ONE DOLLAR A YEAR

TRIBUTE TO COL. WEBSTER VETERANS HOLD SESSION

Memorial Tablet Dedicated Today on Battlefield by Blue and Gray.

An unusual celebration is in progress on the battlefield today. Veterans of the Union and Confederate armies are gathered in tribute to a Union soldier, Col. Fletcher Webster, son of the great American statesman, who fell in the second battle of Bull Run.

Members of the 12th Massachusetts, the Webster regiment, and the Fletcher Webster Post, Grand Army of the Republic, arrived this morning on a special train and were escorted to the courthouse, where a formal welcome was given on behalf of Virginia and the town.

The address of welcome was made by Col. Edmund Berkeley, member of the 8th Virginia regiment and ranking Confederate veteran of the county. Colonel Berkeley's address, which is to be found in another column, was made at the instigation of Governor Stuart, who was unable to be present.

Rev. T. D. D. Clark read a poem, "The Cool of the Day," which was written for the occasion, and which will be found elsewhere in this issue.

Singing under the direction of Dr. Herwin U. Koop, the Manassas school children also shared in the welcome.

Following the benediction, the procession started for the battlefield, led by Colonel Berkeley and Lieut. Col. Benjamin F. Cook, historian of the Webster Regiment.

ARRIVED at the battlefield the dedication of a memorial to Colonel Webster took place. The memorial is erected on the spot where he fell. An acre of land, including this spot, was recently purchased from the owners of Hazel Plain farm by the 12th Massachusetts Regimental Association and the Fletcher Webster Grand Army Post. The marker, an appropriately lettered bronze tablet and a four-thousand-pound granite boulder from the Webster farm at Marshfield, Mass., bears the following inscription:

In memory of
Colonel Fletcher Webster
Who here fell August 30, 1862
While gallantly leading his regiment
The 12th Mass. volunteers
This memorial was dedicated Oct. 22, 1914
By survivors of his regiment and Fletcher Webster Post, G. A. R. of Brockton, Mass.
He gave his life for
The principles laid down by his father
Daniel Webster
Liberty and Union
Now and forever, one and inseparable
This boulder was taken from
The Webster place, Marshfield, Mass.

Mr. John E. Gilman, of Boston, a private in the 12th Massachusetts and at one time president of the G. A. R., was in charge of the exercises. The dedicatory address was made by Col. Samuel Appleton, of St. Paul, Minn., member of the 12th Massachusetts and grandson of Daniel Webster. Luncheon was served in the pavilion at Groveton by members of the Groveton Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy. The day was completed by a tour of the battlefield, where the Henry farm and other places of interest were visited.

A fuller account of the exercises on the battlefield will be given in next week's JOURNAL.

Rev. John W. Hundley, brother-in-law of Dr. H. E. Quarles, died Tuesday at his home at Washington. He was seventy-three years old. Dr. Quarles, of Manassas Wednesday to attend the funeral which was held at 10:30 a. m. at the church at Louisa.

Annual Reunion at Newport News—Miss Strother Sponsor Miss Hempstone Maid.

The twenty-seventh annual reunion of the Grand Camp of Virginia, Confederate Veterans, and the United Sons of Confederate Veterans were in session this week at Newport News. The delegates, numbering several hundred veterans, sons of veterans, sponsors, maids and friends, took possession of the city.

The principal feature of the program Tuesday was the joint meeting of the two organizations when the sponsors and maids were introduced to the public. The sponsor-in-chief was Miss Gertrude Gilliam, of Norfolk; maids of honor-in-chief, Miss Ida G. Burruss, Fredericksburg, Miss Alice Kent, Petersburg, Miss Ella S. Thomas, Roanoke, and Miss Anne Richardson, Farmville; matron of honor, Mrs. Garland Powell Peck, Norfolk; and chaperons, Mrs. W. E. Barrett, Mrs. J. F. Caffee, Mrs. Clarence W. Robertson and Mrs. Charles E. Parker, all of Newport News.

The sponsor and maid for the eighth congressional district were Miss Martha M. Strother, of Markham, and Miss Ida Lee Hempstone, of Leesburg.

Officers of the Grand Camp were elected as follows:

Commander, Mayor Samuel Griffin, of Bedford City; first lieutenant grand commander, Col. Thomas S. Tate, of Draper; second lieutenant grand commander, Col. Thomas G. Elam, of Roanoke; third lieutenant grand commander, Mayor George W. Nelson, of Richmond; inspector general, Tipton D. M. Jennings, of Lynchburg; quartermaster general, Col. David A. Brown, of Richmond; first grand chaplain, Rev. James C. Reed, D. D., of Hampton; second grand chaplain, Bishop George W. Peterken, of Parkersburg, W. Va.; and surgeon general, Dr. John Ferrell, of Lynchburg.

The veterans of the Virginia division elected the following officers:

Major general, Col. J. Thompson Brown, of Richmond; adjutant general and chief of staff, Boyd Smith, of Mineral; brigadiers: first brigade, Gen. Freeman, of Richmond; second brigade, Gen. M. B. Jewett, Ivanhoe; third brigade, Gen. E. S. Parke, of Luray; fourth brigade, Gen. Bumgartner, of Staunton; judge advocate general, Col. J. N. Stubbs, of Gloucester.

ITEMS FROM WATERFALL

Miss Jenn Howdershell, who spent the past week with her sister, Mrs. R. E. Smith, has returned to her home in Washington.

Messrs. Edwin and Daniel Garrett, of Fairfax, were week-end guests at "Bell Haven."

Miss Ellen Robertson, of Manassas, is visiting at the home of Mrs. J. P. Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Stafford Keys and children, of Herndon, spent several days of last week with Mrs. Will Downs, at Woolsey.

Mr. Arthur Guilford, of Washington, is a guest this week at "Oakshade."

Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Smith are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a fine son.

Mrs. J. T. Simonds, of Washington, was a week-end guest of relatives in this neighborhood.

Electric Lights Brighten Municipal Thoroughfares, Attracting County-wide Attention—103 Street Lights—Stores and Residences Being Connected.

BY B. CONWAY TAYLOR

Manassas at last is independent of the moon. For half a century, since the beginning, when Manassas held recognition as a community by virtue of the few houses scattered along the railroad track and by the two great battles fought six miles away, her residents governed their goings about at night by the light of heaven. Just so long as that condition existed, the town was "country." Now she is emancipated, has put on the "grown-up" clothing of a municipality and can hold up her head with the proudest of the Old Dominion's flourishing small towns.

It took all of last week for the residents of Prince William's county seat to get used to the brand new municipal electric lighting system, and even now some of the strangeness still remains. In that week every progressive man, woman and youth in the community has been wondering why Manassas waited so long. And the town is filled with a new pride in the accomplishment of her dwellers. The whole county is reflecting this pride; from every section, from the border line of Loudoun on the north to the Potomac on the south, folks are talking about Manassas—about the electric lights and the sewer system and the water works. More country people came to town last week than usual, and whatever the ostensible excuses for their visits, their real purpose was to inspect the new municipal utilities and to feel that same kind of satisfaction that a parent feels when his young hopeful first puts on long trousers, and "makes good" as a budding man.

Everybody Sees Illumination.

Thursday evening of last week the electric lights were turned on for their initial test. Hardly a man, woman or child in town, unless ill, remained indoors when the dark shadows of tree-lined streets were made bright at night for the first time in history. Friday night, and every succeeding night of the week, the lights were on until midnight.

Monday will see the end of the test being conducted by Sterrett & Fleming, the contractors. And if the Mayor and Town Council are satisfied that all conditions have been complied with, on that night the lighting system will be taken over by the municipal authorities and the current will not be switched off until daylight. That will be the rule of the future—the street lights will blaze from sundown until sunrise. The days of Manassas' "Sleepy-Hollow" past are gone.

There are 103 street lights in the limits of the corporation, and these extend over a wide area, for Manassas covers a territory that would take care of the houses of many a small city. These lights are literally the "last word" in efficiency. Primarily, they are connected by what is conceded as one of the best lines of poles and wires carrying current through any of Virginia's smaller towns. Then, too, every light, other than those of the "White Way," are equipped with reflectors, and the incandescent bulb of each is protected by means of a metal cage. These lights are approximately 70 candle power.

