compare favorably with the latest developments in electric sets in both quality of reception and trouble-free service. I believe they will result in a rapid growth of the American radio audience and in a much wider use of radio among farmers."

The principal advantages of air cell receivers over previous types of battery sets, in addition to tone quality comparable to modern electric radio receivers, is the elimination of storage batteries and the expense and trouble of frequent recharging which they entailed.

Using a revolutionary type of "breathing battery" for "A" current, the new sets are said to give the rural dweller the same type of radio service previously enjoyed only by persons in cities where electric current is available.

Although developed a little more than a year ago, the new type sets for farm use are today being made by all leading radio manufacturers.

FOUR MINUTES OF FILM
MAKES ONE FULL DAY'S WORK

Every four minutes, as you watch a motion picture, you are witnessing an entire day's work by scores and sometimes hundreds of persons.

This fact was revealed when a new system of production schedules was inaugurated recently at the Paramount studios in Hollywood.

The new schedules estimate the number of minutes each day's work is to run on the screen.

On "The Strange Case of Clara Deane" schedule, for example, which is the feature picture at the Dixie theatre next Friday, September 9, the shortest day's work, insofar as screen running time is concerned, is estimated at one and one-half minutes. Some of the most dramatic scenes between Wynne Gibson and Pat O'Brien were made on this day.

The longest day's work approximates eight and one-half minutes of screen entertainment. These are the scenes with which Louis Gasnier and Max Marcin, the directors, established the film's atmosphere and locale. They were filmed with far greater ease and rapidity than the emotional and dramatic scenes.

Most motion pictures, averaging about 7,200 feet in length run on the screen for eighty minutes, or at the rate of ninety feet a minute. On the basis of a twenty-day production schedule, each day's work in the studio represents four minutes of entertainment on the screen.

PRESBYTERIAN SYNOD MEETS IN ALEXANDRIA

The Presbyterian Synod of Virginia will hold its 145th annual session at Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va., beginning Tuesday, September 6, at 8 p.m.

The opening sermon will be preached by the moderator of last year, Rev. Dr. Ernest Trice Thompson, professor of church history in Union Theological Seminary. Following the sermon the Communion will be celebrated, and then a new moderator will be elected, and the next morning the regular business of the Synod will be taken up.

This Synod is composed of eight Presbyteries, all in Virginia, except parts of two. Winchester Presbytery includes a part of northern West Virginia, and Potomac Presbytery includes the District of Columbia and a part of Maryland.

WESTERN AT DIXIE SATURDAY IS SUPER-THRILLER

"Mark of the Spur," which shows at the Dixie theatre next Saturday, is grand action entertainment!

Don't miss seeing this super-Western starring Bob Custer, with Lillian Rich, Lafe McKee, George Chesebro and a swell story that will make you sit up and take notice!

Bob Custer puts up some real fights and the riding is the brand that keeps Western fans growing in numbers! Not only the kids, but the grown-ups too, grew excited and felt a tendency to clap for the hero and hiss the villain—it's that exciting!

J. P. McGowan directed this thriller which Burton King supervised.

FIELD TRIALS

The Northern Virginia Amateur Field Trial Association will hold its eighth annual fall trial on their grounds lying between Herndon and Centreville starting Monday morning, October 10, and the running will be the reverse of heretofore by running the all-age stake on the first day, October 10, and derby stake on October 11.

This club has been very fortunate in securing the services of Mr. George M. Rogers of Mt. Holly, N. J., and Mr. Thomas P. Baldwin of Bethesda, Md., to occupy the official saddles.

According to the best information obtained this club will have more birds on its grounds than has ever been known before due to the excellent breeding season and just enough cover on the ground to make successful trials. Heretofore it has been the custom of most of the clubs this one included to run its derby stake first with the consequences that these young dogs would disturb the birds in the open and make them hard to find the next day when the all-age stake was run and as bird work is decidedly more essential in running in all-age stake than a derby it was decided to reverse the order of running.

Headquarters will be at the Herndon Hotel and good accommodations have been secured for housing dogs.

BIBLE THOUGHT AND PRAYER

If parents will have their children memorize the daily Bible selections, it will prove a permanent heritage to them in after years.

A SURE GUIDE—Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him, and he shall bring it to pass.

Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for him.—Psalm 35:5, 7.

