Three hospitals have all the latest equipment

By MOLLY RORER

Prince William, Lorton, and Stafford communities have the advantage of three full-service hospitals at their disposal for their medical needs. The Prince William Hospital, Lorton’s Mary Washington Hospital, and Stafford’s Prince William Hospital have all been renovated and expanded in recent years, providing state-of-the-art medical facilities.

Prince William Hospital offers chemotherapy and radiation therapy for cancer patients. The hospital has also installed a new neonatal unit designed to care for premature and newborn babies with special needs. Also new to Mary Washington Hospital is a pain relief system for obstetric patients. The hospital also opened in January a neonatal unit designed to care for premature and newborn babies with special needs.

Lorton’s Mary Washington Hospital has added a state-of-the-art mammography machine for osteoporosis scanning. This machine can detect a loss of bone density up to one year before disease symptoms develop. Both Prince William Hospital and Stafford’s Prince William Hospital contracted the services of two neonatologists and a group of specialists trained nurses and other personnel for its new birthing center. The hospital also opened in January a neonatal unit designed to care for premature and newborn babies with special needs.

The hospitals offer a variety of services including chemotherapy, radiation therapy, and neonatal care. They are all staffed with experienced medical professionals who are dedicated to providing the best possible care for their patients.

When you’re thinking about having a baby, call M.O.M.

M.O.M.

M.O.M. has been out of a great concern for the people involved in the birthing experience. As a result of this concern, we offer M.O.M.—Mothers On Mission.

At Alexandria Hospital, the obstetric and outpatient program combines our knowledge and experience to help the whole family that is in this center.

For those starting a family, we offer a "Thinking of Having a Baby" class, for others, we offer a class on breastfeeding and infant care. And, secondly, courses for the expectant parents, like Gynecology, Early Pregnancy, Short Stay and VBAC. So, let the method of delivery be a choice you have the right to make—does traditional or professional work for you.

Our goal is to help the family involved in this unique experience, so that family is being conforme to their own capabilities and needs. Both a hospital and a private practice will be available to help the expectant mother and her new born.

We believe in holistic care—keeping the patient at the center of the care process. And, secondly, the course for the expectant parents, like Gynecology, Early Pregnancy, Short Stay and VBAC.

Chambers of commerce serve business, public

In ERE PRICE of the Prince William News

The purpose of the Prince William Chamber of Commerce is to serve the two chambers of commerce in the Prince William area, one in the north and one in the southern part of the county. The purpose of their chambers is to help businesses in the area to grow and be successful by providing services that meet the needs of local businesses. They provide, among other things, networking opportunities, educational events, and resources that help members develop their businesses.

MILITARY

Belvoir area’s largest military base

By CLINT SCHEMNER

As you drive Fort Belvoir on an average day, you see some of the Army’s largest military installations—approximately 10,000 acres, more than 30,000 activities, and 130,000 military personnel and civilians. The Belvoir area is the largest military installation in the United States.

The Belvoir area is located in Virginia, near the Potomac River. It was established in 1881 as a training site for the U.S. Army. It was later expanded to include other facilities, such as the Quantico Marine Corps Base and the drop zone for the Army’s Airborne units.

The Belvoir area is the largest military installation in the United States, with over 30,000 military personnel and civilians. It is also known for its proximity to Washington, D.C., which makes it a strategic location for military operations.

Future war fought at Quantico first

By SUE SCHMIDT
The Washington Post

They call it the crucible of the Marine Corps—a stage where future leaders are forged through battle. They learn to lead men at war, to navigate the political arena, and to handle the pressure of high-stakes decision-making.

The Marine Corps is the oldest continuous military land force in the United States, tracing its origins back to the American Revolution. Since then, it has played a critical role in American history, from the Battle of Midway to the Gulf War.

Quantico, Virginia, is the Marine Corps' headquarters, and it's where future leaders are trained. The Marine Corps Officer Candidates School, located at Quantico, is one of the most prestigious military leadership schools in the country.

