Congressman from Indiana Admirably Explains His Bill on Rural Credits-Lively Discussion at Business Session in Afternoon-Constitution to be Drawn Up-Next Meeting February 18, at 11 A. M.

The farmers of this section of the state who failed to attend the special meeting of the Northern Virginia Farmers' Institute, which was held at the courthouse last Saturday, missed one of the best and most important meetings held in the interest of better farming since the institute was organized. It's not every day that we have the opportunity of hearing such an authority on that subject of yest importance to farmers, "Rural Credits," as is Congressman Ralph W. Moss, of Indiana. Therefore, the few who were wise enough to come over bad roads and listen to this speaker of note have noth ing to regret.

Congressman R. W. Moss is the author of the Fletcher-Moss farmland bank bill, was the only member from Congress on the European commission on rural credits, and is a member of the joint committee on rural credits and chairman of the subcommittee on personal rural credits of the present Congress. It can be truthfully said that there is no better informed man in this country on "Rural Credits," than is Mr. Moss. Coupled with his extensive theoretic knowledge on this subject is the practical experience Mr. Moss has had in farming. Any who heard him speak did not doubt that he HERMAN PORTNER IS DEAD knew what he was talking about.

Meeting Opened at 11 A. M. With Prayer

President Westwood Hutchison called upon Rev. Alford Kelley to open the special meeting with a prayer. After this Mr. Hutchison made a few remarks and turned over to Mr. W. B. Doak the privilege of introducing Congressman Moss. Mr. Doak in a few words told of Mr. Moss' qualifications and emphasized the great importance of the subject about to be presented. It was through Mr. Doak that Mr. Moss was obtained, and in the afternoon session Portner, the youngest son of the the institute, upon the suggestion of Mr. W. I. Steere, extended Mr. Doak a vote of thanks for his successful efforts in this regard Shewing how the rural credits bill as now in Congress will really To be a savings system for the farmer, Mr. Moss made a digression when he took particular pains to emphasize the value of two great saving systems, two of the greatest and best he knew of, according to what he said. He told of the value of endowment policies wit life insurance companies and of building loan associations, how both of these saving systems have helped many a man to lay aside some money and to own his own home. He advised all young men to do two things, i. e., to get married and to take out an endowment policy with a life insurance company.

Some Features of the Fletcher-Moss Bill

Some of the outstanding features of the Fletcher-Moss bill, as outlined by Mr. Moss, are as follows: The United States is to be divided into twelve districts, each district to have a federal land bank, the capital stock of which is to be not less than $500,000. Each land bank is to have a reserve of $100,000, to which five per cent of the net earnings is to be annually added. Under each land bank are to be farmers' loan associations, where at least ten men band together to form such an association. Applications for loans given community must be made before the association of that neighborhood. No loan is made unless the borrower has at least a fifty per cent interest in the property on which he is borrowing mal class finished up their week money. No land bank can charge more than 6 per cent interest of observation of the Washington and loans must be taken for at least five years and for not longer schools with a day of sight-seeing than 35 years. The plan is so worked out that a loan pays for itself last Saturday when they went in 35 years, since part of the money paid in goes into stock. #### A THING YOU SHOULD CORRECT

The people of Prince William, we are confident. do not wish to show discourtesy towards any, espe cially strangers. Kind-heartedness and hospitality are not brothers of discourtesy, hence one would not look for a lack of courtesy among the citizens of this county. And, generally speaking, our people are courteous. In one way, however, Prince William often shows bad manners.

How many times do you attend services at a church, not because you feel like going, but because you feel that the visiting minister should be greeted by a representative congregation? How many times do you go to a civic league meeting, not because you feel like going, but because you feel that matters of importance are to be discussed and acted upon and should receive the attention of every one in the community? How many times do you attend a public meeting, not because you feel like going but because you feel that as a citizen of your community you are partly responsible for the impres sion your community makes upon strangers? We ask these questions to get you in the right state of mind for what is to follow.

The citizens of Prince William, except these few who are already living up to their community obli gations, are weefully negligent in deing things for their community's sales. They are eternally placing their feelings, likes and dishkes before their duty. As it now is, men, women and children first consider their selfish desires and then act accordingly. If they can be persuaded in their minds that they are going to have a fine time at a meeting they go. If they believe there is little pleasare to be derived from the occasion they do not go. With the men it is often a consideration of dollar and cents. If they do not see how it is going to be financially to their interest to attend a meeting no amount of persuasion will draw them out. Too many times, as many of us know; their judgment is incorrect and the most helpful of meetings go begging for attendance. The mere handful of farmers in attendance upon the special meeting of the Northern Virginia Farmers' Institute held at the courthouse last Saturday, can be cited as an instance of erroneous judgment.

