SUDDEN DEATH OF LAWRENCE E. POPE

GREAT SHOCK TO MANY FRIENDS

Remains Carried to Alexandria Cemetery and Interred with Masonic Honors—Flowers of Love and Sympathy.

Mr. Lawrence E. Pope, a well-known and highly esteemed citizen of Manassas, died suddenly at his home here on last Sunday evening at about 7 o'clock. His death was wholly unexpected and came as a great shock to his many friends. Previous to his death he had contracted a deep cold and for several days had been feeling badly, although continuing his duties out of doors. Sunday he remained in the house and in the evening became worse. A physician was called in, but he soon passed beyond all medical aid. His death was due to congestion of the lungs. He had reached the age of 47 years.

Mr. Pope was born in Clifton, Va., and his early days were spent with his aunt, Mrs. Lizzie Buckley, of that place. His parents died when he was a child. Later in life Mr. Pope became an engineer for the Southern and for some time served in that capacity. He was married to Miss Mary Lynch, eldest daughter of Mr. M. Lynch, of Manassas, and the couple located here, Mr. Pope becoming car inspector for the Washington division of the Southern railway and for a number of years had held this position.

The funeral services were held at the residence here last Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, the Rev. Philip A. Arthur, officiating. Mr. Pope was a Mason and a member of Manassas Lodge No. 32, and the funeral services were in charge of this lodge. The pallbearers were H. D. Wenrich, W. H. Clark, A. J. Kidwell, G. E. Allen, William Buckley, of Clifton, and G. Walker Merchant, all fraternity brothers of the deceased. About 50 officers and members from the local Masonic order went with the body to Alexandria. They were met in that city by officers and members of the Alexandria-Washington Lodge No. 22, and Andrew Jackson Lodge No. 120.

Under charge of all these Masonic brethren the body was taken to Union cemetery in Alexandria for burial. The services at the grave were beautifully conducted by the Rev. H. L. Quarles, acting worshipful master.

As showing the high regard held for Mr. Pope the Southern railway issued passes to all attending the funeral. Many and beautiful were the floral offerings, among them being a wreath of American beauty roses, presented by the medical profession of Manassas; a floral square and compass, with A. F. & A. M. inscribed across it, by the Masonic Lodge; a piece representing the gates ajar, by the wife and daughter; a wreath composed of tea roses, sweet peas and ferns, by the Mutual Telephone company, and tributes from J. F. Lewis, C. F. M. Lewis, W. H. Hayden, F. A. Lewis, Harvey Lynch, Mr. and Mrs. George Chisholm, Master Robert Lynch, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Lynch, H. D. and J. D. Melton, W. L. Smith, M. Lynch, and a wreath from the engineers of the Southern railway.

The deceased leaves a widow and little daughter, and a brother, William P. Pope, of Baltimore.

THE DEMOCRAT extends its deepest sympathy to the bereaved family.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mrs. L. E. Pope wishes, through THE DEMOCRAT, to thank all friends and societies for their kindness during the illness and death of her husband, Lawrence E. Pope.

NEXT INSTITUTE LARGEST OF YEAR

INTERESTING SPEAKERS COMING

Two-Day Affair to be Held at Court-house on Thursday and Friday, January 16 and 17—Interesting Program.

By PROF. H. F. BUTTON
Secretary Northern Virginia Farmers' Institute

The January Farmers' Institute will be a two-day affair and will be held on Thursday and Friday, January 16-17, at the courthouse. As it has been the custom in former years, the January meeting will be the large meeting of the year. A fine program has been arranged and no effort will be spared to make it the most helpful meeting ever held.