SECOND MANASSAS

August 30 was the seventieth anniversary of the Second Battle of Manassas. In commemoration of that brilliant Confederate victory, we print the following:

"For there was much glory that day and many to share it."

Today, seventy years ago, August 30, 1862, there was won by the South on the "Plains of Manassas" one of the cleanest-cut victories of the entire conflict. Some historians go so far as to claim it was the first decisive battle of the war, but, as neither army was destroyed, these probably overstate the case.

Just a word as to the glorious victories for the arms of the South, which had been achieved the year previous. On July 21, 1861, the Confederates had routed the Federals at First Manassas and sent them into Washington, proving to Mr. Lincoln that the war had not been ended in thirty or sixty days as he had so contemptuously prophesied.

Jackson's Valley campaign in the spring of '62 was the greatest demonstration of military genius ever made in this or any other country.

The indomitable Stonewall defeated in detail three armies, each numerically superior to his own, the consolidation of any two of which would have ended his military career. The Seven Days' battles below Richmond, in June and July the same year, had in the main been victories for General Lee, and the Federals had been glad to fall back on their gunboats in James river. The objective of the Union forces had been the capture of Richmond, which failed. Each of these victories had strengthened the belief of the South that its armies were invincible.

No sooner had McClellan been recalled from below Richmond than the Washington government began the formation of a new force, to be known as the Army of Virginia, and put it under the command of Pope, who had been severely licked in the Valley by Jackson. General Lee's plan was to fall upon the army of Pope, who was much given to braggadocio, and had about 50,000 men, and crush him before McClellan could arrive by water from Fortress Monroe to relieve him.

With this purpose in mind, General Lee took his whole available command and began a northward march. Longstreet and Hood, with Stuart, reached Gordonsville Aug. 15. Jackson and Longstreet crossed the Rapidan on the 20th. Pope fell back, but had the good generalship to hold the fords in force. On Aug. 25, Jackson was detailed for an expedition which a Northern writer says "was daring to the verge of insanity, a piece of recklessness that nothing but absolute contempt for his adversary could justify."

For nearly two days Jackson was separated from the main army, and was practically surrounded by a force many times greater than his own. He was in more danger of capture than at any time during his career. But like the bullet that was to kill Washington, the net to bag Jackson had never been made.

The one grand coup necessary to relieve Jackson was for Lee and Longstreet to fight their way through Thoroughfare Gap. This was successfully accomplished on the morning of the 30th. On that day occurred the battle, which had been preceded by much greater or lesser fighting. The territory covered in the attacking maneuvers was very extended, and more men were successfully handled by the Southern officers than in any other battle of the war. The resulting victory was complete and clear cut.

"Both armies, in part, held the positions occupied by their adversaries the year previous. This was the capstone heeded to complete the monument of Confederate confidence. The Union people could pick their ground and the Southerners could best them at will."

"While the rout of the Union forces was as complete as in 1861, the retreat was a bit more orderly. Washington and adjacent territory was in turmoil, and for a second time Southern officers begged futilely to be allowed to pursue a fleeing army to its stronghold. This battle proved the Confederacy could organize an army superior to its adversaries, and that Southern officers could outgeneral the North."

Second Manassas was followed by more Southern victories. Chief among them, Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville, and not the slightest doubt existed at home as to the invincibility of the Southern soldier. There be those, and they are well informed, who claim that, fighting the world as it was, it was physically impossible for the Confederacy to win. These people say that Lee and Jackson themselves, engineers, officers and mathematically minded, must have known this. Psychology has played a great part in the history of nations, and another overwhelming victory after Chancellorsville might have brought results.

There are many who claim that the Confederacy fell with Jackson. Be that as it may, it is an uncontroverted fact that, so long as he lived, the Southern arms, in the East at least, were almost universally successful, and that after his fall, defeat was nearly continuous. Even at that, there were moments at Gettysburg when a Confederate victory could have been a matter of minutes had Jackson been there to avail the opportunity and fulfill his mission as Lee's right man.

John Esten Cooke, in "Hammer and Rapier," expresses the beautiful thought that when Jackson fell on that May night, the Southern banner was flying victoriously, and for all the great warrior knew, that flag was never furled.

A happy death that for a glorious chieftain!

