COUNTY HEALTH OFFICER HERE

Dr. Harper Loses No Time in Launching Intensive Health Campaign in County.

Dr. Edgar C. Harper, of Pulaski, Prince William county health officer, and his assistant, Mr. R. R. Whitmore, of Richmond, who will be in charge of the intensive health campaign which will be waged in Prince William during the coming year, arrived in Manassas on Monday. They have established an office at Red Cross headquarters in the M. I. C. Building and have been travelling over the county during the week to make arrangements for starting the work.

Dr. Harper met members of the farmers' union at Brentsville Wednesday evening and arranged to hold a public meeting at the Brentsville school house Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, at which time every member of the community who is interested in the public health work is invited to be present.

Dr. Harper will begin work at Brentsville, establishing headquarters under the personal supervision of Mr. Whitmore. Mr. Whitmore will be responsible particularly for the sanitary survey of the community, while Dr. Harper will have charge of a laboratory in connection with his office at Manassas.

The health campaign is to include the sanitary survey and medical inspection of the schools. The county health officers will visit every home in the communities as they are chosen for the work, to make an investigation of its general sanitary condition with particular reference to sanitary closets, location of barns, and fly screens. Tests will be taken and treatment given for hookworm disease.

Children in the schools will be examined for diseases of the eye, ear, nose, throat and teeth and also for hookworm, and those infected with hookworm will receive free treatment. Dr. Harper also has in view a visit here-on from a tuberculosis specialist.

Dr. Harper will always be ready to give advice on any health problem and will go to any part of the county upon request.

While it is hoped that the physician will soon be assisted by a public health nurse provided by the Red Cross, nothing definite is known, as nurses are very difficult to get at this time. The Red Cross committee, however, has announced that they are in communication with another nurse and hope to complete satisfactory arrangements.

Dr. Harper before the war was associated with the United States Public Health Service and the Virginia board of health. He served overseas with the 29th Division and later with the Third Army in Germany, returning to America the last of July. He was honorably discharged from the service on August 15 and was married on August 22.

Dr. and Mrs. Harper are making their home for the present with Mrs. E. Wood Weir on Centre street.

Mr. Whitmore recently returned from France after fourteen months' service as a sergeant (first class) in the sanitary corps. He also is staying at the home of Mrs. Weir.

JURY DISMISSED IN HALL MURDER CASE NEW TRIAL ORDERED

The jury in the case of the commonwealth against State Prohibition Inspector William C. Hall, charged with the murder of Lawrence D. Hudson, reported at 2:45 o'clock this (Friday) afternoon that there was no possibility of agreeing upon a verdict and was discharged. The jurors from the time they received the case stood for acquittal and six for conviction. The six for conviction proposing punishment of one to ten years.

A new trial has been set for December 29. The four defendants were released under bond of $10,000 each, as before, with State Prohibition Commissioner Peters as surety.

The trial began at the county courthouse Tuesday morning, Judge Samuel G. Brest presiding. Prohibition Officers Harry E. Sweet, W. B. Dunlavy and J. H. Sullivan, indicted jointly with Hall for the murder of Lawrence D. Hudson and Raymond D. Shackelford at Fishers Hill on the night of March 26, elected to be tried separately, whereupon Hall was arraigned, a plea of not guilty was entered and the state began the introduction of testimony.

The verdict was expected to settle the limits of authority for prohibition agents in the enforcement of the dry law in Virginia. State Prohibition Commissioner J. Sidney Peters, the state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League and others attended the trial.

The jury, which was empaneled within an hour, was composed of C. E. ... and Daniel H. Carter, of Manassas; W. E. Partlow and W. L. Sanders, of Catharpin; W. R. Statler, of Quantico; A. S. Robertson, of Washington; J. S. Evans, of Buckhall; Charles H. Keyser, of Thoroughfare; G. W. Shirley, of Waterfall, and E. F. Huffman, of Nokesville.

Commonwealth's Attorney Thos. H. Lion was assisted by C. E. Williams, of Woodstock, commonwealth's attorney for Shenandoah, where the case originated, and Judge F. S. Tavenner, of Woodstock.

Attorney Louis O. Wendenburg was assisted in the defense by M. L. Walton, of Woodstock, and T. E. Didlake and C. J. Meetze, of Manassas.

The four prohibition officers in an automobile on the road at Fishers Hill intercepted an automobile suspected of transporting liquor unlawfully. When the shooting began, Raymond D. Shackelford was instantly killed and Lawrence D. Hudson mortally wounded.