Twenty-five lights are in the "White Way" system, which will illuminate not only the centre of the town, but will extend north on Main street beyond Partner avenue. When finally turned over to the municipality, each of these light-poles will carry a 14-inch frosted globe, giving about 100-candle power. The lights will be of the latest nitrogen variety, adopted for street lighting in the most modern cities of this country and Europe.

APPLICATIONS FROM 60.

So far about 60 houses and stores in Manassas have contracted to put in lights, and the town authorities are daily expecting a number of additional applications for current. At the minimum rate of 10 cents a kilowatt, the income to the town from these 60 consumers alone should very nearly pay for maintaining the lighting system, according to the estimate of Dr. C. R. C. Johnson, of the Council.

As appropriate to the visit of Massachusetts veterans today, we reprint the Jubilee editorial, written by the late lamented editor of THE JOURNAL, W. H. W. Moran, and published in our Jubilee edition of May 19, 1911. Mr. Moran was the son of a Confederate and knew something of the horrors of war. The article is worthy of the man, who was for a quarter of a century the dean of the editorial profession in Northern Virginia and reveals him in his happiest mood as an ardent advocate of peace.

THE COMING JUBILEE.

BY W. H. W. MORAN.

Fifty years ago, on the twenty-first of July next, boomed the murderous cannon over the fields of Manassas. Like the shot that was fired at Bunker Hill, the storm of deadly guns that followed was heard around the world. It is a part of the history of man.

Manassas comes now in the year of jubilee and bids a roll call of peace among countrymen. Only a few remain of either Blue or Gray. They are not foes now. The ploughshare and the pruning hook; the shop and the counting room are theirs. Soon they must all "cross over the river," and the last memory be told forever. In the spirit of the chieftain, who sleeps at Lexington, let us dwell together in unity. In the voice of him, who whispered a benediction at McGreggor, let there be peace: Lee and Grant. Duty and peace.

On the twenty-first of July next, the Jubilee of peace, Manassas will unveil to the world a new flag, woven on the loom of the Northland from the cotton of the Southland, and the simple story it will tell, THEY ARE BROTHERS NOW, will be to all mankind a new inscription to peace.

Then may all the world go on sowing and reaping, building, healing and learning. School-houses are greater than arsenals; laboratories greater than battlefields and reason the supreme conqueror among nations and among men.

IMPROVEMENT AT WELL.

Last week the pipe of the pump in the municipal well was lengthened 23 feet to guard against any unforeseen fall in the water level. The well is capable of a supply of 50 gallons a minute, or 100,000 gallons a day. Conserving this supply, keeping the storage tank and standpipe filled by pumping at night, when the consumption of water is negligible, this should insure an ample quantity of water for all practical purposes for at least the next 16 months. Then, if the consumption goes beyond that point, which will mean that the town will have made a financial success of its water system, there will be funds to bore another well, if that be needed. The cost of water is the exceedingly low one of $6 a year, or 25 cents for 1,000 gallons. Bacteriological tests show this water to be pure, soft and wholesome.

By May 1 of next year the town will begin to see the incalculable advantage of its sewerage system, which is in reality the most to be prized of all the public utilities. An ordinance, already adopted, specifies that on that date every dwelling must either be connected with the system or must have a private sanitary system approved by the State Board of Health.

Prince William to Witness Biggest Agricultural Event in History of County.

Preparations are still being furthered for the school exhibit, agricultural, horticultural and live stock shows to be held in Manassas October 30 and 31.

Many farmers throughout the county are preparing their wagons for the largest load of people to be brought in, and it is expected that the competition will be keen. The wagons must be in town by 10:30 a. m. and will be judged in front of the Peoples Bank by Mr. G. Raymond Ratcliffe, cashier. A prize will also be offered for the wagon coming the longest distance.

Great interest is being shown by the teachers everywhere in connection with the school exhibits and a large show is promised.

Entries of live stock are pouring in each day, and it is expected that this department will be one of the largest in the entire show.

The program of events follows:

PROGRAM

Friday, October 30:
9 to 10 a. m.—Judging of exhibits (exhibits include corn, farm products, garden and horticultural products, school and housekeepers' exhibits.)

10 to 10:30 a. m.—Registering wagons of people in front of Peoples National Bank.

10:30 to 11 a. m.—Parade of school children.

11 a. m. to 12:30 p. m.—Farmers' Institute in auditorium of Eastern College. Addresses by Mr. Fairfax Harrison, president Southern Railway and Dr. Cyril G. Hopkins, noted soil expert.

12:30 to 2 p. m.—Luncheon.

2 to 6 p. m.—All exhibits will be open to visitors.

Saturday, October 31:
8:25 a. m. to 12:30 p. m.—Exhibits open to visitors.

9 a. m.—Judging of live stock on Round lot, near courthouse. All entries must be in place by 9 a. m. Saturday morning. Arrangements will be made to care for animals during the day.

10 a. m.—Calf, lamb, pig and goat club animals to be judged.

10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m.—Live stock exhibits open to visitors.

12:30 to 2 p. m.—Lunch hour.

2:15 p. m.—Grand live stock parade.

Admission free to all exhibits. Everybody is welcome.

All persons intending to exhibit live stock, and who have not done so, will please write C. H. Yarborough, jr., or W. M. Brown by October 29, giving kind or stock and whether pure or grade. This information is necessary in order to know just how many animals must be cared for.

No charges will be required from exhibitors. Everything is absolutely free. Every person in Prince William county is cordially invited to come both days.

The expenses are to be borne by the business men and others of Manassas, who have at heart at all times the interest of the farmers.

The following men and firms have contributed and it is expected that others will contribute when asked:

Messrs. R. S. Hynson, E. R. Conner, G. Raymond Ratcliffe, L. E. Beachley, Nash & Cannon, F. E. Garrison, W. M. Brown, C. H. Yarborough, jr., Dr. C. R. C. Johnson and Dr. W. F. Merchant.

Elder T. S. Watson will preach at the First Baptist church Saturday at 8 p. m. and Sunday at 11 a. m.

COL. BERKELEY'S ADDRESS

Brother Veterans of the Great Civil War, Sons and Daughters of Veterans, Ladies and Gentlemen:

We have met here today to honor the memory of a noble son of the grand old state of Massachusetts, who gave up his life in his country's cause and whose blood flowed freely to cement together a disunited country, making it a perfectly united one, and the greatest on this planet.

Where he fell, oh be hallowed the spot, His spirit shall rest with the brave, His deeds by his country will ne'er be forgot.

While freedom weeps over his grave.

Col. Fletcher Webster was the worthy son of a noble sire. His father, Daniel Webster, was one of the greatest statesmen that this country has ever produced.

Methinks I can see him now, as though it were but yesterday, as I sat in the chamber of the United States Senate seventy-five years ago and listened to his great speeches as well as those of the other intellectual giants—Henry Clay, John C. Calhoun, Crittenden, Allen, Preston and others. I am probably the only man living who can point out the seats then occupied by them. I have been the recipient of many honors during my sojourn on earth.

Ninety years ago, I was held in the arms of the Marquis de LaFayette. Afterwards I had the pleasure of clasping the hand of Gen. Andrew Jackson and dining with him at the White House some seventy-eight or seventy-nine years ago. I also had the pleasure of clasping the hands of Generals Lee, Grant, Sherman, Longstreet, Early and many others, but the honor most earnestly desired was denied me, that of clasping the hand of our great patriot master, Abraham Lincoln, whose untimely death was the hardest blow this country ever received.

As I have frequently said, although by the stroke of his pen he reduced me from comparative affluence to comparative poverty, yet I can say from the bottom of my heart, God bless him for it. I have called our unpleasantness of a half century ago the civil war and surely I have the best of reason for doing so, for no prisoner in any war ever received more extreme civility than my self. I was the prisoner of two union generals and was permitted by them on each night of my captivity to go to my friends and sleep on a feather bed by giving my verbal promise to report in the morning. I lay on one of the general's beds with my revolver buckled around me under my uniform coat and sat between two of his staff officers at breakfast, dinner and supper with it on me, carried it all through the war and have it yet.

Being captured at night, wounded and not being asked for my arms, I did not think it incumbent on me to produce it and offer it to my captors. I had besides on my person a gold watch and chain for which I had paid $135, and several hundred dollars in money, neither of which was taken from me. The two generals were Gen. Carl Shurtz and Gen. Franz Seigel.