From the Richmonder's standpoint, no mention of Second Manassas would be complete without reference to the "Boy Battery," which made its debut in this fight. First and last there were 200 and more Richmond youths in this command. No history of it has ever been "written," but a splendid one has been "published." Royal Figg, one of the young cannoners, a printers, set it up "out of his head," with the exception of the documents. Although it was the vogue of that day, it is to be doubted if there were a mustache in the entire command.

So far as known, William McK. Evans is the only survivor of this battery. He was 14 at the time of the battle. He is now commander of the Virginia division of United Confederate Veterans. Dr. William W. Parker, a beloved Richmond physician of the old school, was its commandant. He was one of the godliest and most beloved of men.

In May, 1893, a number of Richmonders went to New Orleans to accompany to this city the body of President Jefferson Davis, who had died there four years previously. The night before leaving the Crescent City a party was talking in the corridor of the St. Charles hotel. Among the number were General Stephen D. Lee, who as colonel commanded the Confederate artillery at Second Manassas and to whom the victory was in no small part due; Mayor J. Taylor Elyson of this city; David C. Richardson, then police justice, and later mayor of Richmond and judge of the hustings court; the writer and others.

General Lee had the floor: "I was afraid of that battery. Major Parker had treated the boys like Sunday-school scholars, rather than soldiers. Just before the command went in, I had them formed in line and spoke to them. I told them they were to stop for nothing, not even if a brother were hit."

"The battery started across the brow of the hill, and at that moment a fine young fellow got hit in the leg."

"That was me," said Davy Richardson, more emphatically than grammatically.

The general continued: "I was standing near Parker when one of the boys came running up. 'Major,' he panted, 'God has blessed us with a victory.' 'Never you mind about God, sir; get back to your gun. But I knew then the god of war had triumphed over the Sunday-school teacher and that all was well with that battery.'"

That splendid Southern song, "Stonewall Jackson's Way," deals in part with Second Manassas. The writer of this sketch, a mere boy at the time, remembers when the Jackson statue was unveiled in 1875, the entire concourse, estimated at 25,000 to 30,000, joined in singing this epic. To hear the "foot cavalry" who only a short dozen years before had followed the invincible Stonewall singing of their incomparable commander, seemed little less than marvelous. With what gusto the words poured forth. It was something to remember for a lifetime.

"Pope and his Yankees whipped before, 'Bay'net and grape,' hear Stonewall roar;

"Charge, Stuart, pay off Ashby's score,

In Stonewall Jackson's way."

—by Herbert T. Ezekiel, in Richmond News-Leader.

George and Martha

IT is nice to hear that the Father of Our Country and his wife still exercise such an influence that they are responsible for at least one bit of prosperity now that the going is so hard for many industries. The people who furnish costumes for fancy dress parties are finding it difficult to supply sufficient George and Martha costumes, to say nothing of the Colonial costumes, this bi-centennial year of George Washington's birth when so many fancy dress parties are being given commemorative of that event.

• Liked Good Food

George Washington not only enjoyed dancing and parties, but he was also fond of good food. He once wrote that of all the Barbados fruit he found pineapple the most pleasant. "The average pair is generally most admired," he said, "though none pleases me as much as does the pineapple." What would he think of the delicious pineapple which we get in such quantities from Hawaii today, especially if it was served in such a recipe as the following?

Tropical Fruit Dessert: Lay one chilled slice of Hawaiian pineapple from a No. 2½ can on each dessert plate. Put a slice or spoonful of guava jelly in the center of each. Place two small cream cheese balls rolled in crushed salted cashew nuts on each plate, one on each side of the slice of pineapple.

Facts and Figures on Your Telephone

BY EDWIN F. HILL

Edwin F. Hill, Wis., utilized a plane with which to survey the route. With this new method of survey they were able to do in a few days what would have required months to accomplish by older methods.

Locating cable routes was formerly an engineering job carried on with transit, rods and chain. In this instance, the pilot was furnished with a map on which was indicated the proposed route connecting certain cities. He loaded his aerial camera, warmed up his plane, took off, circled up to an altitude of about 18,000 feet, pointed his ship in the direction over which the cable was to be constructed, and began taking photographs of the area designated. The work was completed in four days of flying. After the pictures were taken, three complete sets of photographs totaling 648 exposures each were made, and from these prints the company's engineers were able to determine the most practical route to use for the proposed cable.