Prosecuting Attorney Williams opened the case against Hall announcing that the point involved is not the legality or illegality of the killing. He described the lay of the land near Fishers Hill where the shooting took place, and the bridge across Tumbling run, where the prohibition officers blocked the road with their big red automobile. He declared that evidence would be produced to show that the inspectors' car approached Hudson's machine which reversed and turned down a byroad. Almost immediately a fusillade of shots were fired, followed by five single shots fired by a man standing in the road in the glare of the headlights, the prosecution attempting to show that the man was Hall. Photographs of the scene of the shooting were introduced, and the bullet-punctured windshield of the alleged bootleggers' car was exhibited in an effort to prove that the bullets which penetrated it were fired from the right side of the car and that the first shots were fired by the prohibition agents.

Attorney Wendenburg for the defense in his opening address to the jury admitted that Hall might have fired the shot which killed Hudson. He denounced the two dead men as "notorious bootleggers" and declared that Hall was pursuing his duty in using his gun against two dangerous criminals who were armed to kill any man who interfered with their violation of the law. Shackelford's widow, the woman with wounded eyelids, was a handkerchief with a black ... and ...

Mrs. Alfred Bly, who lived near the scene of the killing, testified that she had been awakened by her baby and saw from her bedroom five flashes and heard the reports of the revolver shots, all of which were fired from the road. The testimony of Mrs. Bly's sister and husband was in corroboration of her statement and her testimony was maintained under rigid cross-examination by Attorney Wendenburg.

The prosecution introduced testimony on Wednesday to show that Hall and the other dry agents drank a part of the contraband whiskey seized at the time of the killing. Herman Goode, who said he lived 150 yards from the scene of the tragedy and that he had a clear view from his home of the Shenandoah valley turnpike, where the shooting occurred, declared that after taking the dying Hudson to a Winchester hospital, a bottle was obtained from the confiscated automobile and each took a drink. Hall was requested to stand and the witness identified him as one of the men who drank, also naming Sweet.

Dr. Philip Boyd and Misses Z. B. S. Didier and Z. B. Smoot, physician and nurses at the Winchester hospital, who attended the dying Hudson, were called to the stand. Dr. Boyd testified that Hudson said he had fired no shot and that he believed his companion had not fired. During this testimony the jury was excluded from the courtroom. The physician did not ...

H. C. A. Funk, the undertaker who had charge of Shackelford's body, testified that he had found in the man's pocket a small automatic revolver with six bullets not discharged in the magazine and nine others loose, and a receipt for $490 for twenty cases of whiskey.

In an attempt to show that all bullets had been fired from outside the Shackelford-Hudson car, Holmes ... county coroner, testified that ... on the side curtains of the machine showed bullet holes pointing inward, two of the holes indicating fire at close range. The court ordered the automobile brought from Woodstock to Manassas for evidence. The car arrived Thursday morning and the jury left the courtroom to examine the bullet scratches and holes. The crowd from the courthouse followed and the sheriff had some difficulty in keeping the crowd away while the jury made its inspection.

In order to show the spirit of the dry agents in carrying out their duties, T. Russell Cather, who assisted Commonwealth's Attorney Williams at the preliminary hearings, testified that he had heard Hall say:

"I don't understand why there is all this excitement. They were nothing but a pair of bootleggers."

Mrs. Oliver, Hudson's sister, testified that she had received the dead body of her brother and buried it and that he was eighteen years and three months old. Mrs. Shackelford testified that she had buried her husband four days after the shooting.

Roy Adams, the last witness for the prosecution, declared he had known Hall for twenty years and Shackelford since 1912; that Hall and Shackelford knew each other and that Hall was a neighbor of Hudson.

The prosecution in resting its case reserved the right to introduce another material witness as soon as he could be brought to Manassas.

The defense opened its case shortly after noon yesterday with the introduction of a surveyor's plot of the scene of the tragedy, presented by B. L. Rose, surveyor, who explained it to the jury.

Hall's fellow prohibition agents and Joseph Williams, their chauffeur testified that the first shot was fired from the Shackelford-Hudson car. The agents testified that the machine was sighted more than a mile away, sweeping the road with a spotlight.

"I begged my partner not to shoot," were the words of Hudson as he staggered from the car, mortally wounded.

according to the testimony of Inspector Dunlavy.

Inspector Sweet, whom Herman Goode accused of drinking at the contraband car after the shooting, testified that he had never taken a drink in his life. Inspector Sullivan declared that the ride with the wounded men to the hospital was made at the rate of a mile a minute.

The chauffeur, according to the defense, was the only witness of the shooting who took no part in it.

Inspector Dunlavy was on the stand this morning and his cross-examination was completed in a short time.