On account of the dates coinciding with those of the Prince William County Teachers' Institute the program of each will be enriched by a larger number of speakers than could have been secured for either. The teachers will attend one or more of the sessions of the Farmers' Institute while the farmers will have the opportunity to hear Drs. Freeman and Heck of the State Board of Health and University of Virginia.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Farmers' Institute will have an especially rich program in the topics of interest to themselves. The speakers are all of unusual ability in their lines, some of them being well known to Manassas audiences. Dr. Jas. Hornbaker is a native of Prince William county and well known to many members of the Institute. He is a distinguished veterinary surgeon and is one of the staff of the Bureau of Animal Industry. Whatever he has to say concerning contagious diseases of animals will have the weight of one who speaks with authority.

Mr. Luzader, who has had many years' experience as a breeder of poultry, has had much success as an Institute speaker, having been here one time on a Railway Institute train.

Prof. Howard, of the Dairy and Food Division, Richmond, is new to Manassas audiences, but the high reputation enjoyed by his department and his own qualifications, insure us that he will have a strong, vital message.

Doctors Freeman and Heck are so well known in the State that any mention of their abilities would be superfluous. The members of the Farmers' Institute are all so deeply interested in schools and the welfare of children that the subjects discussed will be as fully appreciated by them as by the teachers. It is, however, to the Woman's Auxiliary of the Farmers' Institute that these men will make their strongest appeal for better sanitary conditions for children.

PROGRAM

Following is the program:

THURSDAY MORNING	Contagious Diseases of Animals—Dr. Jas. Hornbaker.
THURSDAY AFTERNOON	Round Table and Selling Farm Produce.
FRIDAY MORNING	Fruit—Capt. J. E. Beverly, of The Plains.
FRIDAY AFTERNOON	Milk—Corbin Thompson, Woodbridge.
	Eggs—Boston Steeds.
	Meat—To be filed.
	Grain—To be filed.
THURSDAY, 8 P. M.	Illustrated Lecture—Dr. Allen Freeman.
FRIDAY MORNING	Poultry for Profit—M. M. Linsler, Calpeper.
	Medical Inspection in Schools—Dr. Heck, University of Virginia.
FRIDAY AFTERNOON	The Value of Sheep—W. B. Doak, Clifton.
	Dairying for Profit—Prof. Howard, Dairy and Food Division, Richmond.

PERMANENT ROADS; GAINESVILLE DISTRICT

STATE AID—A DIRECT PROFIT

The Taxpayer for Every Dollar He Expends Receives Half a Dollar Extra from the State, Says Mr. Heuser.

There is still a direct profit, the State aid, that was not mentioned in the last article. Being by law clearly defined as one-half of the expenditures of the district or county issuing bonds, it will amount to forty-eight thousand dollars in this case, and the taxpayer for the dollar he expends receives a dollar and a half from the State.

In a former communication, repeated last week in the Manassas Journal, the outlines of the work were pointed out; suffice it to say that the order of the court clearly points out the plans, and that in consequence all sections of Gainesville district will receive the desired benefits. The plan outlined will give the several roads north and south and several roads east and west, interlocking and thereby being of advantage to all, and practically nearly all the taxpayers can reach the pike within a mile and a half or less. There still remains the vital question of taxation and before concluding must be fully met. The assessment of Gainesville district in 1912 was one million eight thousand dollars. It is necessary in conforming with the law to create a sinking fund and to issue bonds for not less than 34 years. After selling the required forty-eight thousand bonds and paying interest at 6 per cent, the requirements are as follows: For sinking fund, $461.80; interest, $2,880. Total necessary, $3,341.80. This would increase the taxes thirty-one cents per one hundred dollars.

Selling a five one-half per cent bond, the sinking fund will be $509.80; interest, $25.40. Total necessary, $3,149, or 29 1-10c on one hundred dollars. Placing the bonds at 5 per cent it reads thus: Sinking fund, $567; interest, $2,400. Total necessary, $2,967.00; 27c increase in taxation for one hundred dollars.