Cable is practically stormproof and is used largely for connecting local telephone lines in cities and towns. It is also used extensively for long distance lines. Today about 75 per cent of the cities of 50,000 population or over in the United States are connected by cable. About 94 per cent of all telephone wire in this country is now in cable.

DAIRY FACTS

Nearly 700 New York dairymen in 31 counties tested 8,500 cows by mail in April.

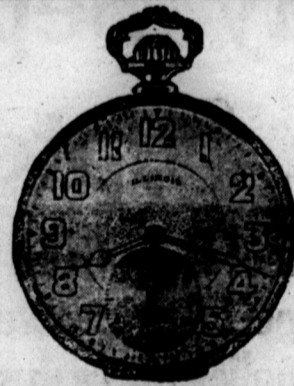

A reliable dairy thermometer is cheap insurance against losing a premium or having milk rejected.

For the third successive year, a cow owned by Hugh Andrew of Haddington, England, has given 2,000 gallons of milk.

Teaching the calf to drink takes time, milk and other feeds for the young calf are costly, and in most parts of the country the calf requires stable room.

High yield per cow is the basis for profitable milk production. Cows producing less than 200 pounds of butterfat fail to pay for the cost of feed and labor.

Keep the calf pens and bull pens darkened and apply fly spray twice a day.

Hints for Homemakers

By Jane Rogers

No better preparation can be found for the man who must work all day in a noisy office or other noisy surroundings, than a breakfast that provides a liberal ration of jam or marmalade. Science has discovered that sweet foods offset the nervous and physical fatigue caused by noise.

Reproductions of early American furniture which harmonize in period, form and color are becoming increasingly popular. Since a group may be acquired one piece at a time, the home-maker who cannot afford to furnish an entire room at once, can collect an ensemble without straining the budget.

(By H. H. ALP, Poultry Extension Specialist, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois—WNU Service)

Fertile eggs caused by keeping roosters in the flocks during the warm summer months have been mainly responsible for bad egg losses which in 1930 cost poultrymen of the state an estimated $5,000,000. In addition to eliminating roosters, if farm flock owners would adopt a few practical and simple practices, much of the poor quality of Illinois eggs could be overcome and market demands for eggs from this state improved.

Eggs should be gathered twice daily or, better still, three times daily in hot weather. Frequent gathering helps prevent damage by heat or cold; it saves cracking and breaking of eggs and it reduces the proportion of dirty eggs.

Before being cased, eggs should be cooled, because egg cases, pads and fillers hold in any heat that already is in the eggs. The cases of eggs should be held in a cool place, a temperature of 32 to 60 degrees being best. On most farms the cellar is the best place available. It is satisfactory for short storage periods if it is free from strong odors and not too damp.

Eggs will keep better and will be easier to sell if they are kept clean. Changing the floor, litter and nesting material before it is too badly soiled helps to keep eggs clean. Dropping boards or, better still, wire-covered, dropping boards also help. Crowded quarters are a common cause of dirty eggs. There should be 3½ to 4 square feet of floor space for each hen. A shortage of nests also causes broken and dirty eggs and may lead to the habits of egg eating and of laying eggs on the floor. There should be one nest for each five hens.

Feed Mixtures on Which Chickens Will Thrive

A good mash feed for chicks, when milk is the only drink, is mixed as follows: 150 pounds of ground yellow corn, 100 pounds of wheat bran, 100 pounds of oat flour, 75 pounds of wheat shorts or middlings and 50 pounds of high-grade meat scrap.

When the chicks do not have access to green leafy feed, five pounds of alfalfa leaf meal should be added to each 100 pounds of the mash, says the Dakota Farmer. If meat and bone scrap are not used, three pounds of bone meal should be included to each 100 pounds of mash. One pound of sifted table salt and one pint of high-grade cod-liver oil per 100 pounds of the mash should be mixed in. The cod-liver oil should be mixed with the bran first. Chick-size oyster shell, calcite or high-grade limestone should also be kept available.

Successful Pullet Raising

Eighty March pullets laid 1,150 eggs in 80 days from October 18 to November 16 for Anna Corrigan, Dakota county, Minnesota.

During that period she fed 300 pounds of commercial egg mash. Scratch feed was composed of two bushels barley and one and a quarter bushels wheat. With alfalfa leaves, oyster shells and three pints of cod-liver oil, feed cost $9.94 and income was $31.68, an average of 33 cents a dozen, or 3 cents above market price. This left a net return of $21.74 or 27 cents a pullet.—Capper's Farmer.

