STATE RIGHTS

In a nation so well knit as this nation has become, which is linked together by hundreds of thousands of miles of railroads and its communities kept in intimate touch with one another by the telegraph and the telephone, state governments should be considered only in the light of conveniences of business, of record-keeping of local legislation.

DIES SUDDENLY OF HEART FAILURE

AN OLD CITIZEN PASSES AWAY At a ripe old age Johnson, Manuel, Lay Down Life's Burden in the Home of His Childhood, Near Nokesville.

Mr. Johnson Manuel, one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of Prince William county, was found dead in his home near Nokesville at an early hour Saturday morning, death resulting, it is supposed, from heart failure.

Mr. Manuel, who was in his 83rd year, arose, as was his custom, soon after the break of day Saturday morning, and was apparently his breakfast at the usual hour. When he had finished his morning meal he gave orders to one of the farm laborers concerning some repairing needed about the place, himself assisting in a portion of the work.

About 7:30 o'clock one of the children of Squire W. T. Allen with whom Mr. Manuel had made his home for several years, came running out of the house and said that "granpa" was lying across his bed and would not move. When an investigation was made it was found that the old gentleman was dead.

Mr. Manuel, who is survived by only one brother, J. Peyton Manuel, was at one time one of the most prosperous farmers in the county. His entire life was spent in seclusion in the neighborhood where he first saw the light of day and where the spark of life went out so suddenly at a ripe old age.

One of his chief delights was in the solitude of the forest with his trusty fowling piece following wily game or watching in the turkey blind which he maintained at one particular spot for the past thirty years and from which he bagged many handsome birds.

Mr. Manuel was of that kind and jovial disposition which won him many warm friends, and perhaps there are few persons who had fewer enemies than he.

MEETING DEMOCRATIC COUNTY COMMITTEE

STATE PRIMARY TO BE AUG. 5 To Nominate a Candidate for House of Delegates in November—Appointment of Judges of Election.

At a meeting of the Democratic County Committee held in the M. I. C. building in the town of Manassas, Monday, July 7, C. A. Heinekin, H. F. Lynn, Wm. H. Brown, W. L. Sanders, John Y. Roseberry, W. N. Lipscomb, J. P. Leachman, A. A. Hoff, Thomas H. Lion, C. A. Barbee, B. W. Storke and Geo. F. Pettit were present.

The meeting was called to order by the chairman, who stated the object of the meeting was to make provisions for the state primary to be held on the 5th day of August, 1913, to provide a method of nominating a candidate for the House of Delegates to be voted for November next, general election and to transact any other business that might be presented. J. P. Leachman elected secretary pro tem.

It appearing to the committee a vacancy having occurred in the membership from Dumfries district by the death of W. C. Williams, upon motion Wm. Crow was elected to fill the unexpired term.

Mr. W. N. Lipscomb offered a motion to fill vacancies which existed in the membership of said committee from Dumfries and Giles districts by reason of the failure of the electors of said districts to elect five members from each district, which was lost.

Upon motion of J. P. Leachman the following resolution was adopted: Resolved, That a primary election be held on the 27th day of September, 1913, for the purpose of selecting a nominee of the party for the House of Delegates from Prince William county; be it further

Resolved, That if only one person shall file notice of his candidacy on or before the 19th day of July, 1913, as required by law, then and in that event Thomas H. Lion, chairman of this committee, shall declare the person who has filed his notice as herebefore provided the nominee of the party; and be it further

Voters-Attention!

EVERY CITIZEN AND VOTER IN THE TOWN OF MANASSAS, and especially those who are opposed to the issuance of bonds for water, lights and drainage, are earnestly requested to attend the big mass-meeting to be held in Copner's Hall next Monday night, July 14th.

Among the prominent speakers who will be present are Messrs. Richard Messer, Sanitary Engineer of the State Board of Health of Virginia; Dr. Ahen W. Freeman, Assistant Commissioner of the Board, and Mr. Harry Stevens, the engineer who drew the plans and specifications for our new proposed town improvements.

Every citizen and voter is asked to attend this important meeting and hear why they should vote for these civic improvements and a greater Manassas. Aside from the above mentioned speakers, our town people will take part in the discussion.