If we can place the bonds at a lower rate of course the increase of taxation would still be less. If we can, as the law allows, lend our sinking funds out to private parties we may realize six per cent therefrom while only paying 5 per cent or less for the money. The increase of the taxation as maintained above is reduced by the present levy of 7 1/2 cents raised for permanent road improvement. We are therefore able to cut down the above levies to that amount and would pay at six per cent 23c extra, at 5 1/2 per cent 21 1/2 cents, at 5 per cent, 20 cents, and proportionately less as the assessed valuations increase. Nor is it necessary to issue the bonds all at once as it will take a number of years to finish the improvement. In conclusion: Admitting that the younger men of our community will bear the larger share of increased taxation and enjoy longer the benefits it may not be amiss to call their attention to the fact that the generation now passing away built up the waste places caused by the civil war, built up a school system, bridged the streams, built a court-house, improved the building plants of our district, opened roads, etc. They showed courage and progress. Why not continue in their footsteps?

Thomas Howard is now car inspector for the Southern railway. This position was held by the late L. E. Pope.

LOCAL GERMAN CLUB AT LAST ORGANIZED

TO HOLD SEVEN GERMANS A YEAR

Hold Meeting Monday Night—Committee of Three Appointed to Draft By-Laws—Next Dance on January 31.

After making several attempts to hold a meeting for the purpose of organizing a German Club, the young men were successful, and last Monday night a meeting was held with the following present: H. P. Davis, J. L. Elliot, W. W. Garrison, John L. Hynson, James Birkett, Eugene Davis, Dr. J. M. Lewis, W. O. Tavenner and Marshall Haydon.

H. P. Davis was elected chairman of the meeting and appointed W. W. Garrison, temporary secretary. The Club was organized with a membership of twenty, the object of the Club being to hold seven Germans annually, and charge each member a uniform price. After discussing several business matters the election of officers was held with the following results: J. L. Elliot, president; H. T. Davies, vice-president; H. P. Davis, treasurer, and W. O. Tavenner, secretary.

A committee consisting of three members was appointed to draft by-laws for the Club. H. T. Davies, J. L. Elliot and H. P. Davis composed the committee. Another meeting will be held tomorrow night to adopt these by-laws. A motion was made and carried to the effect that the Club will charge each member an initiation fee of $1 and each to pay $1 per month in advance. The next German to be given will be held on the night of January 31. The seven dances will be held during the months of January, April, July, September, October, November and December. This next dance is the last one before Easter and a big effort will be made to make this one come up to the standard of the past.

Those wishing to attend the dances and not caring to join the Club will be charged the regular price which has heretofore been the custom. There is no reason why the Club should not grow and greatly enlarge its membership. For many years we have been without a Club and now that one is organized it should be successful. This will insure everyone of having an opportunity to attend at least seven good Germans a year, and the sum charged each member will not average more than if you are not a member. A big time is looked for on January 31, and many will attend.

HIS GREATEST LIVING MONUMENT

Work is Growing in Influence and Power Though He Has Passed On—Interesting Article by F. M. CHITSON.

By O. GREY HUTCHESON,
Clerical Secretary, Chester, Pa.

A few weeks ago there appeared in the MANASSAS DEMOCRAT the best editorial on the so-called Baptist Bible. It may be interesting to some to know the causes leading up to this Bible, so-called Baptist.

When Cary and Judson went to India to do missionary work they were literally pioneers in the field, having to shape their tools by which to accomplish their labor. This meant first they had to translate the Bible into the vernacular of the people whom they were to teach.

In translating the Bible they transliterated not a word, but they made a literal translation of it. About this time there was organized The Bible Society, com-

GROW LEGUMES FOR SOIL IMPROVEMENT

CHEAPER METHOD, SAYS BROWN

Nitrogen by far the Costliest Plant Food and One Most Easily Lost from Soil by Leaching—Soil Deficient in Humus.

By W. M. BROWN,
Field Agent, Southern Railway Company.