Mash and Milk

Mixing a part of the dry mash with milk until it is moistened to a crumbly state greatly increases the palatability of the poultry ration. Experiments at Ohio State university with chickens of the same breed kept under exactly the same conditions and fed the same rations, with the exception that a part of the ration was fed wet in one case and in the other case all of the ration was dry, showed an increase in production during the year of 24 eggs per bird.—Prairie Farmer.

Feather Picking

The taste of blood upon freshly-plucked fowls is probably what keeps fowls picking at each other after something has started them. Letting them get away from each other by turning the flock out of doors is the most certain method of stopping the practice. Tar may be daubed upon any bleeding point about the comb or head to discourage the attacks. Bleeding follows any injury that breaks the skin, it may be from accident or attacks.—Rural New Yorker.

Let Sun Shine In

On warm days the fronts of poultry houses should be thrown open so that the sunlight may get into the house and on the birds. It will help keep the flock strong and healthy in addition to keeping the house dry. Sunlight not only aids in improving the health of the flock, but also tends to increase laying and to improve the shell strength of eggs, states E. W. Henderson, Iowa State college. Soft-shelled eggs often result from insufficient sunlight.

THE Model "K" Kelvinator gives you a fresh start in economy. It will start paying for itself right from the beginning, as thousands of people have discovered.

In spite of its very low price, the Model "K" is of highest Kelvinator quality throughout. The cabinet has a one-piece porcelain lining with rounded corners. Its thick insulation is the best that a refrigeration experience of fifty-one years has been able to develop. It has eight freezing speeds, a porcelain baffle around the cooling unit, extra large ice cube capacity, the time-tested

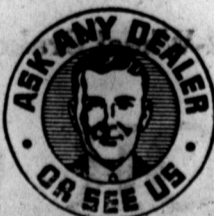

Kelvinator compressor and cooling unit.

All of these features mean high efficiency in clean, scientific food preservation and complete refrigeration service. Not only is the cost of operation less than that of obsolete or inferior refrigeration, but the savings you can make through quantity buying and the use of left-overs are surprisingly large.

Here is one case where luxury means economy. Come in and let us show you the Model "K" sizes and finishes. You'll be surprised at the prices—the lowest in Kelvinator history—and the easy ReDisCo terms.

Be sure to select an electric refrigerator large enough for your needs, and have it by a reliable, experienced company.

Telephones In Iceboxes Convenient On Hot Days

A cool call on a hot day. Charles W. Poole dials a telephone number from Kingdon and Company's cold storage plant at Washington. Note the quarters of beef hanging from the scale rack at his left.

Use of the telephone in cold storage vaults has long been recognized as necessary to their efficient operation. Large meat packing and provision companies now maintain complete telephone systems serving their plants.

A survey of meat packing and provision companies in one of the larger cities in the territory served by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Companies discloses that eighteen of these establishments have forty-six telephones in their cold storage vaults.

It is nothing out of the ordinary on a hot day with the thermometer hovering around 90-odd degrees in the shade on the outside, to find meat packing representatives bundled up in heavy overcoats covered by white ulsters for sanitary purposes, weighing quarters of meat, or checking in shipments by telephones from the cold storage vaults, giving their reports to the outer office as the tallies are made. The thermometer in these cold storage vaults is maintained steadily at about 33 degrees.

Another advantage of telephones in these meat packing and provision establishments is a communication system connecting the various departments which gives customers an opportunity to talk directly with individuals in the several branches of the organization.

NOKESVILLE

Folks, if you find anything in this letter that shouldn't be here or if you fail to find something that should be there, blame it on the heat.

Since we can have only one near-total eclipse of the sun over couple decades, it couldn't have happened along at a better time. No doubt it prevented many cases of sunstroke, brain fever, dead horses, etc. Indeed it doesn't take much of this blistering heat to drive some of our good people nutty when they are already worried sick wondering how they're going to put a President in the White House without pushing a beer wagon.

It's puzzling to know which one of our reputable presidential candidates will make the best whiskey magnate to control this vast government booze industry that's going to make everybody happy and put the good old U. S. A. back on the plane of prosperity with decency, sobriety and perfect law-enforcement.