Students at the school undergo rigorous training, which includes marksmanship, tactics, and leadership exercises. They learn to work with a team, to make decisions under pressure, and to lead by example. The goal is to produce leaders who are ready to lead Marines into battle.

Quantico is also home to the Marine Corps Base at Quantico, which serves as a training location for the entire Marine Corps. The base is a bustling hub of activity, with soldiers and sailors practicing their craft in various fields.

From aviation to intelligence, from engineering to combat, the base is a proving ground for the future leaders of the Marine Corps. Whether they're learning to fly a helicopter, or developing new weapons systems, or studying the latest in battlefield communications, the men and women of Quantico are preparing for the challenges of the modern world.

Quantico is a place where tradition meets innovation, where history is preserved and new ideas are celebrated. It's a place where leaders are made, and where the future of the Marine Corps is being shaped.

Quantico is a place where the future is being fought.

Fans, players find plenty to do

For Prince William County sports fans, the last three years have been a real treat. The Virginia Capital Tornadoes, a semi-pro softball team, are in the playoffs for the second straight year. The Virginia Stars, a professional soccer team, have a good hope of getting into the playoffs this year. And the Virginia Tech football team is playing some of the best football in the nation.

In addition to these attractions, there are also several other sports teams in the area that are worth checking out. The Virginia Beach Stars, a professional basketball team, are playing some great basketball this year. The Virginia Beach Cyclones, a professional baseball team, are also playing well and have a good chance of making the playoffs.

For those who enjoy tennis, the Virginia Beach Tennis Center is a great place to go. They offer a variety of programs for both adults and children, including lessons, camp, and tournaments.

National parks highlight history, natural beauty

By MOLLIE RONDE

Prince William County is graced with two national parks on its northeastern border, one of the two managed by the National Park Service and the other, one managed by the Maryland Park Service. The Manassas National Battlefield Park is located in Maryland, while the Manassas National Battlefield Park is located in Virginia.

The Maryland Park is situated in Prince William County, just south of the Potomac River, and contains a number of important historic sites associated with the Civil War.

A Revolutionary War battle was fought near Manassas in 1781. However, it was the Battle of Bull Run (or First Bull Run) in 1861 that was the focus of this area's earliest military conflicts. The Civil War battle was fought over several days in August, 1861. It was the first major battle of the war and resulted in a Confederate victory.

In 1862, the Union forces returned to the area and fought another major battle, the Second Battle of Bull Run (or Second Manassas), which resulted in another Confederate victory.

The battlefield area is now a National Battlefield Park, and the area is managed by the National Park Service. The park includes a number of important historic sites, including several battlefields, a headquarters area, and a museum.

The park is open year-round, and visitors can explore the battlefield area on foot, by bike, or by driving the battlefield loop. The park also offers a variety of educational programs and guided tours, including a number of guided battlefield tours.

The park is open daily from sunrise to sunset, and admission is free. Visitors can find more information about the park and its programs on the National Park Service website.

With the exception of the Potomac River, which has been butted by the town of Woodbridge and thirty-six miles south of Washington, there is little to distinguish Prince William County from Virginia. There are no mountains, no bluffs, and no dramatic scenic vistas to attract visitors. What the county has is history—its early days and the Revolutionary War that it witnessed. It then became a place to which the Mar- Line Corps Air-Ground Combat Center, at Quantico Marine Base, and the National Cemetery are just a few of the 35 parks and recreation areas in the county. Be sure to visit the Weems-Botts "Car Run" Street Rods, at PWC Park. Mid-month, PWC Park Authority and the National Cemetery offer a free family picnic, with music, games, and an antique car show.