Put yourself in the place of Congressman Ralph W. Moss, of Indiana, an international authority on rural credits, who, in his appearance at Manlast Saturday, for the first time addressed a Virginia audience. Would you feel that your trip from Washington, considering the time taken from other valuable work, was worth while, if you had only thirty or forty farmers to hear you? Would you feel that the citizens of Prince William, despite the fact that the roads were not in very good condition, were appreciative of the efforts you had made in their behalf? Would you feel that proper courtesy had been shown you, especially when you had given years of hard work to the hattle for het ter farm credit, and had been assured that your coming had been advertised quite extensively? No. you would go away with a rather poor impression of Prince William and Virginia in general. Moreover, you would go away with the impression that many things in regard to the Old Dominion had been overrated. We do not know how Mr. Moss felt over the poor turnout but we daresay that he

In the future we trust Prince William will do better. There are many reasons why the citizens of this county should feel it their duty to attend church services, meetings of their community leagues, public lectures, farmers' institutes and other meetings which are designed to be helpful to the moral, eduestional and uplift phases of community life. On of the reasons for not attending these meetings, i. cutting off of taxes heretofore received from the e., that you do not feel like doing so, must be put liquor business. With the abolition of the liquor aside, if you wish to exercise your community pride, have a proper regard for the speaker's feelings and are willing to show your broad minded- that a large part of the state's taxes has gone to ness and spirit of unselfishness. With due thought pay expenses created by the liquor traffic, it will in the matter we believe that the citizens of Prince be several years before any appreciable diminution William will not be inconsiderate enough to let an- can be expected in these expenses. Hence, the other instance of discourtesy like that of last Sat- Legislature, in this matter of tax increase, has a urday occur in the future.

ADVERTISING AND SELLING GOODS

The value of constant worth-while advertising in a reliable home newspaper is so emphasized today that it might be well to consider in a brief way a necessary corollary to advertiging, if advertising is to prove as valuable as it is claimed to be. The reasonable, thinking business man, who recognizes that advertising in a worthy newspaper pays him, did not come to this conclusion by receiving from his advertisements the work of competent salesmen, good window and store displays, and careful management in the various other phases of the business. He realized that if you wish to have advertising pay you must put life into the selling of the goods, must give the merchandise adequate store and window display, must make the prices reasonable and easy of access to salesmen and customers and must carry out the same general program in your store that you advertise in your paper. In act, your store should be your biggest advertisement, of which your newspaper space should serve the supplementary purpose of carrying news to those who do not patronize you to any extent at present. If you are not willing to lay this foundation for advertising it will not bring you the great returns you desire of it.

Suppose then that you have made your place of business your leading advertisement. There are other things which you must also do if you wish your supplementary newspaper advertising to help you sell goods. You must not forget that timeliness is a mighty big thing in advertising. By anticipating the purchaser's needs you can often increase your sales materially. At the beginning of every season your store and your newspaper space should tell of your ability to supply the needs which e bound to rise. You must not fail to carry ou in your stere any statement you make in your advertising. The substitution of one brand of goods for shother or the change of price upon an article, except under the most warrantable conditions, should not be done. An occurrence or so of this sort will do any business very great harm. And you should not endeavor to push undesirable goods to the exclusion of staple commodities, even though you are sacrificing these goods. After all the majority of buyers are most interested in the price and quality of the everyday necessities of life. Finally, your greatest effort should be to ascertain the people's wants and then make known your ability to supply them: Advertising in a good home newspaper will pay you well if you will do the necessary work in other phases of your business

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY

Bright and early Monday morning, or perhaps late Sunday night, many a bashful swain (there eally are quite a number left vet) will tiptoe up to the front door of his best girl's home and nervously thrust over the sill a little missive in white and resplendent colors. If the offering to be placed upon love's altar is more bulky, or, if the giver lives at quite a distance from the gift's destination, it will probably fail to the postman's lot to deliver it. If the token becomes so pretentious as to take on the form of a large bouquet of roses or a five-pound box of candy it is likely as not that it will go by special delivery or express. In any and every can the motive behind the act is the same. It's all due to the efforts of Dan Cupid that so many hearts will go pitapat on Monday.

The fact that February has 29 days this year will certainly add materially to the observance of St. Valentine's Day. Long before January 1st this seasion was looked forward to with much eagerness by many a heart-sick maiden. Say what you will. Monday effers the supreme opportunity of the Lean Year to start things coming an unmarried women's way. Of course, all the dead-in-car be young, have had their valentine gifts laid aside for many a day and a great number of highly-desirable single men are going to blush over the was disappointed in finding so many empty seats packages to be opened in Monday morning's mail. So St. Valentine's Day this year will work the handlers and distributers of mail harder than ever, but cines "all the world loves a loves" going to object.

PROHIBITION AND STATE TAXES

Concluding Remarks of Congressman Mosa

Near the conclusion of his address, Congressman Moss stated that this was the first time he had been privileged to speak to a Virginia audience. He spoke of the splendid delegation from this state in the present Congress. Mr. Moss said that, of all things, farm folks have most dreaded the name of mortgage and, still, if credit can be gotten on the right terms, it is one of man's greatest blessings. To give the farmer credit on the right terms the Fletcher-Moss bill now before Congress aims above everything else.