I suppose I'm a little thick-headed, but I would still like for some of these here boys to explain to me how filling the bellies of the working people with beer and the pockets of half a dozen beer barons with gold is going to put any bread in the "tummies" of our starving women and children.

However, it seems that when our land flows with wine and gin again, the streams of milk and honey, which have been dry so long, will again burst forth in a mighty deluge and flood the country. We'll all get drunk and stay drunk and our troubles will be at an end. The automobile insurance companies are the only ones that will suffer, and the increased business for the undertakers will more than make up for that.

(No, I'm not drunk; it's just the heat).

Rev. and Mrs. Edgar Miller of Florida have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Miller of our town for several weeks. They left recently to spend two weeks in the mountains of North Carolina.

The Greenwich Rebels handed a combination Warrenton and Thoroughfare team a 10-5 trimming last week at Warrenton. The boys should be in fine fettle for the field day at Greenwich next Monday, Labor Day. The Rebels will tie up with New Baltimore in the morning and cross bats with Triangle in the evening. This is the third game with Triangle this season, each team having a victory to its credit. This play-off promises to be a real struggle. There will be other amusements and refreshments. Quit laboring long enough to enjoy Labor Day with us at Greenwich.

Don't forget the meeting of the Standard Community Association is the second Friday, Sept. 9.

Labor Day Outing May Prove To Be Last Call to Campers

By JOSEPHINE GIBSON
Director, Home Food Institute

LABOR DAY is an ideal time to enjoy a day in the open and for many it probably will mark the close of this year's camping. You may wish to gather a congenial group, go to the woods, build a campfire and cook a meal in the open. All who have cooked out-of-doors know how delicious steak and corn and beans can be when appetites have been sharpened by hours in the open. If it is not practical to attempt actual cooking, you can assemble a picnic lunch, drive out into the country and enjoy it in some particularly beautiful spot. Below is a time-honored menu for a camp supper—one that never fails to please; and also a menu for a picnic basket lunch.

A Campfire Supper

Hot Steak Sandwiches* or Bacon and Olives in Rolls*

(* Indicates that recipes are given below.)

Hot Steak Sandwiches with Chili Sauce—Take fresh buttered rolls, each wrapped in waxed paper, from home. Broil the steak, cut into strips, in a corn popper or on a long handled fork over the campfire. During the broiling, season well with salt, pepper and Worcestershire Sauce. Place the steak in the buttered rolls. Also place in each sandwich a slice of onion and one of Fresh Cucumber Pickle, and if desired, a slice of tomato.

Grilled Bacon and Olives in Rolls—Wrap thin slices of bacon around Stuffed Spanish Olives and put several of these rolls or "bobs," as campers call them, on a long fork or sharp stick, and broil until the bacon is sizzling and crisp. Then place in buttered rolls, and add Chili Sauce or Prepared Mustard.

VIRGINIA'S REFORESTATION PROGRAM

A Plan Designed to Relieve Unemployment and Bring the Waste Lands of Virginia into Profitable Use.

By WILLIAM HARRISON LAMB

Virginia has in contemplation at this time a comprehensive reforestation plan which promises much in the field of farm aid and tax relief. Thousands of acres of valuable land in the Old Dominion are rapidly becoming a no-man's land of unproductive waste, and thousands of farmers in destitute circumstances would welcome a plan whereby they might, under competent supervision, develop their cut-over and other unproductive acres into a means of compensation and financial returns.

FEDERAL CO-OPERATION A FAILURE

Such co-operation as has been available from the United States Forest Service, through the years, has proven unsatisfactory and inadequate, largely through the lack of economic background which characterizes Forest Service plans for State and private co-operation, and also for political reasons.

For years the Federal Department of Agriculture has maintained an agency for aiding the farmer in forestry projects, but this work, like too many Federal aid projects, apparently has existed primarily to provide a favored political personnel with remunerative jobs on the pay roll of Uncle Sam. Moreover, requirements laid down by the Forest Service as requisite to the practice of private forestry have been harsh and impractical and insisted upon without regard for local economic conditions.

As in the case of Prohibition, the invasion of the Federal Government into the field of personal activities has constituted an inadvisable concentration of governmental authority and has wrested from the States, particularly where large forest reserves are established, valuable prerogatives which tend to undermine the basic principles of local self-government.