May a merciful God grant that the war now in progress, may terminate as ours did, in the best possible way for all engaged in it.

I regret exceedingly that our Governor Stuart was prevented from being here today to welcome you, as he would have done it in a far more satisfactory manner than myself. But such is life and we must take it as it is given us. God bless you, God bless us all in this, the Evening of Life.

Dr. A. Vineberg, the Eye and Ear Specialist, will visit Manassas on Monday October 26, where he can be consulted as usual at the Prince William Pharmacy. Children's eyes a specialty. It

THE COOL OF THE DAY.

(Written especially for the Webster memorial dedication by Rev. T. D. D. Clark.)
Not in the heat of the noontide of passion,
Not in the glamour of battle array,
That nightmare is over, that fever long ended,
The kind years have brought us the cool of the day.
Ah! Fierce were the fires of young manhood's morning
That raged in the blood of the blue and the gray,
And darkened the counsels of love and forbearance,
Which teach men to wait for the cool of the day.
The red torrent poured from the heart of the nation,
On field after field war's ghastly fruit lay,
To feed the feral maw of the burial trenches,
And sadden our hearts in the cool of the day.
Here fell in the midst of that wild conflagration
The son of a sire we shall honor for aye
As the peer of all masters of eloquent speech—
Daniel Webster, we greet you in spirit today.
To your son, who upheld by his martial devotion,
The name and the fame that pass not away,
This boulder we raise as a tribute and token
That good will prevail in the cool of the day.
Right and wrong is a balance only God can adjust;
We leave it to him and most earnestly pray
That when with old comrades we, too, shall pass onward,
We all may be judged in the cool of the day.

ODE TO THE NEW SOUTHERN.

In a certain part of Manassas city is something doing that's worthy a ditty:
'Tis worthy a poem from ocean to ocean,
Has created such interest and commotion.
We regret with the Southern that conflagration
Which laid so low the old, old station,
But we gaze with amazement and glad surprise
At the wonders which daily meet our eyes.
For with hammer and chisel, saw and square,
They've raised a structure that's wondrous fair,
And to all our friends who come we'll say,
'Tis the Southern's splendid masterful way
Of doing things right when once they begin—
(To deface this building would be a sin.)
They have laid at our door a trophy—the best,
Manassas must now assume the rest—
And awake to the progress that's stamping the town
And make her the best little city around.
Then all hail to the Southern!
To the Southern, all hail!
Hats off to the Southern,
The queen of the rail!

WHY THE YOUTH'S COMPANION SHOULD BE IN EVERY FAMILY

"If I could take only one paper," said the late Mr. Justice Brewer of the Supreme Court, "it would be The Youth's Companion—a little of everything in a nutshell, and unbiased." The Companion is a family paper in the completest sense. It provides reading that, without failing to interest the young, still interests the mature. It unites young and old through their common enjoyment of delightful fiction, agreeable miscellany, and the clear exposition of public questions.

So carefully is it edited, so varied are its contents, that it would easily supply a family with entertaining fiction, up-to-date information and wholesome fun, if no other periodical entered the house.

If you are not familiar with The Companion as it is today, let us send you sample copies and the Forecast for 1915.

New subscribers who send $2.00 for the fifty-two issues of 1915 will receive free all the remaining issues of 1914, besides a copy of The Companion Home Calendar for 1915.

MANASSAS, VA., FRIDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1914.

WHICH WILL YOU SUPPORT?

Don't forget that Tuesday, November 3, is election day.

Mr. Crupper, who is the republican candidate for Congress in opposition to Mr. Carlin, says that the democratic electors are not bound to vote for Mr. Carlin, as he was not nominated by a primary.

Just so. And Mr. Crupper seriously expects voters to be influenced by this statement. Exactly, and also precisely.

Well, let's see about that. By what authority does Mr. Crupper speak? Who nominated him? A primary? Oh, no. He, the ex-postmaster of the City of Alexandria, was nominated by a convention dominated by ex-officeholders. And not only that, but there seems to have been no opportunity for any one else contesting the nomination in a primary. Yet he complains that Mr. Carlin was not nominated in a primary.

How was Mr. Carlin nominated? The Democratic committee, at a regular meeting, provided that a primary should be held to nominate a democratic candidate for Congress. And it further provided, that if only one candidate for the nomination offered, he should be declared the candidate, without the expense of a primary. As Mr. Carlin was the only candidate who offered himself, the committee did not put the party and the candidate to the expense, and the voters to the inconvenience of a primary election to declare Mr. Carlin the nominee, when under the law, no one else could have been nominated, not having offered himself.

There are in this county good republicans, who will show their appreciation of Mr. Carlin's services in Congress, by casting their ballots for him November 3.

FINDS WORK BETTER THAN REST

The rest cure used to be the specific for nervous troubles, but now it is work, rather than rest, that the neurasthenic needs. There is more worry in rest than in work. The old adage applies—the devil finds work for the idle hands to do, but the difference is that his kind of work takes the form of worry and trouble. Of course, a muscle or nerve may be so far gone that it cannot engage in work. That is a calamity, indeed, but as long as they can work, they should keep at it, not perhaps in a violent way, but with exercise enough to keep the blood going and the spirit afloat. Now work has a meaning that differs from mere exercise or play. Work has an object besides health. It has a reward. It has a money value that it strives for. It is the visible token that a person is worth something, and the consciousness of this is work a good deal. It invigorates a person; tones him up, and that is the cure for nervous trouble. There is a great desire these days to keep some dear one from work; or, in other words, saving steps for him or her. This is not a kindness, unless the work is drudgery or taxes one's strength. But if it is mild, quiet work it is far more beneficial than mere rest, which is the equivalent of laziness.—Ohio State Journal.

ONLY ONE GREAT SINGER MISSING

Former President Taft joins in the general chorus of praise of Mr. Wilson's attitude in this critical period of great international trial, responsibility and danger. There is only one singer of national distinction missing from this chorus, and that is Teddy, who continues to sing a song of powder and bayonets. We wish that the Colonel would change his tune for a little while anyhow, and join Mr. Taft in singing the President's tune. It is a good time to show general appreciation of a rival performer.—Baltimore Sun.

ANOTHER FEATHER

Prince William is justly proud of the honors conferred last week upon her products at the Orange county fair. Such undeniable proof of their excellence gives ample opportunity for a little realization of what Prince William soil can do.

Fifty years ago this productive land was freshly made a battlefield. When the strife was ended tillers of the soil had little left with which to insure a harvest worth reaping. But necessity fed the will and trained the muscles. The soil must yield a livelihood. And so it was that as the cloud subsided the man again was master of the field.

The years sped and prosperity made itself known among the people. Farming conditions changed and with them the quality and the quantity of the yield. Farmers' gatherings were instituted, and the farmer no longer relies upon his own methods in his battle for success.

Cooperative effort has had its effect. The prizes won at Orange are but another feather in Prince William's achievement cap.

BEST AND WORST

We have heard and read a great deal lately of the brutalizing effect of war, but it is perhaps as well to try to analyze this statement before accepting it in its entirety, for at the present time we read so omnivorously that of necessity much that we pursue is mentally swallowed without being digested. That there are many cases in which war brings out the elemental passions and loosens man's check upon himself is, of course, true. But if we stop to think, has not war a humanizing, purifying, ennobling effect also?

As against the much-discussed atrocities, which, in our sanguine opinion, will diminish in number as overstrained, unhinged minds become less frequent, are there not infinite examples of heroism, devotion and self-sacrifice almost divine in their completeness? The wounded soldier who receives an offer of help but refuses, saying, "I am done for, leave me and take some other fellow," can hardly be said to have been brutalized by war.

We would like to suggest that war, as any other great calamity, contains an opportunity; it is so colossal an upheaval, so stupendous a tragedy, that it cannot leave us as it found us. To the individual is left the choice of how it will change him, and we like to think that many have chosen the path which, though it does not always lead to worldly fame, nevertheless will make them finer men, finer soldiers and finer citizens.—Baltimore Evening Sun.

JUDGE THORNTON AND TAX ASSESSMENTS

[From the Richmond Times-Dispatch of October 17]
To the Editor of the Times-Dispatch:

Sir,—In the issue of Thursday, the 15th instant, The Times-Dispatch contains a statement that only two judges have obeyed the law by calling special grand juries to review the returns of the commissioners of the revenue, and that this delinquency is the subject of comment around the Capitol.