Inspector Hall, the defendant, then took the stand. He told of waiting for the arrival of the bootleggers' car and how it was stopped on the Valley turnpike. He approached the side of the car, addressed the occupants; he said, saw the liquor cartons in the back of the car and told the two men that they were under arrest. Shackelford then reversed the car, he said, and Hall stepped on the running board, holding on to the side of the car. The car stopped and Shackelford fired at him and he returned two shots as two other shots were fired from within the car. Hudson, seated beside Shackelford, grasped him around the neck, drawing him into the car, and struck him over the head with a bottle. Hudson continued to hold him as the car ran down the road and Hall fired two more shots, this time at his captor, just before the car ran into an embankment and he was thrown out.

Shackelford leaning back in his seat, his head thrown back and his left hand still on the wheel.

Hall denied that he had told Frank Thomas "or anybody else" that he would "get even" with Shackelford if it took him twenty years to do it.

Hall denied the statement of Witness Goode that the inspectors drank whiskey at the scene of the tragedy, declared that nobody drank any liquor there, and also denied that shots were fired after the car had stopped.

W. M. Sneed, of Danville, testified that he rode with Shackelford in Shackelford's car in February and that Shackelford, whom he knew very well, said he owed only $300 on his car and would be out of debt after three more trips, the witness understanding that he meant trips to Baltimore for whiskey.

Shackelford, according to the witness, was uneasy about Hall's activities in the Valley and said, "If he ever puts his foot on my running board he'll never get another."

The prosecution asked how much liquor Sneed had carried in his own car on a trip from Baltimore about six weeks ago, and the witness declined to answer.

Lorene Haley, a fourteen-year-old inmate of the Bon Air Industrial Home, testified that she had made four or five trips alone with Shackelford, whom she had known about a year, when he was carrying whiskey in his car. He threatened to shoot her, she said, if she told about the whiskey and said he would shoot anybody who interfered with him while carrying whiskey.

Constable Elyms, of Chesterfield county, said he had an encounter with Shackelford in February or March, when he had blocked a road west of Richmond with two Ford cars. He asked Shackelford to help him move one of the Fords out of the way and started to unbutton the storm curtain on the side of Shackelford's car. Shackelford, seeing his movement, fired his pistol at him and started his car, firing from the car as he moved away and driving his car into one of the Fords to clear the way for his escape.

Mrs. Shackelford, brought back to the stand by the commonwealth, denied that her husband had carried whiskey except the time he was killed. Several other commonwealth witnesses testified to the good character of Shackelford. W. E. McCoy, of Manassas, was called to the stand by the prosecution in an effort to show that the inspectors could not have seen into the bootleggers' car.

RED CROSS HOME SERVICE RECORD

Soldiers Receive Friendly Assistance in Many Problems—Many Visit Office.

(Home Service Department)

Are the boys who went over the top in France successfully going over the top into civil life? If not, why and how can we civilians carry on and back them up as we did during the war?

This is the problem which we are confronting everywhere from the smallest hamlet to the great metropolis.

The Red Cross through its home service department has obligated itself to solve this problem, but it can only be done if the people co-operate and give their support. The Prince William County Chapter is calling for this support.

The services which are rendered are varied. In order that every boy might know that the chapter is anxious to help him in any way, Miss Eleanor Davis, secretary of the home service section, has during the past four weeks called on 139 boys in their homes and inquired as to whether they are carrying their insurance, whether the allotments made by them came through regularly and the full amount was received, whether they received all back pay, their bonus and five-cent transportation from camp to their home, whether they had while at camp taken Liberty Bonds and not received them or been unable to complete the payments and not received the refund, and whether they were discharged as physically fit as they were when they went in, and if not, if they had filed their claim for compensation and asked for the training the Federal Board for Vocational Education will give them in any line.

Miss Davis has endeavored to make each boy realize that it is his duty to himself, his family, his town or county, and to his country, to claim his just dues from the government. We are not living under tyrannical rule, but under a true democracy, which signifies that our government is going to do everything possible for the boys who have been willing to give their all for their country. But no one is infallible, and as the work of our government depends on the actions of individuals, mistakes sometimes are made. If these are not corrected there will in time develop a spirit of unrest which will tend to undermine our government. It is therefore the duty of every man who stood by his country during the last two years to stand by it now by asking for compensation, training, back pay, etc., rather than by nursing a grudge and a spirit of discontent.

Fifty-seven boys have called during the last month at the Red Cross office located in the M. J. C. Building in Manassas for assistance in one way or another. They have realized that only a government could offer insurance at such a low rate and that the opportunity is too good to be allowed to slip by.