There has been voiced no special objection through the years to the Forest Service coming to the rescue of the American farmer. The Federal agency, with millions of dollars available for research and experimentation, has had an open field, but has accomplished very little, but without going into a detailed analysis of the failures of Federal aid to private forest lands, it is the opinion of this writer, based upon a good opportunity for observation over a period of twenty years that the Federal Forestry Service has evinced far more interest in building up a forestry profession and in placing a favored personnel in remunerative employment, than it ever has in helping the tax-paying citizen to receive benefit from his waste lands. Incorporated Reforestation, as distinguished from a governmental agency, would aim to create employment, but it would be among the citizens of the State, not for a large group of technicians no longer able to keep a place for themselves on the Federal pay rolls. In fact, the proposal might mean as much to our citizens as the State Highway Department in its final ability to create prosperity among our distressed rural population.

A SELF-LIQUIDATING PROJECT

The successful practice of forestry must constitute a self-liquidating project. Unless it is economically advantageous to practice scientific forestry, it is impractical to develop these vast areas. Unless the world's requirements for forest products justifies expectancy of ultimate remuneration from the sale of lumber, there is no background for any kind of practical forestry. There are many aesthetic and broad reasons why land best adapted to forest growth should be maintained as forest, but unless these reasons include personal advantages to the private owner, his expenditure of time and money can hardly be expected. If, however, scientifically-managed forest lands can be made to pay the costs of such management, plus a reasonable return on the original investment, then forestry for the private land owner is a practical proposition.

LUMBER A LONG-TIME CROP

The farmer is taxed annually. His agricultural products, with the exception of those derived from the forest, are annual. It takes many years to grow timber. Yet he is taxed annually on his forest land. If it takes thirty years to grow a certain stand of timber, the owner has paid thirty annual taxes upon a single crop, so that it becomes a real consideration as to whether or not his government has not required a confiscatory levy upon him. A tax on corn, assessed every week during the growing season, would be an analogous case.

STATE LAND TAX REMOVED

One of the greatest measures of tax relief that has been enacted by any State was the removal of the State land tax in Virginia under the leadership of former Governor Harry Flood Byrd. The farmer recognized this as a real gesture of relief from his State. Unfortunately some county authorities did not fully sense, or perhaps deliberately resisted, the idea of lessening the tax load at that time, but a great state-wide benefit resulted which will increase as time goes on.

The removal of the State land tax constituted a great encouragement to the farmer and land owner in his hope that his waste lands could be made to yield some financial return. If the State were no longer to require an annual tax, he could consider plans for producing and harvesting a timber crop.

BYRD ROAD PLAN A BIG HELP

The second great encouragement that has come to advocates of practical development of waste land has come into the recently adopted program of State control of secondary highways, popularly known as the Byrd Road Plan. Under this plan it will be possible for local government to make a substantial reduction in the local land tax. Thus it is apparent why Virginia becomes a better fitted area than any other State at this time for development of waste lands through scientific forestry methods, and why such a project can become worthy of consideration by practical financiers as a self-liquidating project. The trend toward tax relief in Virginia is so manifest that it is logical for reforestation plans to mature here earlier than in other states needing these constructive measures.

FURTHER TAX ADJUSTMENT ADVISABLE

In perfecting reforestation plans in Virginia, further tax adjustments should be considered along lines tending to relieve the private land owner from annual assessment on those areas which he places under scientific forest management and at the same time compensate local government for loss of local taxes. That which is not capable of producing revenue, and the possession of which is not an asset, cannot always survive an annual tax levy, and must eventually come into the clutches of the tax-levying power. In such event it would be the function of an intelligent government to put its property in a productive condition, and since government is supposed to have been organized for the benefit of the people it governs, it would be more intelligent for it to take the initiative and help the private owner to make his land productive while it still belongs to him, thereby promoting the personal welfare of the citizen, and opening a fair and honest source of taxation for that government. When the land returns a profit to its owner, then let his government take its logical share, but to seize revenues not based upon earning capability, but as a penalty for possession, is to undermine the governmental foundation itself which rests upon the prosperity of its citizens.

INCORPORATED REFORESTATION

This brings us to the threshold of a new idea in reforestation. It is a plan born of necessity in a time of great economic distress and unemployment, but it is an idea which once translated into action will not only relieve unemployment and financial distress, but will become a permanent project, valuable in days of prosperity as in times of depression.