Soil fertility is a question much talked about and little understood by the majority of the farmers. Notwithstanding this, there are certain well defined principles well known to the majority of our farmers which should enable anyone to increase the yielding power of his soil. Nitrogen is far the most costly plant food, and too, the one most easily lost from the soil by leaching, and most of the Virginia soils are deficient in nitrogen. This condition is due both to conditions of climate as well as faulty methods of farming. The nitrogen we need to improve the crops and maintain the fertility of the soil is obtained from the air by growing leguminous crops. This is the only economical way to obtain it.

Practically all of our soils are deficient in humus, and our farmers would do well to increase the humus content of the soil for it not only improves the texture of the soil but enables the soil to hold more water and soluble plant foods, and in its decay it furnishes nitrogen to feed the crops and affords activity for the bacteria, which in breaking down the organic matter also sets free certain acids which dissolve other plant foods.

The only practical way for us to economically increase the nitrogen content of our soil and improve our whole farming system is to grow legumes. Legumes are not generally suitable for human food therefore live stock is necessary to get the full value from them. Do not sell them off the farm for then little benefit will be derived from their growth in way of storing nitrogen in the land; for nearly as much nitrogen will be taken off in the hay or seed as is left stored in the stubble and roots. If they are sold off the land we lose a good part of the value, for by feeding them we get the market value in the live stock and a good portion of the fertilizing value in the form of manures.

A ton of peavine hay contains $10 worth of fertilizing value. If it is fed on the farm at least $8 of this $10 is left to build up the land. If fed on the farm, from $2 to $7 worth of manure should be obtained. It is true there may be a loss here of some of the fertilizing value, but to help compensate for this we have its feeding value. This can be estimated in two ways: First, by what it will bring if fed to good live stock in producing milk, flesh, or growth on mules or horses; or, second, by its market or feeding value as compared with other foods.

One thousand pounds of peavine hay is equal to 800 pounds of wheat bran in producing milk. On this basis the 1,000 pounds of hay would be worth $6 to $10. But if we give it the real feeding value about $6, we have, at the lowest a fertilizer and feeding value of $5 plus $12, or $17 per ton, when the hay is fed and manure returned to the soil.

This seems to be sufficient proof to anyone that legumes have a very important place in every rotation, and that no system that does not give legumes a chance to draw nitrogen from the air and store it in the soil can be successful in long maintaining soil fertility.

A WARM SUBJECT WARMLY HANDLED

truth and existed prior to the Bible and would still be true if the Bible did not express it. It is illustrated in rest and motion, beauty and ugliness, proportion and disproportion, order and anarchy, light and darkness, life and death, good and evil, as abstract principles and independent of such correlations, each and every one of such principles would be incomprehensible to the mind. To understand any one of such principles our minds must of necessity have some idea of its correlative. To have an idea of motion we must have an idea of rest. No one of these principles, without at least the abstract existence of its correlative, can be said to exist at all—that is, if there was no order, there would be no anarchy, no life, no death; if there was no good there could be no evil. And the possibility of evil in the concrete is compelled to be created in order that there might exist good. However, it is not necessary that both correlatives should exist in the concrete in order to exist at all or for us to have an idea of either of them. It is only sufficient that one of them should have an existence in the abstract, and such an existence are principles of quality, character and state, have had from all eternity.

In fact, if there is no future punishment for the wicked there is no future reward for the righteous. If there is no eternal future punishment for the wicked, there is no eternal future reward for the righteous. The Bible unites the two and uses the same language to express the time when both are entered into and their continuation. The state of future reward is the logical result of good in the concrete, when the subject of the good is in a state of trial. If we state of future punishment is the logical result of evil in the concrete. When the subject of the evil is in a state of trial and whilst a state of future reward and punishment are not correlative but are the result of correlatives of good and evil. All men are good or evil. All men are good or evil. All men are good or evil. If this be true it follows that they are either good or evil from choice. Voluntarily good or voluntarily evil. If one man is voluntarily good, it gives him actual merit. If another is voluntarily evil, it gives him actual demerit. The one deserves reward, the other punishment, whether they receive it or not. Now, simple justice requires that they both shall have their deservings, and it is not disputed that merit deserves reward and demerit punishment. Then, we may, that in all the strength of an essential correlation, demerit must receive its punishment, and the same argument that would give merit reward beyond the grave must, in virtue of a correlation, give demerit punishment beyond the grave. And the very same argument that gives that merit and demerit are inseparable beyond this life as to insure an eternal reward, gives, of necessity, that fixity and perpetuity to merit beyond this life as to insure eternal punishment.

