Safe Hunting—For Others

The season for good hunting is about to begin. Unless 1949 is an exception to previous years, the newspapers will report numerous instances, involving the wounding or killing of hunters by accident.

Nearly every community in the nation, including Manassas has, at one time or another, experienced the sense of futile grief that comes from a tragedy in the fields, which, in the absence of human error, could have been avoided. Despite the danger, human beings often take chances and, by so doing, take the life of somebody else.

We have seen several collections of safety rules, designed to warn hunters of danger. The eleven set out by the Conservation Department of the State of New York several years ago deserve wide circulation and study by all those in Prince William who plan to take to the fields and woods in search of game:

- (1) Never carry loaded guns in automobiles or other vehicles.
- (2) When afield, hunting birds, keep the head of your companion.
- (3) In loading, never point a gun in the direction of your companion.
- (4) In climbing over stone walls and fences, first break or unload your gun.
- (5) A bird quartering to the right in the vicinity of your hunting companion could never be fired on by a hunter on the extreme left and vice versa.
- (6) Never leave a loaded gun standing against a tree or lying on the ground where a dog may get at it.
- (7) Always keep your gun pointed away from your companion when you stop to talk.
- (8) In handing a gun to a person for inspection, be sure it is unloaded.
- (9) Never shoot in the direction of your companion because you consider yourself a good marksman. You will be taking a dangerous chance.
- (10) Carry a gun pointed down to the ground. If you shoot left-handed, walk at the extreme right of the party.
- (11) At all times, be careful.

World Organization Fad

A world organization of teachers is essential, according to Dr. William F. Russell, president of Teachers College, Columbia University, if education is to play a major part in maintaining peace. We fail to follow the logic of the assertion of the educator. Just why the teachers of the United States must be set up in a world organization in order to have a hand in maintaining peace escapes us.

The movement, no doubt, is in line with the trend of the day. Practically everybody wants to be organized and, once organized, wants to get into a bigger organization. Whether the bigger organization will be more effective than a number of smaller organizations is a matter of considerable doubt.

We do not think that an organization of teachers is necessary in order to promote the cultural cooperation which can be obtained on the higher level. Just now membership in such an organization will assist a teacher of Prince William, for example, in performing his, or her, work, is not clear to us. In fact, we doubt the efficacy of any organization to direct, or to improve, the work of teachers scattered throughout many nations.

Avoiding and Curing Colds

We would not discourage anybody who thinks he has discovered a cure for the common cold, but, so far as science is concerned, there is not yet any vaccine or serum that will prevent an individual from, at some time or other, "catching cold."

About the best defense for the individual, anxious to prevent colds, is to avoid those who have one, dress warmly and avoid becoming chilled or wet, eat in good appetite, get enough fresh air, exercise and rest.

Of course, the above rules constitute sound advice, whether one wants to dodge a cold or not. They represent common sense applied to the job of living well. The advice will tend to prevent one from getting sickness of any kind. About all that it will not help prevent is an accident of the unexpected visit of an unwelcome relative.

The average person is apt to overlook the possible serious consequences of the ordinary cold. If taken in hand, a slight cold may not be dangerous but, if neglected, can develop into a more serious malady. The experts suggest, if you get a cold:

- (1) Don't hesitate to take plenty of rest and, if at all possible, stay in bed.
- (2) Eat rather lightly and drink plenty of fluids.
- (3) Avoid mingling in crowds and, as nearly as possible, stay in an even temperature. By keeping away from others, you also protect them.
- (4) If the cold continues and you develop fever, call your doctor. There may be some other cause for the fever.

The Reader's Forum

Editor, Manassas Journal:

On October 10 a medical situation existed in Manassas which should interest all its thinking citizens. I refer to the fact that to my knowledge up until noon on Monday, there was not a single physician in town to take care of routine or emergency cases of illness which might arise.

I write for all who had the misfortune to be ill Monday morning and who fruitlessly made the rounds of doctors' offices, as I did, only to learn they were out of town attending a medical conference. Inquiries revealed that one would be out of town several days, that two would be absent until the 13th. Presumably this threw the entire medical load upon the fourth who arrived back in town about noon.

Making known this situation provide the cure for its recurrence. But this point aside, it serves to point up the larger problem of adequate medical facilities for Manassas and its county parishes.

That one waits in a doctor's office now from one to three hours indicates medical traffic in Manassas reached its peak load for proficiency. None of our physicians are young. All are overworked and tired. It seems high time that our doctors took in partners, or barring that procedure, that facilities be provided so younger doctors would consider it attractive to come.

