"CONSERVATION OF VIRGINIA'S RESOURCES"

Address of Wilbur C. Hall, Chairman of the Virginia State Commission on Conservation and Development before the State Teachers College, at Harrisonburg, Va., November 13, 1935, at 11:00 o'clock A. M.

"President Duke, Members of the Faculty and Students of the Harrisonburg State Teachers College;

"I need not assure you of my deep and genuine appreciation of the invitation extended to me to speak to you on this occasion. In this excellent idea of a series of talks arranged by your President on the vital activities of your State government, I am glad to contribute something about the State Commission on Conservation and Developmentits aspirations and its accomplishments and its relation to our State government.

I consider this a most appropriate time to talk on such a subject, as November has been designated National Con-servation month. We have our "days" and our "weeks," but the importance of conservation to the nation and to all its citizens well merits a whole month for its emphasis. Indeed, it should be brought before the public year after year, for it is of paramount importance to our individual, State, and national well-being.

I am especially happy to address you on conservation because as prospective teachers, business women, and homemakers you will play no small part in the intelligent direction of the affairs of this and the next generation of our citizens. Your opportunity and your role in education may be peculiarly significant.

My address treats more or less of four aspects of conservation: The rise of civilization upon a foundation of natural resources, a brief summary of the growth of the conservation movement in this country, a review of Virginia's natural resources, and an outline of the work of the State Commission on Conservation and Development.

Natural resources have been the life-blood of all civilizations. The most primitive groups in the early stages of the human race lived close to Nature. Primitive peoples have done so through all time. Their meager existence depended upon the simple bounties of Nature-at times offered lavishly, at others almost withheld. Early man was literally a helpless infant on the lap of Nature.

The rudiments of civilization developed very slowly in that remote period known to anthropologists as the Old Stone Age. During the succeeding New Stone Age many of the nuclei of our modern institutions and many of the habits of our civilization were germinating. The dawn of civilization was coming. As the scroll of Time unfolded, Man subdued some of the wild beasts and learned to grow a few fruits, grains, and other foods. His life became a lightly loss that of a nomedic hunter and figherman and slightly less that of a nomadic hunter and fisherman and more agrarian. His wants were few, and Nature usually supplied them. Man was toiling slowly up the steep ladder of civilization. He was, however, still most dependent upon the natural resources at hand.

Then an epochal discover was made! Man somehow learned that the earth contained metals that he could use in place of some of his stone implements and utensils. Copper appears to have been the first mineral used, probably in place of some of his stone implements and utensils. Copper appears to have been the first mineral used; probably in Egypt between 5,000 and 4,000 B. C. Bronze implements and utensils were made about 3,500 B. C. The dawn of history was approaching. Iron was used about 1200 B. C. in southeastern Europe. Man in becoming its master soon also became its subject, helpless without it in one form or another. The great power source coal—"netrified form or another. The great power source, coal—"petrified sunshine"—was discovered in England in the 15th century.

As Man has walked across the stage of historic time, he has come to rely more and more upon natural resources as a catalyst to his creative intelligence and as the vehicle of his expression of the spirit of art within him. Our modern civilization would wither like choice flowers in a summer's drought if suddenly deprived of many of our familiar natural resources. Man can not live creatively upon the by the implements of the soil alone, supplemented only chase.

BAPTIST CHURCH SUFFERS BY FIRE

Four Companies Stiffle Stubborn Blaze.

Early last Sunday morning the Manassas Baptist Church was greatly damaged by fire. It has not been discovered just how the fire originated but it is believed that it was started from either a short circuit or a defect in the flue. Mr. Henry Peters made the discovery at 6:45.

The damages are estimated a $10,-000 which is entirely covered by insurance amounting to $500 on the church and $2,100 on the pipe organ which was recently a new addition to the church.

In response to call four fire engines including Warrenton, Herndon and Fairfax together with a large squad of firemen fought the terrific blaze for three hours, finally conquering the same after the inside of the building had been practically de-

It is the plans of the church trustees to have the building and contents entirely replaced.

The congregation is meeting in the Presbyterian Church until the new church is built.

The volunteer firemen have again illustrated the value of controlling a blaze in such a short space of time, a fire that could have done yet many more thousands of dollars damage.

This meeting is an outgrowth of the November meeting which was held at Nokesville and which was well attended by citizens of Brentsville district and the entire county. Hon. Harry P. Davis, of Manassas, will make the main address of the evening at which time he will explain the purpose of the Chamber of Commerce and its possibilities in Prince William County.

An invitation has also been extended to Hon. Melvin C. Hazen to attend this meeting. > Commenting on the larger work of the Red Cross, the chairman stated that the past year witnessed the greatest number of catastrophes over he country since Clara Barton founded the nation's disaster relief agency 54 years ago. No section of the country is immune from the destructive forces of nature and it is a comforting thought that if disaster should strike in our community, the American Red Cross stands ready to help us.

As an example of how Red Cross disaster relief operates, the chairman cited the case of the flood in the Finger Lake section of New York which occurred last July. The Red Cross sent in ninety workers who were busy for nearly three months helping families to get back on their feet. Nearly half a million dollars was spent on this operation. Similar help is available for us if calamity overtakes the community. We ought to count it a high privilege to hold membership in such a useful, fer the degrees of the Order Tuesday humanitarian, nation-wide organization.