The Old Stone House was a hospital during the Civil War. It is one of the few remaining structures in the county. The house was originally built in 1796 and part of the original structure remains. Cultural arts well represented here

By TONY MALTZAKIS
The Potomac News

Prince William County's Arts Federation, with its headquarters at 8211 Stonestreet, Prince William Plaza, Suite 125, Prince William Plaza Mall, is one of those organizations that provides an organization for the performing arts in a community.

The federation, which is a non-profit organization that supports the arts, sponsors a number of projects in the county. It has a board of directors, which meets monthly to discuss issues related to the arts, such as funding and training for artists.

The federation is governed by a board of directors, and the federation is staffed by a full-time executive director, who is responsible for overseeing the day-to-day operations of the federation.

The federation is supported by state grants, money from state grants, and donations from local businesses and individuals.

Prince William-Montgomery's Cultural and Arts Commission — will come to fruition later this summer. However, the federation is now in the planning stages.

The federation is open to any county or city resident who is interested in the arts, and the federation is staffed by a full-time executive director, who is responsible for overseeing the day-to-day operations of the federation.

HOW TO CHOOSE THE RIGHT CPA FOR YOU

For the past ten years we have been serving Northern Virginia and we know that selecting a Certified Public Accountant is not an easy task. We have compiled the following tips to help you choose the right CPA...

1. Look for Certified Public Accountants (CPA) who are members of the Virginia Society of Certified Public Accountants. This ensures that the accountant has met the rigorous standards set by the society.

2. Check the accountant’s credentials. Make sure they are licensed in the state of Virginia.

3. Ask for references. A good CPA should be able to provide references of previous clients.

4. Consider the accountant’s level of experience. A more experienced CPA may be better suited for complex financial situations.

5. Look for a CPA who specializes in your industry. For example, if you are a small business owner, a CPA with experience in small business accounting may be more suitable.

6. Check the CPA’s fees. Make sure the fees are reasonable and within your budget.

7. Finally, choose a CPA based on your personal comfort level. You should feel comfortable discussing your financial affairs with the accountant.

Remember, choosing the right CPA is an important decision and should not be taken lightly. Follow these tips to ensure you make the best choice for your financial needs.

Change is assured, but what sort will it be?

By GARY CRAIG

Kapid urbanization has Prince William County officials taking steps that they hope will allow the county to exercise better control over its future.

New ways to fund county government and strides that officials say will give the county more autonomy have been major issues tackled this year.

• A transportation district that will provide funds for mass transit systems is set to go before voters in November.
• County officials have taken a hard look at a new form of assessment.
• County planners have tried to control Prince William's continued development boom.

As county officials eye the future, some residents charge that the past is being forgotten. The Massas National Battlefield Park — the county's largest tourist attraction — has been at the center of controversy because of plans to build high-rise developments near-by. Many once-rural sylvan stretches, areas that many long-time residents associated with the county's character, have been steamrollered to make way for residential and commercial developments. Area legislators spent part of their time in session this year considering a bill that would place tighter restrictions on builders who must down trees to make room for their developments.

The Virginia General Assembly this year gave the county the authority to create a transportation district. The district, which includes Stafford County and the City of Manassas, will impose a 2-percent tax on vehicle fuels with money earmarked for mass transportation projects.

A trial commuter rail project — a train route for commuters traveling to and from the Washington, D.C., metropolitan area — will be a beneficiary of the district's funds. Part of this money will also go to other mass transit projects, such as vanpools, commuter buses and commuter parking lots. County officials and legislators hope to persuade the General Assembly to allow this fund to pay for road construction as well, a use not allowed under the district's current by-laws.

As commuters stuck in Interstate 95 and 1-66 back-ups will readily attest, transportation is a major headache county officials are trying to relieve.

Traffic jams have been one of several problems of the county's growth as a bedroom community, challenging the work force to commute to work. A number of county officials believe that industrial and commercial growth is necessary for the county's future.

Government form may change

According to a number of residents who are proponents of the change, the current county form of government is not working well. A number of county residents have pushed for a change in the county's form of government. "We need a change," said one resident. "The current form of government is not working for us."