This statement, reflecting upon all of the trial judges of the State except Judge Thomas W. Harrison, of Winchester, and Judge R. W. Southall, of Amelia, does a grave injustice to Judge J. B. T. Thornton, Judge of the Sixteenth Judicial Circuit, and, it is believed, to many other judges in the State.

Judge Thornton's circuit consists of Alexandria city, Alexandria county, Fairfax county and Prince William county. The matter of investigating the tax returns in Alexandria city is not within his jurisdiction. There has been no term of the Alexandria Circuit Court since June—long before the books of the commissioners of the revenue were returned. At the September term of the Circuit Court of Fairfax county Judge Thornton impaneled a grand jury for the very purpose, and directed that the report of this grand jury be certified to the Auditor. The Circuit Court of Prince William county is now in session—the first session since the commissioners of the revenue have returned their books—and the judge has been engaged in preparing a list of the grand jurors.

For the last two years Judge Thornton has given special attention to this matter in each county of the circuit.

Mr. J. P. Leachman, Jr., who, on account of failing health several years ago, went to New Mexico, where he has been engaged in farming the past two years, is now at Mimbres Hot Springs, suffering from a severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism. He is confined to his bed and suffering very much. A letter received this morning and mailed on the 19th reports his condition somewhat improved.

Cards are out announcing the coming marriage of Miss Martha Catherine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Newton Gunn, of New York and Beverly Farms, Mass., and Mr. Frederick Gerdes Hostetter, at 4 o'clock Thursday, the 5th of November, at St. Thomas' Church, New York City. Owing to the illness of the bride's mother, there will be no reception. The bride and groom will be at home after December 1 at Broad Run, Va.

Mrs. Albert Hayes died Tuesday at her home near Kopp. She was about fifty-four years old and had been in ill health for the past six months. Surviving members of the family are her husband, a son, Mr. Roland T. Hayes, of Marshall, and a daughter, Mrs. Jessie Addie Myers, of Marion, Iowa. The funeral was held yesterday at Belle Haven church, Rev. Mr. Cummings officiating. Interment was made in the churchyard there.

At the Manassas Baptist Church a series of extra meetings held at 7:30 o'clock, will begin next Sunday night, in which Rev. J. B. Cook, of Gordonville, will preach. Some years ago this minister preached here in what is said to have been the greatest meeting ever held in Manassas. During the past few months, at the regular services, sometimes at prayer meeting, there have been frequent conversions—sixteen up to this time.

Two teams participated in a runaway about three o'clock this afternoon. A horse driven to town and tied near the Newman-Trusler hardware store by the Misses Shoemaker, who attended Manassas High School, became frightened at a backing automobile and ran south toward the railroad. The team ran into a two-horse wagon being held by its owner, Mr. C. H. Wise. The buggy turned over and the horse sped on without the vehicle. Mr. Wise's team joined the race, which continued around the corner and ended in front of Eastern College. Mr. Wise had a narrow escape. As the running horse came toward him he jumped, catching his feet in his own reins. Kicking them off in time he ran to safety. No extensive damage was done.

Miss Virginia Nelson Speiden, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Speiden, celebrated her sixth birthday yesterday with a party to her little friends.

Mr. Thomas S. Meredith, of Gaineville, narrowly escaped serious injury Wednesday when a young colt he was driving became frightened and ran away, throwing him from the vehicle. He had stopped along the roadside for a moment's conversation when the colt became unmanageable. Mr. Meredith's injuries were immediately dressed and he has suffered no serious ill effects.

Mrs. George C. Round entertained the Bethlehem Housekeepers' Club Saturday, October 17th. A large number of the members were present as well as Mrs. Frank Dogan and Mrs. Charles Lewis, of the Groveton Club. The very interesting business meeting included plans for the Club Exhibit, which is to be held October 30 and 31, in Nicol's Hall. The three Clubs, Groveton, Stone House and Bethlehem, will exhibit. Committees were arranged and all details were settled upon. A delightful luncheon was served by our hostess, assisted by her daughter, Miss Emily, and Misses Charlotte Smith and Elizabeth Covington. A rising vote of thanks was given the hostess for her charming hospitality. Mrs. R. A. HUTCHISON, Sec.

Samuel Appleton, of St. Paul, Minn., who is a grandson of Daniel Webster and who made the dedicatory address at the battlefield.

DEATH OF SAMUEL LEWIS

Funeral Held Thursday at M. E. Church, South, Hamilton, Loudoun County.

Samuel Lewis, a life-long resident of Loudoun county, died Monday evening at his home in Hamilton. He had been in failing health for many years but appeared as usual on Saturday upon the streets of Hamilton.

The funeral took place Thursday morning at the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of which he had been a member for thirty years. The services there and in the Harmony churchyard, where he was buried, were conducted by Rev. G. T. Tyler.

Mr. Lewis was born February 13, 1840. He had followed the occupation of wheelwright for fifty years and was known as the best mechanic in the county.

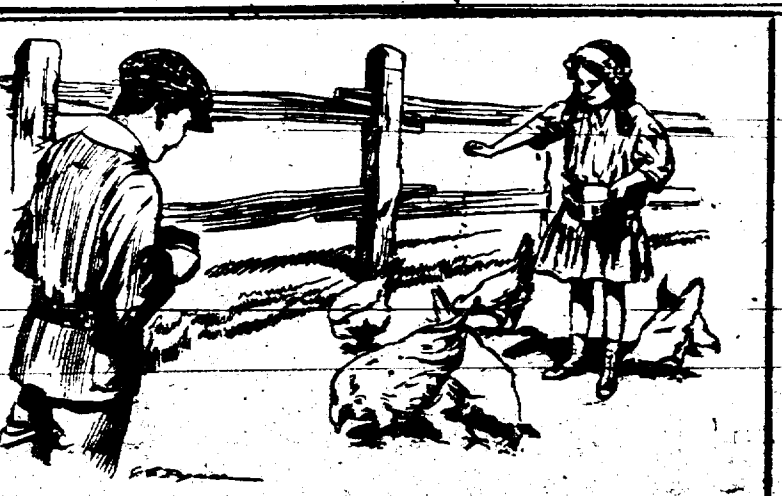

He was married just before the Civil War to Miss Sarah Bell, of Hillsboro, Loudoun county, who died about twenty years ago. Twelve children were born of this union. Eight of these are now living and were present at the funeral. They are Mrs. Rosa B. House, of Newman, Ill.; Mrs. W. E. Popkins and Mrs. Levi Cockran, both of Rockville, Md.; Mrs. Frank L. Smith and Miss Laura Lewis, both of Alexandria; Mrs. Joseph Tribbey, of Hamilton; Mr. John W. Lewis, of Economy, Pa.; and Mr. D. R. Lewis, of Manassas, who is manager of THE JOURNAL.

He is also survived by his second wife, who was Miss Virginia Fritts; a brother, Mr. George W. Lewis, of Frederick City, Md., and three sisters, Mrs. Andrew Beach, of Lincoln, Loudoun county; Mrs. Mary Gray, of Rockville, Md., and Miss Catherine Lewis, of Frederick City.

SON OF GEN. LEE EXPIRES CITIZENS HOLD SESSION

Capt. Robert E. Lee Dies at Age of Seventy Years—Buried at Lexington.

Capt. Robert E. Lee, youngest son of Gen. Robert E. Lee, died at his home near Upperville, Va. last Monday night.

Captain Lee was born in the historic Arlington house, October 27, 1843. He was educated in private schools and later attended the University of Virginia.

Since the war Captain Lee has been engaged in farming on his estate on the Pamunkey river. For several years it has been his custom to spend his summers at his summer home near Upperville and his winters on the Pamunkey.

Captain Lee was married twice, first to Miss Harall and second to Miss Juliet Carter, of Richmond.

He was buried in the vault beneath the Chapel of Washington and Lee University beside his great father.

It will be remembered that Gen. Lee had seven children, only one of whom, Miss Mary, now survives him.

Capt. Robert Lee was a jovial, light-hearted man, much like his first cousin, Gen. Fitz Lee.

Calf, Lamb and Kid Clubs.

Any boy or girl in school and out is eligible for entry in the calf, lamb and kid club October 30 and 31.