If there is no hell there is no heaven, and if there is neither, there are no such qualities as good and evil in the world. There is a hell and the Bible uses the strongest and most expressive figures we can understand to express its horrors. It must be frightful in its horrors. All evil must be assigned there. Hell, of necessity, must be a place of dire disorder and dreadful ruin, for the very idea of correspondence between the character of the place and the character of the inhabitant is a place of horror, and when we remember that such adaptation is characteristic of all the works of God, the suggestion amounts to a demonstration. It is called "outer darkness," "inner darkness," "outer darkness," and it may be a dark and frightful sphere, isolated from all worlds, cursed of God, erratic and lawless, rolling beyond the confines of creation, with no sun or star to light up its darkness, and chase away its infernal vapors, with rivers and oceans of liquid fire, with continents of incinerated rock, rent with awful chasms, over it the lost may walk and run and grope and stumble and fall and climb forever. Some think it a world riven and shivered by volcanic fires and smothered gases, where lurid darkness and heavy light mingle in dusty shades, where smoky flames ooze from a thousand crannies, and flicker and flash from a thousand fissures, where serpents hiss from every gorge and specters creep from every rock, where phantoms ride on every wind and demons sit upon every mountain, and where redoubtable horrors, mounted upon fiery dragons, chase and pursue the ruined soul. It may not be this. It may be a gloomy, desolate, barren world, where rock and mountains are tumbled into anarchy, where there are no blowing flowers, nodding trees, dewy vales, grassy slopes or running streams, and where there are no homes, no preaching, no morality, no religion, no friendship, no God; for religion is order, love and light, and where it is not all is disorder, enmity, hate and darkest night, and we must concede that the world must be in harmony with its inhabitants. Then the best here we can conceive of or promise is a world of ugly ruin, shrouded in night's darkest pall, where no one of the damned has a friend and filled with bitter oaths and cursings and stripes, and where all ranks and sexes are herded in one promiscuous mob, with foulest demons, and where the ravens of despair sit and croak, and where God's eternal justice plies his burning whip, and remorse falls on with his fiery thongs, the flashes of whip and thine their only light, while the eternal hell is a state of trial and whilst a state of future reward and punishment are not correlative but are the result of correlatives of good and evil. All men are good or evil. All men are good or evil. All men are good or evil. If this be true it follows that they are either good or evil from choice. Voluntarily good or voluntarily evil. If one man is voluntarily good, it gives him actual merit. If another is voluntarily evil, it gives him actual demerit. The one deserves reward, the other punishment, whether they receive it or not. Now, simple justice requires that they both shall have their deservings, and it is not disputed that merit deserves reward and demerit punishment. Then, we may, that in all the strength of an essential correlation, demerit must receive its punishment, and the same argument that would give merit reward beyond the grave must, in virtue of a correlation, give demerit punishment beyond the grave. And the very same argument that gives that merit and demerit are inseparable beyond this life as to insure an eternal reward, gives, of necessity, that fixity and perpetuity to merit beyond this life as to insure eternal punishment.