In connection with the above, it is suggested that responsible authority take our Chimerical Memorial Clinic out of moth balls and make some demonstrably positive steps toward its early completion. —RESIDENT,

Farm Survey Cards Being Sent Out

About one farmer in twelve during the next few weeks will receive from his rural mail carrier a card on which he is requested to list the acreage of the various crops which he has harvested or expects to harvest this year.

This information is used by the Virginia and United States Departments of Agriculture to estimate the total acreage of each crop harvested in the State.

Similar information is also gathered from other States throughout the country so that trends in crop acreage in Virginia and in the United States can be studied.

The acreage report also provides the basis of estimating production. Mr. Frank Cox, County Agent, requests everyone in this County, who receives one of these cards to fill it out immediately and place it in his box to be picked up by his mail carrier.

Plan Better Breakfasts

Now that the children have started to school and need an especially good start for the day, breakfast is more important than ever. In a recent nationwide breakfast study, it was shown that only 1 per cent of American meal planners say they put any thought into planning breakfasts. This may be one of the factors which make breakfast the hit-and-miss affair it so frequently is.

Here are six easy steps to better breakfasts:

1. Plan the menu. Breakfast is as important to good nutrition as the other two meals of the day and should have the same careful planning. It should be a meal that is easily prepared and simply served in order to fit the time available. A good breakfast can be prepared in about the time it ordinarily takes to make a cup of good coffee.
2. Make breakfast adequate for all. You should take into account the number of calories and the amount of protein the meal should provide and the contribution it should make to the day's requirements of vitamins and minerals. Age, sex and activity of family members govern their day's total food requirements. The Recommended dietary allowances set up by the National Research Council are a goal toward which to aim.
3. Make the table attractive with fresh pretty cloth or mats and a centerpiece of fruit or flowers. Whimsical figurines or pieces of pottery help add social atmosphere to the table. You might let a bowl of fruit double for centerpiece and first course.
4. Serve food attractively. You can add interest to foods by serving them in different dishes once in a while. Don't always put the fruit juice in the same glass or the butter on the same plate. Though they may seem attractive at first, the best of things can become monotonously commonplace. Cereals deserve your prettiest dishes. Golden brown cereals look extra appealing in yellow, orange, green or blue dishes. Lighter cereals gain in eye appeal when eaten from bright blue, soft purple, yellow or gaily flowered bowls.

5. Consider appetite appeal. Variety is the spice of breakfasts as well as of life. In breakfasts variety is almost more necessary than in other menus. Sleepy morning appetites may have to be aroused.

Few breakfast foods are so economical or so easy to prepare as cereals. Try adding variety with them. You might serve bright red raspberries in a ring around white puffed rice. Or you could bring autumn colors to the table with orange apricot halves atop tawny cooked wheat cereal in sunny yellow bowls. Raisin oatmeal sprinkled with brown sugar and dotted with yellow butter can be served with a colorful pottery jug of whole milk.

6. Plan contrasts. Breakfast should include foods with a contrast in flavors—some acid and some sweet; a contrast in texture

—some soft and some crispy; a contrast in colors—some bright ones always; a contrast in temperatures—some hot and some cold foods. Breakfast should be a family meal. With very little effort, every day may be started with family companionship around the breakfast table. A good breakfast is a boon to a cheerful disposition and can go a long way toward a feeling of buoyant health.

Nokesville Pastor Builds Own Church

MINERVA, Ohio — Building churches and hard work are nothing new to the Rev. Lawrence L. Foster, formerly of Nokesville, Va. If you have been by the old grade school grounds on W. Line St., recently, you probably have seen a man working by himself laying concrete blocks in a freshly excavated basement. The affable robust gentleman mixing concrete and laying blocks is the Rev. Foster. The structure upon which the Rev. Foster is working will ultimately be the Minerva Assembly of God and is part of an apostle movement. The church is an affiliate of the Ohio District Council of the Assemblies of God.

From where I sit... by Joe Marshall

But Curly "Knows" What The Score Is!

Was over at Doc Sherman's drug store listening to the World Series on the radio. Curly Lawson wanders in and says: "How about a chocolate malted, Doc?" "Sorry, Curly," says Doc, "can't make you a malted for a while yet." "What's the idea?" Curly asks. "Well," says Doc, "most of the folks want to hear the game and the mixer makes too much noise." Curly thinks a moment and says, "Okay with me, Doc—I'll take a chocolate soda!"

This shows how tolerant folks can be. Doc showed his respect for how the majority felt; Curly was big enough not to insist on his malted even though he doesn't happen to be fond of baseball.

From where I sit, willingness to respect the other people's feelings is important in a Democracy. If we're tolerant of a person's like for baseball or a glass of temperate beer, we've come a long way on the right road... the road to a better America, that is!