DEER HUNTERS ENJOY TRIP

A group of prominent citizens of Manassas journeyed to the lands of the wild deer this week. They reported a good time with no casualties, either among themselves or the deer. It was rumored that a few blackbirds bit the dust, however, and their failure to bag a buck or two was not taken as an evidence of poor sportsmanship.

VIRGINIA WINS PARK CASE A. L. Mylander.

Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes heard a half hour argument on the Shenandoah National Park case now before the Supreme Court and then said, 'We do not desire to hear fur-

Under the impetus given by Senator Harry Flood Byrd when Governor of Virginia, the Shenandoah National Park project has been the object of great praise and severe criticism. William E. Carson carried the enterprise forward under great difficulties, among which were the known inefficiency of his day morning after a visit with M Dull's sister, Mrs. Frank Sigman. own State forestry department. A NOVEL OF THE OLD SOUTH

By H. J. Eckenrode

The story of Buck Musgrave, Southern gentleman, who devoted himself, before the Civil War, to the serious pursuits of life, particularly horse-racing, cock-fighting and hard drinking. The searing changes which the War brought to this son of the Old South, and his changed outlook in the Reconstruction period are presented with dramatic force.

The fills and the new earth for almost the whole distance are rapidly becoming in bad shape so that we are all shuddering in our slippers lest this be the beginning of troublesome days ahead.

We are still interested in reading the articles under the general heading "Who Remembers." They are both instructive and interesting. Let others follow. It will be but a short time until some one will interest the public by telling the younger generations that he remembers when the horse and buggy was the only mode of transportation.

Messrs. J. W. and Walter Polen of Washington are spending the week with relatives and friends in the neighborhood and incidentally making life miserable for any birds or rabbits who may be foolish enough to venture forth during these troublesome times.

We speak of familiar natural resources. Do we realize that willy-nilly we have been living for decades upon a dole? As most aptly stated by J. N. Darling, famous cartoonist and Chief of the U. S. Bureau of Biological Survey, "The dole came from a rich inheritance of natural resources which were present on the continent when the white man came :.. This dole originated as a gift of nature in the shape of public forests, rich mineral deposits, water, and an abundance of wild life seemingly inexhaustible in its profusion . . . Back of everything that we as a people have accomplished in the production of our broad national wealth has been the magnificent abundance of natural resources, free to the hand that would put forth the slight effort necessary to pluck them from the soil . . . Living off Nature's gifts has grown to be a national habit. It's nobody's fault but our own that we have so long resisted conservation that we must now go on short rations . . . Neither from Nature's storehouse nor from a Government treasury can more be taken out than is put in indefinitely, world without end, without coming to a point where there isn't any more. We aren't at that point yet, but we are on our way; and it's time to stop, look, and listen."

The germ of conservation is at least as old as civilization. Social groupings were first for the conserving of the family, then the tribe, and later the nation. The principles of conservation widely and appropriately applied would aid in the solution of the pressing problem of preserving civilization. Although the elements of conservation and development are innate in Man, paradoxically he is the most thoughtless and wilful destroyer of age-old resources. In many ways he lives for the present with little heed to the utter dependence of his children and his children's children upon products of the earth children upon products of the earth.

Darling reminds us that "Untold wealth in forests, minerals, soils, and wild-life resources has been extracted, fabricated and largely dissipated. You cannot rob the soil, denude the forests and remove mineral treasures and still have as much as you had to begin with. . . Even golf players learn to replace the divots torn up by ill-directed midirons, in order that the fairways may be fit for playing next week and next month. Civilization hasn't yet discovered that principle . .

"So much has been said about conservation, so many organizations exist with conservation as their objective, that it might be presumed by the average citizen . . . that the job was being well and properly taken care of." What is conservation? In this month of special heed to the need of conservation and the broadcasting of its principles, what is implied and what is needed? What is being done about it in Virginia?

Conservation has many definitions, mostly according to the viewpoint of the conservatist. It has been defined as "the efficient utilization of the natural products of the earth whereby the greatest good for the greatest number and for the longest time may be assured." Gifford Pinchot, formerly chief of the Forest Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture, defined it simply "as the wise use of our natural resources." Similar views are expressed in stating that "Conservation in its present day sense is not merely preservation or hoarding of natural or other resources, but means their careful, well considered use, with the avoidance of waste and prodigality and with a consideration of their exhaustibility, or the difficulties of their re-placement. In a word, true conservation implies abundant use of the inexhaustible in place of the exhaustible.

As teachers and prospective teachers in many fields, all dealing directly or indirectly with natural resources and the dependence of this and succeeding generations upon them, you will be interested in a brief review of the early history of the conservation movement in the United

Only within the past half century has it been realized that our natural resources are not inexhaustible. at present the belief is far from being universal. Some resources, like our magnificent primeval forests, were regarded as obstructions, to be removed as rapidly as thoroughly as possible. Waters in streams and underground have been looked upon with an difference that verged upon contempt. Soils were considered permanent and Midas-like in their richness. Most raw mineral resources, including coal, petroleum, and the metals, were little known to the public, and even by their ardent exploiters, were con-sidered illimitable. Few of our indispensable resources have been considered in their true light of priceless heritages from an aged earth to a youthful industrial civiliza-