Several residents have mentioned the possibility of a change in the county's form of government. "We need a change," said one resident. "The current form of government is not working for us."

The current form of government may not be the only option for Prince William County. "We need a change," said one resident. "The current form of government is not working for us."

On the other hand, detractors argue that the current form of government is working well. "We don't need a change," said one opponent. "The current form of government is working well for us."

Government officials have stated that they are considering a change in the county's form of government. "We are considering a change," said one official. "We are not sure yet what we will do."

The possibility of a change in the county's form of government has drawn a mixed reaction from residents. Some residents support the change, while others oppose it. "We need a change," said one resident. "The current form of government is not working for us."

Prince William Board of County Supervisors

Prince William County: Horseshoes, Not Horses
WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — When the horses next make their way to Colonial Williamsburg, they’ll have to wait their turn. The city has a new plan to prevent them from being too close to the historic structures.

The city of Williamsburg has announced plans to build a new stable for the horses, which will be located on the east side of the city. The stable will be able to hold up to 200 horses at a time, and will be built with materials that will allow for easy maintenance.

The city says the new stable will allow for better care of the horses, as well as provide a place for the public to visit and learn more about the city’s equine history.

The project is expected to cost around $10 million, and will be funded through a combination of private donations and city funds. Construction is scheduled to begin in early 2023, with the new stable expected to open in late 2024.

In other news, the city has also announced plans to build a new park for the local community. The park will feature a playground, picnic areas, and a walking trail.

The city hopes to begin construction on the park in 2023, with the park expected to open in late 2024.

For more information, visit the city of Williamsburg’s website or call 757-220-0200.

Concrete continues to spread throughout area

By ED MILLER

The Prince William County Planning and Economic Development Administration has approved lots for new businesses and homes in the county's west end and southwest areas.

Permits for new residential and business developments are being issued at a monthly rate of about 900, up from 500 in the same month last year. The county issued 3,925 building permits for new homes in July, compared to 3,475 in July 1985.

More than 100,000 new houses were approved in Prince William last year, compared to 90,000 in 1984. The permit fee for a single family home is $170. The fee is $20 for any plumbing, electrical or mechanical work that is part of a permit.

The permit fee for plumbing in a new building is 3.2 cents per square foot. The fee for electrical service while construction is underway costs $20.

People building homes which are to be served by public sewer and water systems must apply for a building permit before construction begins. Those building homes which are to be served by private septic systems must receive approval from Development Administration prior to beginning construction of any new building.

In Prince William, permits for retail buildings are issued by the Department of Planning and Economic Development Administration. For office buildings, permits are issued by the Department of Planning and Development Administration. Commercial and office developments are now being planned at the west of the Lake Ridge planned unit development, at Balls Ford and Prince William, and at the site of the I-66 and U.S. 29 interchange.

The first stop for most Prince William residents is the Prince William County Planning Office located in the McCoart Administrative Center, located in the southwest area of the county. The office is under the jurisdiction of the Prince William County Planning and Economic Development Administration. The office is open Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The office issues permits for home repairs or improvements such as additions, garages and decks. People who have approved lots for a project are required to pay a fee and receive a permit from DDA prior approval by DDA and additional permit fees are required for any plumbing, electrical or mechanical work that is part of a permit.

expansion and strip development
bounding Highway 234, on the edges of the city stretches one of the old. The city is a study in contrasts.

Church and Center streets border
Old Town Manassas, a throwback

Old meets new on the streets of Manassas

Center Street, at the heart of Old Town Manassas, still preserves the air of a turn-of-the-century commercial center.

According to statistics released by the chairman of the committee in June, the county residents have voted for rezoning last June for a residential plan resigned in protest. The county also has a larger regional airport, but the flight was canceled. The board appoints a county administrator, who serves as the county's chief executive officer and is responsible for implementing the county's policies and administering the county's affairs. The administrator is appointed by the board of supervisors and is confirmed by the county commissioners.