Through the Red Cross two claims for the payment of insurance have been registered. Three have asked assistance in securing back allotment. The Bureau of War Risk Insurance has asked that such requests come from the home service department of the Red Cross in order that time and work may be conserved, the Red Cross knowing the proper channels through which such matters can be passed with greatest speed. Several checks have been returned to the bureau because the allottees could not be located. Through the Red Cross these checks were delivered to the proper persons.

Two boys who have lost their discharge certificates secured duplicates through the aid of home service. Assistance was rendered three boys in claiming Liberty Bonds which had not been delivered although the payments on them had been completed before the boys were discharged. Twenty boys have been sent to a doctor for examination with a view to filing their claims for compensation, should their disability warrant it. Three of these boys have been referred to the Federal Board for Vocational Training and training for one has already been secured.

The Red Cross is particularly interested in seeing that every boy who is not up to the mark physically is examined and his claim for compensation filed if necessary. The compensation offered by the government is payable to everyone whom the doctor considers ten per cent disabled. It has nothing whatever to do with insurance he may carry. He may receive compensation although he does not carry insurance.

Mexico is trying to be diplomatic. Mexican cavalry troops, it is explained, fired on an American airplane, wounding Capt. McNabb, because it was flying so low that it frightened Mexican horses grazing in the field.

The average salary paid school teachers in Lynchburg is the highest in the state, according to the report made to the State Senate by Superintendent Harris Hart. It is hardly a proud record, however, as the white teachers receive an average of $900.08 and the negroes get $579.25. Norfolk is the only other city with an average over $800. Prince William doubtless is many rungs further down the ladder.

HOUSE DEFEATS SUFFRAGE

Virginia joined Louisiana, Alabama, Georgia and Florida in refusing to ratify the Susan R. Anthony amendment to the federal constitution when the state senate on Wednesday refused to consider the matter at this session and the house of delegates without debate voted against its adoption 61 to 51. The resolution calls for the rejection of the resolution as an unwarranted, unnecessary, undemocratic and dangerous interference with the rights reserved the states.

While Virginia was expected to reject the amendment, surprise doubtless will be felt in many quarters that the supporters of woman suffrage were so overwhelmingly in the minority.

MORE TELEPHONE SERVICE

The telephone situation used to be a joke, someone has observed, and now it is a tragedy. It is, therefore, a big message that a brief little news item in the Independent Hill correspondence brings to Prince William readers. The telephone office at Independent Hill is to be reopened after several idle years, during which time the upper part of the county has been almost wholly out of immediate communication with the district below the run, in these days a deplorable situation for any section of the country.

The great need of better telephone service in Prince William county was never more forcibly demonstrated than a few weeks ago when it was impossible to deliver to a Prince William mother news of the critical illness of her soldier son, who died before she was able to reach his side. The message came over the wire to Manassas, a distance of thirty miles, and was sent out from Manassas by a messenger on horseback and by telephone from Manassas to Occoquan and thence by messenger back to the country between. It was during a rainy time and it was uncertain whether either message could be delivered, as travel through the mud can become very difficult in Prince William. The mother reached her soldier son less than forty miles away, several hours after his death.

Dramatic instances, however, are not needed—it is not a matter of debate. Improvements have started.

It is now possible to reach Independent Hill and neighboring points on to Dumfries, and wires are going up in the direction of Occoquan. Although no public announcement has been made improvements also are in store for Nokesville and vicinity.

BRAVE MEN AND OTHERS

"I'm fond of brave people," said Old Cap'n Bill.
"I like to hear tell of adventures that thrill."

I take off my hat to the men of the past,

Who felt the ship sinkin' an' stuck till the last.

But when I see folks that jump in where it's deep,

And laugh as the treacherous waves round them sweep,

There's one class of humans I say could be spared;

The people who haven't the sense to be scared.

"A man who has fought in the trenches will run

When he sees a fool friend start to play with a gun.

The staunchest and stoutest seaman afloat

Is afraid of a summer boy rocking a boat.

The man who is fittest to plan and to serve

Is the one who knows danger and braces his nerve.

The worst of the hardships in life are prepared

By people who haven't the sense to be scared.

JURY DISMISSED IN HALL CASE

John W. Carter, commonwealth's attorney for Danville, placed on the stand by the defense, testified that Hall had two reputations in Danville—an exceedingly bad reputation among the disorderly and an excellent reputation among law-abiding people.

Argument followed Friday afternoon and the case was given to the jury at six o'clock, at which time court adjourned for supper. After forty minutes' deliberation, beginning about seven o'clock, the jury announced that they were unable to reach a verdict and adjournment was made to ten o'clock this morning (Saturday).