and they all commune with God, but a lost soul, sympathetic and social in the very construction of its being; its state changed not by its constitutional nature, but by its own choice. It is eternally isolated from everything like itself, where no sight nor sound will ever greet its aching sense and doomed to wander in the pathless void, while cycles roll and ages go grinding on. It is lost, and lost beyond the power of finding—a lost soul forever; and no angel of mercy will ever cross thy solitary way. A lost soul blackened with the curse of God, repeating the chorus of his horrible death march. Lost! Lost! Where no echoes will ever mock thy misery. Oh, eternity, what must thy significance when joined to the stern penalty of sin? Thou becomest to the lost soul eternal death. All languages, methinks, beg at thy footstool, to find expression of what it means to be a lost soul. We can draw on our vocabularies and exhaust our imagination and tax to the uttermost our descriptive powers, in our efforts to describe or picture what separation from God and the source of life means to an immortal soul with all of its longings and yearning desires for the Christ likeness, purity and holiness, ungratified and unsatisfied throughout the cycles of eternity whilst in probation it might have had, but I do not believe that human language can ever express what it means or convey to the human mind any conception of its horrors. It is incomprehensible to our minds, so, in consideration of these awful facts, let us so live as to avoid even the possibility of entering such a state.

Five years ago two doctors told me I had only two years to live. The startling statement was made by William Green, Fairbairn, Col. He said to me I would die of consumption. The Love Letters of a Confederate General

WE begin in the November issue a series of real love letters written over fifty years ago by one of our national heroes to his sweetheart during the period of the Civil War. This great general will go down in posterity as having accomplished one of the most brilliant feats of arms in the history of the world. He was as great a lover as he was a general, therefore these letters combine authentic history and romantic romance. They sound a human note that no other work of literature has done in a decade; it is war, it is romance, it is history, it is literature. You simply can't afford to miss this wonderful series—an inside story of the Civil War now published for the first time and containing all the freshness of a contemporary happening. These letters will grip you hard, and hold your interest from first to last. Fill out the coupon and send it now before you forget it.

SOME RESULTS OF JUDSON'S WORK

posed of all evangelical denominations, for the purpose of printing and distributing the Bible in all languages to all people. When the Pebo-Baptist members of this Society learned that the Bible was translated in all its parts instead of transliterated in some of its parts they objected on the ground that the Greek word baptizo should be transliterated into all languages just as it is in English. Carey and Judson both refused to alter their work giving as their reasons that the Indians should have the truth, the whole truth, and not the truth veiled; and as the Greek word baptizo means immerse the Indians should have that word translated into their word-meaning immerse.

The Pebo-Baptist refused to agree to this, for they could not consistently spend their money disseminating a doctrine away from home the contrary of which they were so insistent in teaching and practicing at home. The earth is too small and too closely linked together for the practice of any such inconsistency. As a result of this in 1853 the American Baptist Publication Society took over the work of the American Bible Society and continued its work as it was begun, resulting just now in the so-called Baptist Bible.

If any of you have an English edition of the Authorized Bible, and will read the preface to it, you will see why King James' translators transliterated the word baptizo instead of translating it. You will not find this given in the American edition, but only in the English edition. Practically the same thing obtained in China when the evangelical work was first begun there as had obtained in India. Of course the Baptists here do not agree to a transliteration here any more than they had in India, and for the same reason, and the Pebo-Baptist could take no other position here than in India and be consistent.

Because the Pebo-Baptist were vastly in the majority as stockholders the Baptist withered and established a Publication House of their own at Canton, the manager of which is Rev. R. E. Chambers, who married a sister of Rev. C. Wirt Trainham, who was at one time pastor of the Baptist church at this place.

The attitude of some people toward the so-called Baptist Bible reminds me of a lady in Ohio at the time of the issuance of the English revised Bible.

The newspapers of this country in order to get the copy of the English Revision set up ready to print in their papers as soon as the work of translation was finished and at the same time preserve the copyright to the Oxford Press, promised not to print a line of it until they received word from the Oxford Press to go ahead. Thus it was that as soon as the presses were started on this great work in England the newspaper presses were started on the same work here and this country witnessed what it had never before nor has since—that is, the whole of the New Testament printed in the daily papers.

If anything it is worse. For it has just as much damnation and hell in it as the old one has. You see she had been waiting with a great deal of eagerness a translation that translated out all punishment of the wicked. But this the translators could not do and be true to the text.