Mr. Moss was asked several questions in regard to the workings of the proposed system, all of which he gladly answered. The morning session was brought to an end when the body extended a rising vote of thanks to Congressman Moss and adjourned to meet again at 1:30 p. m.

Business Session in Afternoon

Members of the institute were slow in getting back so that it was after two o'clock when the meeting was called to order again. The body new passed a resolution opposing any increase in tax on moneys in bank, and ordered that a copy of the resolution be sent to the senator and representative now at Richmond.

Mr. Steere read a list of bills in which he thought the institute might be interested. The list was as follows: Torrens, rural credits. state commissioner of moral welfare, uniform warehouse act. He also read extracts from the Torrens land bill and commented helpfully upon different phases of the proposed system for the registration of lands.

Discussion as to Committee's Reports

Lieut. George C. Round now took the opportunity to discuss the report he had caused to be published some time previous in regard to the origin and purpose of the institute. He stated that some points which had arisen because of difference in view point in his report and that of Messrs. Conner and Steere really called for the drawing up of a constitution to take the place of the former one now

Mr. J. J. Conner made a few remarks pertaining to the report of himself and Mr. Steere, after which Mr. Doak took the floor and said that Mr. Round's report made a reflection upon the legislative committee. Mr. Round denied this and gave Mr. Doak a copy of his report with the admonition not to pick out certain portions without considering the general connection. Mr. Round stated how he had called a meeting of the committee, to which call the members did not respond. He then said that the institute called upon him for the report and that after he had made it had asked him to have it published.

President Hutchison ruled that Mr. Round as chairman had a right to make the report. He also stated that there was no report before the house and that the discussion was out of order. Mr. Steere was then granted the floor and he explained the importance of giving due sonsideration to legislative matters and that he was not willing to see them relegated to any minor position on the program. Mr. Steere's deep earnestness in this matter was very noticable and he stated his beliefs in a convincing manner.

Mr. Donk again took the floor and began arguing the issue anew

Several of the audience took this opportunity to leave and Mr. Hutchison remarked. "We will have no one here directly." To straighten out the situation and to insure a present need, Mr. Hutchison appointed Messrs. Round, Steere and Conner as a committee to draw up a constitution. Mr. Hutchison also announced that here-witer the meetings will not begin until 11 o'clock.

The meeting then adjourned to meet again at the courthease on Friday, February IS, the time for the regular monthly meeting. Remember that the meeting will start promptly at 11 o'clock.

SYNOPSIS.

Oranford, an international secret agent back from Europe, decides to go fishing at Pidgin Island. He does not know that Diana, a handsome young girl, has already arrived there Screen, a jewel smuggler, instructs, his son to "get" Granford, who has broken up the father's illicit business. They learn ot his fishing trin.

Oranford meets Diana (Miss Wynne) and learns that she knows Uncle Billy, ruide and fisherman, very well. Cranford sets a telegram stating that his rooms at home had been entered and looted.

Cranford and Diana meet at the end of fishing expedition. The girl becomes scattly excited when she sees a power best approaching Pidgin Island.

CHAPTER V.

> A Mysterious Motorbeat. T the clerk's desk Cranford found a telegram.

The little moroeco notabook had been safely deposited in his safety denosit how at the bank. He was advised to fish without worry.

He strolled out to that end of the veranda where the guides foregatherof. Me knew them all, from the clean, respecting man down to the dissolinte and improvident.

Presently he saw Lester coming up

He was heartly envied by the m jority of the guides because he rowed for one man and had done so for seven years, from June 17 to September.

He had a small boat, easy to handle, and, being a natural mechanic, never tinkered with his two cylinder engine; maveled eight miles an hour, with nevar a glance at the spark plugs, which to date no machine shop could turn out to actisfy Uncle Billy.

He was very near to happiness, as Old shoes, run down at the heel; hopeless trousers, a coat which would have shocked the rarely shockable Warren and a gray flanhel shirt.

The coat he had left with Uncle Billy two years before, and he was wearing it for luck. The comfort of it! Not another stiff collar for thirty days, excepting Sundays, when he intended to loaf or take long walks into the country. Besides, to skip a day added sest to the next day's sport.

Lester sat, on a little oaken, boxlike cover which protected the engine on windy days from the vigorous enslaughts of the waves.

He held the tiller rope in his left hand and with his right scientifically thrust from time to time a battered tin dipper into the water and daibbled the contents into the bait pail, a slender rubber tube thrown ever the side serv ing as a drain.

"I say, Lester, suppose we take a whack just outside of Bare point? Billy's out at Pidgin, and I don't want to swoop down on him before he gets started."

"All right, sir."

Bare point is on the Canadian line. Lester put on a fat, lively chub, and Cranford made a capital cast. At heart he was as eager and as excited as he had been twenty years ago, when his father had explained the intricacies and mysteries of casting a line without having the reel back draw.

Cranford gave line, watched the tip of his rod and struck