LOUISA'S LETTER

Dear Louisa:

I have been married about a year and my husband has developed a habit which gives me a lot of trouble.

He wants to pass on everything I buy to wear. If I was an extremely tacky person, I could understand why he would feel that way but I worked in a dress shop before I was married and had the reputation of being rather a smart dresser. Nor do I spend an extravagant amount of money on clothes. I have an allowance and stay within it.

I have learned that to be well-dressed, economically, one has to plan for the whole season so I try to think out how many things I can wear with the same shoes, hat and bag.

Now, when my husband goes shopping with me he may see a red hat that he thinks is becoming and he gets peeved if I do not buy it. It never occurs to him that it doesn't go with my coat or accessories and that to wear it and look smart would mean extra purchases of things to go with it.

I hate to hurt his feelings but what shall I do? Go around with a red hat, orchid coat and green shoes or insist on buying a sensible outfit?

Puzzled.

Answer:

I feel sure that if you would explain matters to your husband, as you have to me, or even show this letter to him, he would stop trying to buy your clothes.

It is nice for our husbands to like the clothes we buy but as you say, assembling a nice outfit economically takes a lot of time and thought and very few men can give either.

So, unless a woman has hopeless taste, I think her husband

LOUISA

Dear Louisa:

Should leave the matter in her hands.

Should an older child be made to give up to a younger in everything?

My baby boy, who is two years old, is getting to be a little tyrant, but his grandparents think everyone should humor the baby.

Mother.

Answer: Certainly not! Of course there are times when he doesn't understand why he can't have everything he wants but you can make him understand by firmly refusing to let him dominate the household.

It is unfair to an older child to make him give in always to the younger and it sometimes causes the older child to resent his baby brother.

NEWS FROM HOLLYWOOD

Walt Disney is making his first all-action film, "Treasure Island," in England. He does not plan to desert his first love, cartoons, however, pointing out that he has three in production in Hollywood.

Olivia DeHavilland's performance in "The Heiress" is sure to put her in the Oscar race again this year. It's that good. Paramount has two more pictures for her, but she won't even read a script until the arrival of her baby, which is expected in October.

Barbara Scott, Olympic ice-skating champion, is enjoying her visit to Hollywood so much, she might end up by staying. Barbara, herself, is all excited over the prospect of a screen career, but she would like pictures with more emotion.

Red Skelton (modest as usual) recently declared that "anybody can be funny if the right props are around." That may or may not be so, Red.

We hear that Paulette Goddard's clothes for the film "Beloved" were designed by a South American and will cost around $50,000.

Johnny Weissmuller is back at Columbia studio, weighing just a fraction under 200 pounds, to begin work in a film known as "Jungle Jim," a sort of Tarzan-with-clothes-on role. Johnny lost his Tarzan role when he let himself get a paunchy 238 pounds.

Speaking of Tarzan reminds us that nearly half a hundred Tarzan movies have been made since Elmo Lincoln first thumped his barrel chest before the silent cameras in 1918 and almost half of them are still in circulation. From the motion picture series alone, Author Edgar Rice Burroughs has amassed a fortune of $2,000,000 and still collects a minimum of $175,000 for the right to use his character in each picture MGM makes.

Virginia Mayo has a new dress which cost her $1,000. Made of thousands of sequins, it glitters like pure gold.

Number nine is Paul Kelly's lucky number, he says. Kelly has nine letters in his name, was the birth of ten children, and was born on the ninth day of August, 1899.

Burl Ives' ambition is to be a serious actor. Heretofore, Ives' film appearances have been confined to roles as a singer of folk songs. Finally he got a serious role in "Sierra" but, before the film was finished, Universal - International decided he'd better sing a little also; the picture might sell better.

Barry Fitzgerald, who has been vacationing in Europe and particularly in Ireland, will be back in Hollywood about the middle of October.

Art Linkletter, radio's master quizmaster, is appearing in his first film role. He plays the part of a quizmaster, naturally, in "Champagne for Caesar," which lampoons giveaway programs.

GREENWICH

About 12 members from the Greenwich Presbyterian Church attended the Parish Council meeting on Saturday evening at the Cathedral Church. After a delicious supper, the meeting followed, with Mr. Donnell, student minister of Brentsville, leading the worship period. All four of the student ministers were present at this meeting. The Women of the Church met at home of Mrs. Amos Corder on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Dillon Wood, Jr., was home over the week-end.

The Will Allen family spent the weekend at their home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Lou Foster and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Spittle attended Richmond Fair on Friday and went on to Norfolk to visit relatives there.