The purpose of the club being to encourage grazing, the judges are instructed to place the awards—all other things being equal—on animals which have not been stalled or grain fed.

The calves are to be shown to halter, the lambs and kids held. Prizes are to be awarded as follows:

Best calf or heifer, any breed, grade or cross, under 18 months—1st prize, registered Southdown lamb; 2nd, year's subscription to Southern Farming; 3rd, brown Leghorn cockerel; 4th, year's subscription to American Sheep Breeder.

Best calf, male or female, any beef breed, grade or cross, under 18 months—1st prize, Angora buck; 2nd, year's subscription to the Progressive Farmer; 3rd, brown Leghorn cockerel.

Best lamb, either sex, any breed, grade or cross—1st prize, registered Southdown lamb; 2nd, year's subscription to Southern Planter.

Best kid, either sex, any breed, grade or cross—1st prize, Angora goat; 2nd, year's subscription to Southern Planter; 3rd, one piece woolen or plush goods.

Representative Carlin will give ten dollars in gold for the best calf or lamb. Ribbons go with each winner.

The Bank of Nokesville has offered a prize of $5 for the best calf and the woolen mills at Bigstown, N. C., have offered a suit or dress pattern for the best...

Appoint Committees for Reception of Visitors to Webster Memorial Dedication.

BY GEORGE C. ROUND.

The meeting Monday night at Conner's Hall to arrange a suitable reception for the Massachusetts veterans Friday, appointed a committee on reception, consisting of one hundred, headed by Mayor Brown, to include all members of Ewell Camp, Confederate Veterans, and of the Manassas and Bull Run Chapters, U. D. C., all members of the town council and officers of the circuit court and other citizens.

Hon. C. J. Meetze was appointed marshal and all automobiles and carriages were ordered to report to him at the court house grounds between 9 and 9:30 a. m.

Mr. Oliver E. Newman was made chairman of the committee on decorations and signs, to designate the route of procession and of historic points to be visited.

Rev. Dr. H. L. Quarles was appointed to rally the veterans for the occasion and was asked as chaplain of Ewell camp to pronounce the benediction at the welcome to be given by Col. Berkeley on behalf of the governor.

President Roup of Eastern College was made chairman of the committee on music and Mrs. C. E. L. Hodge, Miss Eugenia Osbourn and Mrs. C. M. Larkin were named as his assistants.

Rev. T. D. D. Clark will read an original poem at the court house and Dr. H. M. Clarkson at the memorial ceremonies at Hazel Plain. The exercises there will be in charge of the 12th Massachusetts Regimental Association.

Thanks were offered to Mr. E. R. Conner for the use of the hall.

Lieutenant Round has received a number of interesting letters expressing great interest in the Webster dedication. The following is from the White House:

MY DEAR SIR:—I wish most sincerely that I could comply with your request of your letter of October 19th.

My thoughts will certainly be with you on October 23rd when the Webster Memorial is to be dedicated on the battlefield of Bull Run and I hope the occasion will be celebrated under the most happy auspices.

Sincerely yours, WOODROW WILSON.

Governor McGovern, of Wisconsin, who expects soon to visit Manassas to dedicate a monument to "The Iron Brigade," regrets he cannot come on such a very interesting occasion.

The Senior Senator from Wyoming has an important engagement in the west on October 23rd and adds:

Wishing for the occasion pleasant weather, a full attendance and a heartfelt interest on all hands and from all directions, I am, with great respect, FRANCIS E. WARREN.

Senator Bristow, of Kansas, and several members of the House of Representatives hope to be present.

The Governor of Virginia is canvassing the Ninth District but appointed Colonel Berkeley over the long distance phone to speak for him.

A Confederate soldier from Texas, Mr. Benjamin Franklin Weems, of Houston, and a veteran of the 8th Texas, has come a long distance to be present. Another ex-Confederate, Sergt. W. H. Lipscomb, says he gave a cup of cold water to Colonel Webster while mortally wounded and Ludlow Hutchison rendered him service on that occasion. Both hoped to be present.

The Manassas Schools

Dr. Johnson's Address.

On Thursday afternoon, October 15, Dr. C. R. C. Johnson gave a very interesting talk to the students of Manassas High School on "The Value of Education in Business." He said that education was the basis of all success and that its value to the business man lies in the training which his mind receives since such training means that he is able to cope with any situations which may arise.

At the conclusion of Dr. Johnson's address, a business meeting of the School Civic Club was held and the officers elected for the year as follows: President—Mr. Cundiff Williams.

Treasurer—Miss Myrtle Johnson.

Secretary—Mr. Clyde Simmons.

MISS OSBOURN SPEAKS.

The election of officers was prefaced by some account given by Miss Osbourn, of the history and work of the club. Such clubs, she said, were being organized all over the state under the direction of the State Educational Association, and were valued highly as instruments for training the boys and girls into the meaning and value of good citizenship. Since, in its essence, good citizenship means care for the public good, the habit fostered by these clubs of working for the common good of the school, means the carrying of this spirit into the wider citizenship of the world.

The Manassas High School Club had been organized before the State Association took up the work, and had done many things of value for the school. All the literary club work had been done under its auspices, entertainments had been given from time to time for improving the condition of the school rooms, and, in especial, the club had taken charge of and maintained the Ruffner-Carnegie Library.

The students had assisted the teachers in keeping the library open, especially during the summer, the graduating class of 1914 having assumed that duty last summer, and each year an entertainment had been given by the club for the purchase of books. These yearly entertainments have been the only source of income for the library since the original bequest by Mr. Carnegie.

Finally, the hope was expressed that the work of the club and the consequent growth of the spirit of loyalty to school and community would flourish more than ever through the coming year.

ATHLETICS.

Foot ball season has begun again with the usual vigor, and the girls basket ball teams are well under way. Fine work should be done in both directions as there is much good material in the school this season. X.

THE BEST PROOF

Given by a Manassas Citizen.

Doan's Kidney Pills were used—they brought benefit. The story was told to Manassas residents. Time has strengthened the evidence. Has proven the result lasting. The testimony is home testimony—the proof convincing. It can be investigated by Manassas residents.

O. H. Evans, carpenter, Prescott Ave., Manassas, Va., says: "I got so bad with my back that I could hardly do anything. Every sudden move caused such intense pain I hardly knew what to do. Someone suggested Doan's Kidney Pills and I gave them a trial. I have had no further trouble from my kidneys. You may continue to use my endorsement."

Tale of a Cow.
A poor tiller of the soil had owned for a number of years a valuable cow. Of a sudden he began to find that the beast always stood in her stall with her tail toward the south, where the manger was, her head toward the north. He tried various means of making the cow stand the other way, her head to the south and her tail to the north, but no matter how many times he set her properly in her stall she always turned around. Finally there was nothing to do but rebuild the stall to suit the cow.

Somewhat later war came and the poor tiller of the soil had to join his regiment and go and fight for the fatherland. His wife and children, reduced to dire poverty, were forced to sell the cow to the butcher, who slaughtered her and sold her meat at the public house to his fellow townsmen. At the same time, however, the mystery of the animal's unaccountable behavior was cleared up. In the body of the cow was found a small compass which the poor man, her owner, had lost some months before from his watch chain. Evidently it had fallen among the hay and been eaten.—New York Post.

Missing Trouble.
Did you meet that trouble that came your way with a smiling heart and cheerful, Or hide your face from the light of day, With a craven soul, and fearful? Oh, trouble's an ounce or trouble's a ton! Yes, trouble is just what you make it. And it isn't the fact that you're best that counts, But only "How did you take it?"

You are beaten to earth, well, well, what's that? Come up with a smiling face. It's nothing against you to feel down that But to lie there, that's a disgrace. The harder you've thrown the higher you bounce. Be proud of your blackened eye, For it isn't the fact that you're blood that counts, But "How did you fight and why?"

And, though you be down to the death, what then? If you've landed the best you could, If you've played your part in the world of men, The Critic will call it "Good!" Death comes with a crowd or he comes with a paucity, And, whether he be slow or speedy, It's never the fact that you're dead that counts, But only "How did you die?"

Get It Mixed.
A careful mother, who always follows the "old" teachings which her eight-year-old son receives at Sunday school, was asked a question in response to the "miraculous" question, "What did you have today?" her young hopeful joyfully exclaimed: "I learned how to screw a nut. You only have to climb into his lap." Upon further investigation she discovered that the source of the information was the two lines of Cowper's hymn:

And thus I found when in my youth The weakest might upon his breast.