Practical reforestation of privately-owned lands is not a proper governmental function. It is a straight business proposition. Under competent management the project can be made self-liquidating. In times of economic prosperity it will become a highly profitable enterprise, and in times of great depression, as at present, it will provide the means of furnishing remuneration to hundreds of farmers who are now suffering from the general stagnation of business which has swept the nation and spread abroad.

Any practical business proposition, requiring a large investment and extending through a considerable period of time, is a corporation project. The rules and regulations required by statute for the conduct of corporations render incorporated management of such an undertaking as reforestation of privately-owned lands a practical substitute for administration by a commission, if required by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

It will require men of courage and intelligence to establish Incorporated Reforestation in Virginia. There will be new problems to solve and unforeseen difficulties to overcome. Technical information will be required. An effective system of forest management must be devised. Land will have to be classified according to best possibilities and forest species will have to be propagated that are best adapted to the purpose. Some areas will naturally restock with merchantable species, others will have to be planted. Forest tree seeds will have to be collected and nursery stock produced to meet requirements. Much local work can be done by the farmer under supervision of technicians on the staff of the Reforestation Corporation.

If the rulings of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation are found to permit, the administration of Virginia's Reforestation Program should be placed in the hands of the State Conservation Commission, which handles through Hon. Thomas L. Farrar, of Charlottesville, all matters of this kind affecting Virginia.

If the R. F. C. does not permit governmental agencies to handle reconstruction funds, the problem becomes one for a limited dividend corporation to tackle, and it is from this angle that this discussion is presented.

HOW THE PLAN WORKS

In rough outline Incorporated Reforestation works as follows:

1. A limited dividend corporation secures aid from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in Washington, under its rules recognizing reforestation as a "self-liquidating" project.
2. The Reforestation Corporation takes over from the owners and without cost as much land as is considered practicable with the funds available, for a period of years necessary to secure harvest of a merchantable forest crop.
3. The Corporation will hire the farmer or other local worker, needing employment badly and competent to do the work, to clean up the land and do what is found necessary to make the area productive.
4. The Corporation will have a technical staff capable of advising as to the most practical methods from the standpoint of the experienced lumberman and forestry expert, but the idea of governmental control through regulatory demands of federal experts will be avoided.

DAIRY FESTIVAL NOTES

During the past few weeks, the various working committees, having the direct responsibility of carrying out the work of the many departments of the festival, have been active and have unselfishly given their time and effort toward making possible the holding of a still greater festival than that staged last year. Committees are meeting daily and sparing no effort toward bringing up their part of the work, and are deserving of support locally as well as over the entire Piedmont area.

Much interest was shown at the meeting at the town hall last night, delegations attending from as far distant as Culpeper, and assurance was given that the counties would co-operate with the local people to the full extent.

John W. Brookfield, president of the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce, reported that if funds were available for the purpose that he hoped that they would be able to enter their group of five Bi-centennial floats in the parade. Other groups and individuals also stated ways in which they would co-operate.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC
IN HOPEWELL GAP

The Grace Chapel Sunday school picnic, an annual event, was held on Thursday, August 25, at the Boys' Camp in Hopewell Gap, or Pass, as it is now often called, a most picturesque and interesting place. Situation has much to do with enjoyment, and this picnic could not have been a greater success.

The work of establishing a permanent camping place at this spot has been done within little more than a year by the Rev. Mr. Carpenter, rector of St. Paul's church, Haymarket, assisted by various parishioners. And its extent is really wonderful. The main camp building is large and most commodious, with a shed annex for cooking and so forth. The grounds, though rough, are most attractive, abounding in shade and mossy rocks. Ferns are many and large. The swimming pool, formed by damming a dashing mountain stream, was fully enjoyed by the young people on this hot August day. The noon repast was abundant and fine. There were games afterwards, and there was also a most interesting demonstration of first aid, given by several Boy Scouts from Washington, who are camping in the Pass.

The old road through Hopewell Pass is most picturesque, and lying as it does between Waterfall and The Plains, two of our earliest settlements, is to a certain extent historic. It is not unlikely to have been traveled by George Washington and some of his distinguished contemporaries. The old houses, with their long flights of stone steps in front, perched on the hills that slope into the Pass, are most striking, and the road to the camp which turns off into thick woods, over a stream, now forms an attractive part of the picture. All agreed that we could not have found a better place for our picnic.