Teachers and officers of the Presbyterian Sunday School were asked to think of three different ways that the Sunday School could be improved, and to discuss them on Monday evening at the monthly conference.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hoffman, Mrs. John House and Mrs. H. J. Mertz went to Richmond to the fair on Thursday.

Mrs. Faye Campbell and Miss Jean Campbell spent the weekend at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Squires.

YORKSHIRE

The Civic Group met with Mrs. Elizabeth O'Neill on Thursday evening. There were 17 present. Nice to see more of you attending the meetings. Thanks to Mrs. O'Neill for her hospitality. Mr. Ray Helms has invited us to meet with him next month.

There were 14 passengers on the Sunday School bus last Sunday. We hear more folks plan to ride to Sunday School next Sunday. That's the way to do. Do what we say we will do!

Mrs. Cooksey and Mrs. Powell made the inspection tour of the lawn and property in general on Monday of the folks who entered the improvements contest last spring. The winner will be announced at the next Civic Group meeting and the prize awarded.

Plans are under way for some kind of entertainment for the children on Halloween. Will inform you when we have definite information.

Mr. and Mrs. William Garrison were in Boonesville Saturday and Sunday to attend the funeral of Mr. Garrison's nephew, Mr. Roy Gibson who died last Wednesday in a hospital at Alexandria, after a two-day illness. MEMORY SELECTION: "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth; for I am God, and there is none else."—Isaiah 45:22.

Lesson Text: Isaiah 1:21-28; 19:19-25

The deplorable conditions which Isaiah warned against in his own country were not peculiar to his time nor to Judah. Greedy politicians, the corruption of the courts, the oppression of the poor by the lovers of money and luxury—all of this sounds very modern. However, in an oriental monarchy such things went without the restraints which a democracy provides. Isaiah loved Jerusalem, but even this devotion could not blind his eyes to the evils which disgraced her and her people.

In our references for this lesson the prophet Isaiah is attacking the evils which were eating away the strength of Judah. What were these evils? First, he denounced faithless, betrayal of trust. The rulers of the city were guilty of the sin of trading on the faith of the people who trusted them. They had turned government into a racket and were buying and selling the people who trusted them.

Then Isaiah denounced this political corruption as a betrayal of God. The rulers were not only betraying the people, they were breaking the laws of God and defying him. Instead of taking care of the helpless, they saw to it that they, themselves, were taken care of. He accused the younger rulers of rebellion and of consorting with evildoers. Bribes were accepted and rewards were sought.

Somehow the above evils have a familiar ring. While they were denounced centuries ago, these evils are prevalent in our modern society and, we might add, are just as distasteful to God as they were in the days of Isaiah.

If we seriously believe in the God of the Bible, we know that God's place in the life of the nations does not depend, in one very important sense, on the will of the people or the action of their rulers or the way they vote. God is the great Fact, the supreme Reality, and no matter what the people do, he is present and acting in the world, the ultimate Force in all its life.

One writer suggests that "on the subject of God's place in national life, American theory is clear. On some of our coins is the motto 'In God we trust.' At all stages of our history our leaders have professed faith in God as the basis of our hope for the continued existence and prosperity of our nation. The Houses of Congress have chaplains and their sessions are opened with prayer. When our Presidents are inaugurated, they take the oath of office with one hand on a copy of the Bible; and many other public officials take their oaths in the same way. As far as profession in word and form goes, there is no doubt at all that the United States of America recognizes its dependence on Almighty God and its responsibility to him.

"When, however, it comes to practice, we cannot be so certain. It is true that the Pilgrims and the Puritans laid the foundation of their commonwealths in a working faith in God. It is true that William Penn was a Christian who suffered for the sincerity of his Quaker faith. It is true that great numbers of the earlier immigrants came for reasons in which religion played a large part. But it is also true that the vast wealth of the new country gave to materialistic aims a great place in its life. Nor has this place diminished. It has rather increased until at the present time, when idealistic issues are raised in the discussion of political or economic policies, it is done quite often simply to give a fictitious dignity to measures which really are based on entirely materialistic considerations. We make a sharp distinction between the practical on the one hand and the religious and idealistic on the other, by which we can only mean that in the actual conduct of our personal affairs we put religion and idealism in the background. . . . "Right down the line, our life as a nation is being increasingly conducted without any real regard for the ideas which are proclaimed in all religions as basic and absolute. Now that we are one of the two nations upon which the fate of the world depends, this is an ominous thing. If Isaiah was right, if the Bible is in any sense at all the word of God, it is ominous for the future of the world, and of America as a part of the one world of which God is Creator and Ruler."