Man and Angel.
The judge had sat down wearily for hours while many and eloquent counsel had wrangled on a single matter of law. One member of counsel for the defense remarked that the speculation of the learned counsel for the prosecution was as idle as the medieval inquiry into the question of how many angels could stand on the point of a needle.

"Well, gentlemen," remarked the judge, taking notice, "so far as the court is aware, that matter was never settled by a decision. We do not know how many angels can stand on a point of a needle, but the court holds that these proceedings have infallibly established the fact that a great many souls can find a holding place on a point of law." After that the case moved on to a finish.

Real Emulation.
A city man who owing to a business deal was obliged to live for some time in a small railroad town frequently felt the need of amusement. Once when he was really depressed with the monotony of his life he saw a whole excited crowd gathered on a vacant lot. Prominent citizens were there looking up and down, gasping and shouting, and he felt that the excitement had happened and something was doing. He rushed to the lot and gazed out. "What's the matter?" "Matter," shouted a roustabout citizen, "Matter? Why, we are going to have a swarms of bees!"—Argument.

That Him Up.
In the biography of Dr. Hawtrev, a famous English schoolmaster, there is a description of his unkempt appearance, with a comment which has been greatly quoted. It is said that he, according to his habit, was wearing his hair as some boy, who replied that he had no time to dress.

"But I can dress in time," said the doctor.

"Yes," replied the boy, "but I wash."

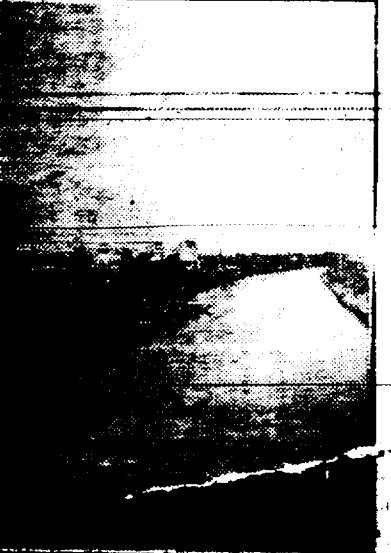

Painful Economy.
Economy has its pains as well as its pleasures. If the experience of an old Virginia dandy count for anything. One spring for some reason, old Mose was going round town with the face of dissatisfaction. When questioned he poured forth a valuable tale of woe. In those terms "Marve Tom, be come to me last fall an' he sez, 'Mose, dey's gwine to be a hard winter, so yo' be better an' save yo' wages.' An' Ah believe Marve Tom, yasuh. Ah be have him an' Ah save an' save an' what de winter come it an' got no business an' dey—Ah was wid all dat money on me hands."

POST-OF DRAG MAINTENANCE

Simplest Contrivance Yet Devised.
PRODUCES SMOOTH SURFACE

An Inexpensive Service For Maintaining Certain Types of Roads Which When Wet Become Rattled—Use in Construction is Secondary.

Prepared by the office of public roads for United States department of agriculture. When it is appreciated that of more than 2,000,000 miles of public roads in the United States only about 200,000 miles have been given a hard surface, and of these 200,000 miles approximately one-half are surfaced with gravel, the importance of every effective device for maintaining the simpler types of roads becomes readily apparent. It should be observed in this connection that a large part of our total mileage of public roads is entirely unimproved and that the drag is of little use in improving soil or clay roads which have never been crowned or drained. A much larger part, however, has been sufficiently improved to make the work of the drag effective, and it is undeniably true that the magnitude of this part is steadily increasing. The drag is a simple and inexpensive device for maintaining certain types of roads which when wet become rattled under traffic and which become firm on drying out. It is also well adapted for producing a smooth and uniform surface on newly constructed roads in which the material used for surfacing is earth, earthy gravel of some similar material. It is, however, essentially a maintenance implement and its use in construction is distinctly secondary. Roads which are very rocky or very sandy cannot be satisfactorily improved by its use.

Notwithstanding the fact that road drags have been widely used, there are very few reliable data which relate to the cost of drag maintenance. Furthermore, most of the data which have been collected are difficult to interpret because of the fact that they do not usually furnish sufficient information concerning the character of the surface maintained or the prevailing climatic and traffic conditions to warrant any very general deductions. Sufficient is known, however, to warrant the unqualified statement that no cheaper method than dragging has ever been devised.

The cost of constructing a satisfactory road drag varies from about $2, when a split log drag is used and all materials are conveniently available, to perhaps $10 or $12, when the drag is made of best class curved lumber, neatly finished in every detail and painted. This item of first cost appears almost insignificant when it is considered that the life of a well constructed road drag should be at least three or four years.

Probably the most economical and efficient system of managing drag maintenance is to assign definite sections of road to each of several responsible interested residents who own teams and live conveniently near the road. In this way the men and teams who do the dragging will be occupied in other work when not engaged in dragging the road and need be paid only for the actual time employed.

To summarize a few of the principal advantages of the road drag:

First.—The road drag is the simplest and least expensive contrivance yet devised for maintaining roads constructed of earth or earthy material.

Second.—The successful operation of a road drag depends to a very great extent on the skill and intelligence of the operator.

Third.—The time to use the drag is when the material composing the road surface is sufficiently moist to compact readily under traffic after it has been moved by the drag and does not contain sufficient moisture for the traffic following the drag to produce mud.

Fourth.—Dragging cannot need to be so arranged as to keep teams employed all the time and it is therefore desirable to have it done by interested persons who can find employment for themselves and teams when they are not engaged in dragging.

MAINTENANCE AND REPAIR.

First and Last Commandment For Earth Roads is Surface Drainage. There is no phase of the road problem more important than that of maintenance. The general impression that there are certain types of roads that are permanent is erroneous. No permanent road has ever been constructed or ever will be, according to the road specialists of the United States department of agriculture. The only things about a road that may be considered permanent are the grading, culverts and bridges.

The first and last commandment in earth road maintenance is to keep the surface well drained. To insure good drainage the ditches should be kept open, all obstructions removed and a smooth crown maintained. Except for very stony soil the road machine or scraper may be used very effectively for this work. The machine should be used once or twice a year and the work should be done when the soil is damp so that it will pack and bake into a hard crust. Wide and shallow side ditches should be maintained with sufficient fall and capacity to dispose of surface water. These ditches can in most places be constructed and repaired with a road machine.

All vegetable matter such as sods and weeds should be kept out of the road, as they make a spongy surface which retains moisture. Clods are also objectionable, for they soon turn to dust or mud, and for that reason roads should never be worked when dry or hard. Bowlders or loose stones are equally objectionable, if a smooth surface is to be secured.

A split log drag or some similar device is very useful in maintaining the surface after suitable ditches and cross section have once been secured. This drag can also be used to advantage on a gravel road or well or on an earth road. The principle involved in dragging is that clays and most heavy soils will puddle when wet and set very hard when dry. The little attention that the earth road needs must be given promptly and at the proper time if the best results are to be obtained.

In dragging roads only a small amount of earth is moved, just enough to fill the ruts and depressions with a thin layer of plastic clay or earth, which packs very hard, so that the next rain instead of finding ruts, depressions and clods in which to collect runs off, leaving the surface but little affected.

The drag should be light and should be drawn over the road at an angle of about forty-five degrees. The driver should ride on the drag and should not drive faster than a walk. One must step, each trip straddling a wheel track, is usually sufficient to fill the ruts and smooth the surface. If necessary the road should be dragged after every bad spell of weather when the soil is in proper condition to puddle well and still not adhere to the drag. If the road is very bad it may be dragged when very wet and again when it begins to dry out. A few trips over the road will give the operator an idea as to the best time to drag. Drag at all seasons, but do not drag a dry road.

The slope or crown of an earth road should be about one inch to the foot. If the crown becomes too high it may be reduced by dragging toward the ditch instead of from it. If the drag cuts too much, shorten the hitch and change your position on the drag. If it is necessary to protect the face of the drag with a strip of iron, it should be placed flush with the edge of the drag and not projecting. A cutting edge should be avoided on the main object in dragging is to smear the damp soil into position.

MODERN ROAD BUILDING.