There's more to Lorton than prison issues

By KENT POLICE
The Potomac News

Not all Lorton residents live there for days. About 3,600 people live on the land that was originally set aside for the expansion of the prison. Many have turned the land into an unincorporated part of the Northern Virginia suburb.

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors has designated the area as a "designated" part of the county.

The area is somewhat isolated. It is mostly flat, except for the Lorton Correctional Institute. The area is not a "zoning" area.

GROWING POPULATION NEEDS MORE SCHOOLS

The demand for classroom space is one issue the School Board faces more often than it wishes. Between the current and projected growth, the number of seats will be tripled for school age children. To accommodate this growth, the School Board has proposed a construction program totaling $161 million. The cost for new schools will be about $127 million, and the cost for extensive renovation of existing schools will be about $34 million.

The School Board has proposed a construction program totaling $161 million. The cost for new schools will be about $127 million, and the cost for extensive renovation of existing schools will be about $34 million.

The School Board will continue to monitor the growth in the county and make decisions about new schools as needed.

School Board

The seven members of the School Board are appointed by the Board of County Supervisors. They make policies governing the school system.

Meetings are held at the Independent School Board building, 3103 Old Bridge Road, Dumfries.

The School Board welcomes public input and encourages attendance at its meetings.

Everyone wants good care for his children

By MOLLIE RORRER

The Planning Council, an operator gives him a first aid, stress management and education. He works with the family to be sure that the children are receiving the care they need.

The Planning Council serves to children. In addition to the public school systems here, the Prince William area boasts a number of private child care providers. These families need private child care services, including:

- A tuberculosis screening
- Smar/_pational student Sarah McLaughlin, 3Vi, gets an early start on learning to read. Preschool student Sarah McLaughlin, 3 Vi, gets an early start on learning to read.

Can you recognize the warning signs of adolescent suicide?

Every 60 minutes an American youth takes his own life. Heavily we become the task of identifying the signs of suicide — learning at least 60 times a year. Many of the young people we talk to about suicide have been recognized and treated.

- Arched shoulders
- Poor performance in school
- Lack of interest in school
- Removal of pets
- Lack of energy and disturbance in sleeping or eating
- Family violence
- Alcohol and drug abuse
- Aggressive behavior that gets out of control, expresses feelings of helplessness
- Thoughts or dreams that question the value of one's own life

If you care concerned about your child's mental and personal health, call the Prince William Health Department. We can offer advice every day through a crisis intervention program. We teach them how to cope with stress, anxiety, and emotional problems, involving both the family and the child in mutual treatment. Your child's life is precious. Don't risk losing it. Call 491-4646.

Colleges offer four-year or two-year programs

By NOLLE BONNER

Higher education opportunities abound in Prince William County, Stafford and Fairfax counties, which are home to two four-year colleges and the state's largest community college.

The two four-year institutions in the area are in Prince William County, long recognized as the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University. This is one of the top institutions in the state, a tradition of academic excellence. It offers a wide range of programs in fields including engineering, business, education, and health sciences.

The state-supported, coeducational George Mason University, now with a student body of 2,700 bodies, has a law school and a doctorate degree program. It is considered one of the top institutions in the state.

Despite being so young, GMU has a strong reputation for its programs in fields such as business, engineering, arts, and humanities. It has a strong athletic program, including the football team and basketball teams.

To the south, Mary Washington College in Fredericksburg, which is located in the Northern Virginia Community College offers two-year programs in fields such as business, engineering, and arts. It is known for its strong academic programs and student life. The college also has graduate programs, including a master's degree in business administration.

Tuition for this coming year is $1,145 per credit hour, or $550 per semester. The college also offers financial aid to help students afford their education.

For more information, visit the college's website at www.gmu.edu or call 371-3518. You can also visit the campus in the Northern Virginia Community College.