So with the so-called Baptist Bible; the translators to really translate rather than transliterate and be true to the text, had to use the English word "immerse" when they came to the Greek word baptizo.

Not long since in talking to a good Pebo-Baptist friend of mine who is a student of theology, I told him if he really wished to know what the word baptizo meant in the days of the New Testament authors, to read Paul's definition in his letter to the Romans, the sixth chapter. His reply was, "You always put so much stress on Paul, why don't you take Christ's definition? Don't you think that if Christ had intended immersion as a rite that He would have used the term immerse?" I told him Christ did say immerse just as plainly as the Greek language would permit, but unfortunately for some people He was not talking in English at that time.

Neither the so-called Baptist Bible nor the American Revision will come into universal church use until some one arranges them into more convenient form than they now are, notwithstanding the fact that they are better in many other respects than is the authorized.

One way to get eggs when others don't is to put forward pullets in sunny rooms with self-feeders, grit and shell boxes complete. Beef scrap is good to start the egg rolling, but we have nothing so cheap or effective as walnut kernels. We supply the very keen request in which they are held by our Legions we run them through an old corn-crusher hull and all, helping out with grit and litter. Thus, under this regime, "Woodburn" Leg-horns and White Rox are now making us a fifty per cent yield several of last year's pedigree egg records running well above this.

One way to make money is to save it. Don't fertilize with seed if authorities do advise. With about one-half as many clover seeds as an ounce a square foot in an acre, a pound of alfalfa will put 21 plants per square foot. Certainly the old rule for clover seeding, viz. 8 acres to the bushel, is still enough. If that won't make a stand, a ton won't. Of course, trenching rains, drought, freezing or lack of adaptability may result in alfalfa failure, regardless of expense and pains. Insure against this by using a mixture. Several grasses will grow better, last longer and yield more hay of higher food value than any one.

Mr. Draypette, would you not like to feel that your stomach troubles were over, that you could eat any kind of food you desired without injury? You may seem so unwell, but you are not. You are suffering from an ending of great trouble, but permit us to assure you that it is not altogether impossible, and others can be cured permanently, and thousands have been, why not you? John R. Barker, of Battle Creek, Mich., is one. He writes: "I was troubled with heartburn, indigestion and liver complaint until I used Chamberlain's Tablets, then my trouble was over. Sold by all dealers."

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 10 o'clock p. m., I will sell bidder, all the goods, wares and merchandise, situate in the store building on Center Street, in the town of Manassas. There is a good line of package Groceries, and other goods in fine condition, a large number of barrels and boxes—also some household and kitchen furniture belonging to said estate. If sale is not completed on above date same will be continued until the following Saturdays.

THE SALE—The sale will be for cash on all sums under $10, and sums over that amount will on sixty days' time, purchaser giving note with approved security. ROBERT WELLS, Executor. F. C. Rorabaugh, Auct.

DON'TS OF THE DAIRYMAN Don't have the stalls so low at either end that the interpal organs gravitate from their proper position. Don't have the feed or water troughs so deep that the animals cannot reach the bottom without discomfort. Don't forget to have the new cement floor of the stable roughened to prevent slipping. Don't forget that continued good health requires good feeding, fresh air, sunlight and exercise. Don't adopt for a feeding motto "Something for nothing." Feed much and doctor little. Don't allow the cows to be pestered with flies. Pasture at night only if the flies are unbearable. Don't turn cattle into wet or frosted clover. It may cause bloating. Don't strike or chase a cow with an apple in her mouth. She will swallow quickly and may choke. Don't allow cows to eat decayed or withered potatoes. They contain a poison which is very fatal. Don't throw bones where cows can get them. They will very likely become fastened in the throat or mouth.

Without a jar, shock or disturbance in the awful speed of our earth through space. We wonder at such ease of man's movement, and so do those who take Dr. King's New Life Pills. No gripping, no distress, just thorough work that brings good health and fine feelings. 25c at all druggists.