Plan by Which Each Step Takes Care of Present and Future. Highway improvement, like the growth of population, should be progressive, urges the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. Each stage should be suited to the requirements of its period. This committee plans the proper location, grading and drainage of the roadway, which are essential to any good road. When suitable can be used as an earth road during the years when traffic is light and can be kept in very satisfactory condition by dragging after spring and fall rains at a cost of $20 a year per mile.

The second step is to make a gravel road when travel increases or funds become available by applying several inches of sharp, clean gravel after dragging and rolling the earth road. This can be done in most places for a few hundred dollars a mile, and maintenance will cost about $300 a mile.

When the gravel road is completed it forms an excellent foundation for a concrete surface. It is only necessary to loosen up the gravel and roll it to uniform compactness; then lay a course of hydraulic concrete to carry heavy traffic. The surface construction costs approximately $1,500 a square yard. Maintenance should not average more than $200 a mile. The final step in progressive road building when heavy hauling and motor trucking production is to lay a course of vitrified brick or granite set against with cement on a sand cushion on top of the concrete, or if part of the road should become a residence street or be set apart as a boulevard a quiet pavement of wood blocks, sheet asphalt or asphalt blocks can be laid on the concrete. This road plan the chamber believes, provides for varying rainfalls and kinds of traffic over a century or more of use and involves no use of investment in pavements that are expected to last to the next generation, as a foundation in the final type of highway.

A Halloween Party

At Which There Was an Episode

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

"Papa," said my daughter, Helen, "two weeks from today will be Halloween."

"What's Halloween?"

"Oh, papa, how ignorant you are! Halloween is the evening when young folk bob for apples, and strike at suspended bags full of nuts or candy and throw peelings over their shoulders."

"What do they throw the peelings over their shoulders for?"

"Why, the skins in falling will take the shape of a letter. That letter is the initial of the person the one throwing it will marry. If a girl looks into a mirror she'll see the face of her future husband."

"Halloween is for girls, I presume."

"Not at all. It's for boys the same as for girls."

"Well, what about your party?"

"Mamma says that if you consent we will give it at the Cedars."

The Cedars is our country camp. We had returned to the city after Labor day, a month before, and now it was proposed to go back for Helen's party. She looked at me wistfully. I remembered what such things were to me when I was a youngster and melted before that look. Indeed, I always melt before that look. I gave my consent.

This is what happened at the Halloween party. It came under my observation; but, not having woman's perceptive faculties, I saw nothing in it. The story was told me by my wife, and I tell it here as she told it to me.

The young persons assembled for Halloween at the Cedars were between sixteen and twenty-two years of age, though these above twenty were men. Some of them being too old to bob for apples or knock down bags when blindfolded, it occurred to my wife to have a sort of miscellaneous party, or something of the kind, who was to tell weird stories suitable to the occasion. She was a Miss Somers, thirty-five years old and altogether an odd person.

On Halloween after dinner the young folk assembled in the large apartment used for a living room, at one end of which was an enormous fireplace. The night was cool enough for a blaze, and logs in plenty had been provided. The room was sparsely furnished above the logs. On the walls were the heads of animals which I remember of a Hallowe'en had slain, while several skins from the same source covered the pine floor.

Miss Somers seated herself in the center of the group before the fire, which gave the only light in the room, and began her stories. They all appeared to have come under her own observation and were intended to show that for every boy and every girl there was somewhere in the world a mate. It did not seem to matter to her as to the youngsters, especially the girls, that this was impossible unless the pair were born at the same moment. There were several other big gaps which were not filled, but this did not seem to trouble any of the listeners.

Miss Somers had an eye on her listeners and observed on her right a young man, Joel Harter, in whom a love for the marvelous, judging from his features, was strongly developed. On her extreme left, partly in shadow, sat a girl, Marjorie Whithrop, one of those feminine creatures made especially to love and be loved. Harter was twenty-one years old; Marjorie Whithrop was not quite eighteen.

To a chess player it was evident that Miss Somers was casting or trying to cast a spell over these two. This was noticeable since, while telling her yarns, she would first look at Joel, whose eyes—as indeed the eyes of all—were fixed intently upon her; and then turn to Marjorie. It seemed that she was attempting by will power to draw these two together. At times, as if by her, Joel would look from her to Marjorie; then after an interval Marjorie would look at Joel and always with something of the expression indicating that she regarded him as her own special property.

The young people listened to Miss Somers' stories and chatted till 9 o'clock, when they separated in order that each might go off alone in search of a Halloween experience. The camp was situated on the margin of a lake, surrounded by hills, the latter being part wood and part open. The young fellows to whom the Halloween part of the affair appeared ridiculous, went into a room where there was a billiard table to play and to smoke. Joel Harter disappeared, and it was not known where he had gone. As for the girls, some of them went to their rooms, some out to the boats, while others comforted themselves on the shore where Miss Somers' tent was set up.

This evening about by night was illuminated by a full moon, which gave ample light.

From these immemorial there has been evidence of a power possessed by some persons to will others to do certain things. Most of these cases of domination have been either unproved or proved. Nevertheless, the greatest amount of chief these have been a few grains of wheat.

where near Joel Harter or Marjorie Whithrop on that Halloween eve after the moon had risen and the dew had fallen. After the brewing up went out on the veranda and sat down in the moonlight. Then he felt impelled to walk down a road that bordered the lake. At a place where the sheet of water was wider than elsewhere he came upon a boat. What induced him he did not know, but he felt a desire to step into the boat. A pair of oars were in the bottom, and taking them up, he pulled out into the lake. There were two other boats on the water, one near the camp, the other directly across from the point at which he started. He felt an inclination to go to the former, but was moved to pull to the other.

Joel's mind was during this time fixed upon Marjorie. He did not know where she was and had no idea of finding her. Marjorie was thinking of Joel and admitted afterward that she could not help thinking of him, though on looking over the young men she had met at the camp she had been favorably impressed with another. She chose the lake on which to receive her Halloween impressions and carried a hand mirror with her.

Marjorie pulled into a cove, dropped her oars and, taking up her mirror, looked into it for the face of her "mate." The only face she saw was her own, and she had no reason to be displeased with it, softened, as it was, by moonlight. She kept her eyes bent on the glass for some time, but no face other than her own appearing she dropped it to enjoy a view of the water and the surrounding hills.

Occasionally a light breeze would ripple the water, breaking the rags of the moon into innumerable particles, but only for a few minutes, when the spherule would die away, leaving the surface of the water and the leaves of the trees on the shore as motionless as before. Over the face of the moon far up in the sky passed the silhouette of a bird.

The stillness was broken close beside her by a fish, which jumped above the surface, possibly for a glimpse at the moon, possibly to see who was out at that time of night, when humans should be in their beds.

Presently there came a distant sound of oars—plink, plink, plink. Marjorie on leaving the camp had seen most of the young men in the billiard room, and a couple of girls were getting into a boat at the landing. She inferred that the boat she heard contained these girls or at least some of her own sex. The plink of oars grew nearer and seemed to be coming in her direction.

It occurred to her to turn her back to any one who might be approaching, raise her glass as if expecting to see the face of a lover, then turn and feign to be surprised and disappointed at seeing a girl. Facing the shore, she looked straight before her. When the coming boat drew near and the sound of oars ceased she looked into the mirror to enjoy the expression on the face of the person approaching.

A little shriek indicated that she had been surprised. Instead of seeing the face of a girl reflected in the glass she saw that of a man. These were words by sufficient light to recognize her reflected features, as she turned about and stared.

He was Joel Harter.

This is all that is known of the story in detail. Whether Joel and Marjorie came back to the camp together or separately, whether they remained out late or early, they never told. Neither was in the group that gathered about the dining table for a supper and to compare Halloween-experiences. These experiences were invented and were proportionately marvelous. The only one who was that narrated here, but not then. The absence of the two persons concerned in it was noted and commented upon, but there were several other absences, and nothing more was thought of their than of the others. Indeed, on this occasion it would not have been proper to make minute inquiries.

The party did not break up for several days after Halloween, and during the remainder of the time there was a drawing together between Joel Harter and Marjorie Whithrop. They met only because inseparable, but did not take any pains to conceal the fact that they had suddenly become lovers. With this part of their mutual affection Miss Somers truly had nothing to do, for she left the Cedars the morning after Halloween, that is, when she worked upon them from a distance, which is not very likely. Indeed, it was not necessary.

Some months elapsed after Helen's Halloween party before an engagement was announced between two of our guests—Joel Harter and Marjorie Whithrop. Miss Somers was accused by my wife with having bewitched them, but she would not admit that she had exercised any influence whatsoever on either of them.

But my wife does not believe her, and I am of the opinion that my wife is correct. Marjorie has confided to Helen that while listening to the stories by the fireplace she was under the thrall of Miss Somers. She felt impelled to go out in a boat and to remain where Joel found her. She also confessed that her shriek at seeing a man's face in the mirror was not genuine, but a bit of feminine affectation, for she felt all the while that she would see Joel's.

After the marriage between the two I questioned Joel, but got no satisfaction as to his having been affected by Miss Somers. But a man will admit to a woman some things that he will not admit to another man. He had acknowledged to my wife feeling impelled to do what he did, but when I asked him about it he said that there was nothing in it. So there is no substance in the story.

BREAKFAST IN BOHEMIA.

Where They Didn't Use a Bell to Call the Caterer.

In his published reminiscences of Henri Murger M. Felix Duguesne tells an amusing story of a breakfast with the poet of the "Vie de Boheme" Theodore Barriere, the dramatist, wished to adapt Murger's work to the stage. He had never met the poet, but he decided to visit him at his home and introduce himself. Murger lived on the sixth floor of a house in the Rue Gogolre-de-Tours. It was almost noon when Barriere appeared at his lodging, but Murger was still in bed.

"Pardon me, sir, for disturbing you," said Barriere. "I'm sorry to see that you are in bed. Are you indisposed?"

"No, not at all," said Murger. "I'm very well, indeed, and very glad to make your acquaintance."

"May I ask why you lie in bed on so fine a day as this?"

"I'll tell you," said Murger, laughing. "You know the story of Hippolyte, who stayed in bed while his clothes were being mended. That's my case. I have only one pair of trousers.

Which is Your Choice?

There are two objects which he who seeks is almost sure to find. The one is the knowledge of what he ought to do. The other, an excuse for what he is inclined to do.—Whitely.

That a long bed.

Something went wrong with the mechanism of the elevator in an old-fashioned southern hotel, and the passengers, six men, were imprisoned between two floors for three hours. They made themselves as comfortable as they could while they waited. Each one told his choleric story, and finally some one suggested that they sing a song to help pass the time away.

"You can sing, can't you, Sam?" said a spokesman to the negro-elevator boy.

"Just lead off with 'Dixie' and we will all join in."

But Sam did not lead off as expected.

"Ah, can't sing, Sam?" he explained.

"Dixie! Ah, can't! I know most men of my color can sing, but I couldn't carry a tune, no manner. I couldn't carry a tune, if some one should give me one all tied up in a bag"—Tom's Complaint.

Ready Subject.

In the days when Rowley Hill was king of the lake of Sam one of his day-gang, hearing the name of Sam, came to my office to his kitchen on getting permission.

The parson said: "Goodly, my lord, I hope we may meet again, but if not here in some better place."

The bishop replied: "I fear the latter is unlikely, as there are no Thurs in heaven."

"No doubt," wittily answered the parson, "you are right that our chance of meeting is small, as one needs of the pluck of gamblers, but never of any hills there."

A Glamorganshire draper having let part of his shop to a butcher, coming issued the following heraldic other day: "Great attraction for the festive season at Wily's beef and sausage shop. A large and varied assortment of tripe and trimmed harts to be cleared out regardless of cost. Sausages and sausages woven while you wait. Fagots and Sausages, the largest stock in town. Both of rotten and ribs of pork in great variety. Try our calves and cowled beef. Our German sausages and sausage veils warranted to wear well." All wares from our own sheep and hutter from the male. Finest hams and pluck, net suitable for presents, very cheap. Be it done. Be in time.—London Express.

ALFALFA

The Profitable Hay Crop

ALFALFA "GOLD" BRAND

This long, branching roots possesses the dense, rich and sweet taste that we desire, and that constitute a genuine alfalfa. It is very tender and digestible, and is a complete food. Experiment stations place the feeding value of Alfalfa hay at $30 per ton, as against Timothy hay at $12 per ton. This, with the fact that Alfalfa will yield, on good land, 6 to 16 tons of splendid hay per year, shows what a valuable crop it is. Leads in the Western States, and is well set in Alfalfa seed at from $1.00 to $2.00 per acre. The acreage of Alfalfa is increasing very largely all over the Middle and Southern States; one farmer in fact beginning to realize what a valuable crop it is. Alfalfa will readily do well on any good loamy, well-drained soil, but the land must be well and thoroughly prepared for the seed. It should never be used for pasture; it is too valuable as a hay producer to risk injury from stock. A heavy application of manure will begin to realize what a valuable crop it is. BONNEY-SIMPSON

Miss Marie Elizabeth Simpson and Mr. Herman Langford Bonney, both of Clarendon, were married Tuesday evening by Rev. H. L. Swain. The ceremony took place at the home of Dr. S. S. Simpson, parents of the bride, who lived in Manassas until a few years ago. The house was attractively decorated with palms, cut flowers and autumn leaves. The bride wore a traveling dress of dark blue faille, with velvet hat to match, and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. She was attended by her sister, Miss May Simpson, who wore a gown of shadow lace trimmed in yellow and carried a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. Mr. C. T. Merchant, of Washington, was best man. The couple received a number of handsome presents. The groom's gift was a brooch of diamonds and pearls. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Bonney left on a honeymoon, which will include a sea trip from Norfolk to New York, from which point they will go to Niagara. Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Fannie Simpson, Mrs. Bettie Harrison, Miss Lucy Harrison and Mrs. F. E. Randall and daughter, all of Manassas, and Misses Leone and Alberta Davis, of Bristow.

Miss Mary Lee Meade has returned from a visit to Amherst, where she was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Scott.
Miss Mary Price is spending several weeks in Philadelphia with her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Pemberton Price.
Mrs. Hugh T. Clarkson with her little son, of Washington, is spending a week with her sister, Mrs. C. D. S. Clarkson.
Mrs. William Baker and children, who have spent the summer at "Winterham," will leave on Saturday for Richmond where they will stay several months.
Mr. and Mrs. Grayson Tyler, whose recent marriage has made them the center of much interest, have returned from their wedding trip and are at their home, "Cerro Gordo," Backland. M.

BARN DESTROYED.

Fire of unknown origin early this morning destroyed the hand-some barn at the residence of Mr. W. N. Lipscomb on North Main street. The loss, which included harness, hay and other feed, is estimated at $1,500.

It is interesting to view today's ceremonies on the battlefield to note the concluding paragraph of Daniel Webster's reply to Hayne, delivered in the United States Senate on January 26 and 27, 1830. The passage reads:
I have not allowed myself, sir, to look beyond the Union, to see what might lie hidden in the dark recess behind. I have not coolly weighed the chances of preserving liberty when the bonds that unite us together shall be broken asunder. I have not accustomed myself to hang over the precipice of disunion, to see whether, with my short sight, I can fathom the depth of the abyss below; nor could I regard him as a safe counsellor in the affairs of the government, whose thoughts should be mainly bent on considering, not how the union may be best preserved, but how tolerable might be the condition of the people when it should be broken up and destroyed. While the union lasts, we have high, exciting, gratifying prospects spread out before us, for us and our children. Beyond that I seek not to penetrate the veil. God grant that, in my day, at least, that curtain may not rise! God grant that on my vision never may be opened what lies behind! When my eyes shall be turned to behold for the last time the sun in heaven, may I not see him shining on the broken and dishonored fragment of a once glorious union; on states dissevered, discordant, belligerent; on a land rent with civil feuds, or drenched, it may be, in fraternal blood! Let their last feeble and lingering glance rather behold the glorious ensign of the republic, now known and honored throughout the earth, still full advanced, its arms and trophies streaming in their original lustre, not a stripe erased or polluted, not a single star obscured, bearing for its motto no such miserable interrogatory as "What is all this worth?" nor those other words of delusion and folly, "Liberty first and union afterwards;" but everywhere, spread all over in characters of living light, blazing on all its ample folds, as they float over the sea and over the land, and in every wind under the whole heavens that other sentiment, dear to every American heart—Liberty and Union, now and forever, one and inseparable!