Citizens, come out to this meeting and hear the proposition discussed from all sides, so that you may have a clear conception of the question when the election takes place. Every citizen who is loyal to Manassas will vote for the bonds. It will be a test of faith in the future of Manassas. COMMITTEE.

Three of the four races were captured by Mrs. George Brenton of Manassas; Bay City won the first race of the day, Little England the second and the well-known Ben Lala finished ahead in the fourth.

Copy. J. P. LEACHMAN, Secretary pro tem. THOS. H. LION, CHAIRMAN. On Thursday, July 17th, Miss Anne G. Craven, of Philadelphia, will give a moonlight social at Sodley Church. The musical numbers of the evening program will be rendered by the Sodley choir.

MRS. W. E. BALDWIN PASSES AWAY

DIES AT BATTLE CREEK, MICH. Well-Known in Manassas Near Which She Passed Her Girlhood's Days—Married Isaac P. Baldwin in 1892.

Mrs. Wilma E. Baldwin who passed away June 29 at Battle Creek, Mich., was well known in this vicinity. Her father, Jonas Greene, was the owner of "Birmingham" farm, near Manassas, where he died in 1874, and where the family continued to reside until the death of Mrs. Greene in 1900. Mrs. Baldwin nee Wilma Greene passed her girlhood days at the family home.

In 1892 she became the wife of Isaac P. Baldwin and resided with her husband for several years in his lovely home now used as a college building. Later, Mrs. Baldwin's health failing, they went to the sanitarium at Battle Creek, Mich., in which town they practically made their home thereafter.

Mrs. Baldwin was in precarious health for many years, suffering from a constitutional trouble that finally caused her death. She was a woman of remarkable attainments. She possessed a fine mind, capable of enjoying to the utmost all that was beautiful in literature and poetry.

Her memory was phenomenal, being able to quote poem after poem from memory. It was her custom to seat herself at a piano at twilight when she would sit and sing hymn after hymn, ranging from those of her childhood's days to those of the latest composition. Her love for nature was a passion. She had made a study of trees and birds and could tell each variety of either, quickly recognizing an unseen bird from his song note.

Her happiest days were those spent under the trees with the song birds and the green, growing things that she so much loved around her. She was deeply interested in the great forest-movements of the day. The temperance cause and the woman's suffrage cause were very dear to her and she ever stood ready to contribute labor and money toward their success.

The donation of her lovely home jointly with her husband to the town of Manassas for a college will ever stand as a monument to her generosity. But it was in the family and social relations of life that her character shone brightest. Her care of her husband in his old age was untiring and contributed to a small degree to her own physical condition.

EWELL CAMP AT GETTYSBURG

ALL PRAISE THE GREAT EVENT Sentiments of Peace and Goodwill Proclaimed Throughout Encampment of Veterans of Both Armies.

When twenty-three members of Ewell Camp, C. V., under command of Capt. Westwood Hutchison and accompanied by four Union veterans and R. W. Merchant, special correspondent for the camp, left Manassas on the morning of June 30 for Gettysburg reunion, while handkerchiefs in the hands of scores of ladies fluttered in the breeze in the token of good wishes and the melody of Southern airs inspired the battle-scarred heroes of Lee and Jackson, little did they dream that such a cordial welcome and genuine love feast awaited them on the field which fifty years ago was the scene of carnage and where bitter enmity held sway between the blue-coated multitude on Cemetery Ridge and the gray-clad host which faced it within rifle range of each other.

Commander Hutchison had arranged with the Southern Railway for a special car for his men which would take them to the Gettysburg camp without change of cars. On reaching Washington our car was attached to a special train of the Pennsylvania Railway. This train was made up of thirteen cars containing Confederate veterans of North Virginia and a few from Georgia and South Carolina. The conductor in passing through our car inquired of Commander Hutchison where his men were from. When told that they were largely members of Ewell Camp, Prince William county, whose soil was deeply stained with blood at first and second Bull Run, he remarked: "This is the best looking and well-preserved body of men on my train."

Everything moved pleasantly until Glyndon, Md., was reached when the drawhead of our car pulled out causing considerable delay. As the disabled coach had to be abandoned it necessitated the crowding of our men among those of the remaining twelve cars and consequently separating them until we reached camp.

At Hanover, Pa., there was another delay of half-hour which enabled our men to shake their thirst from numerous buckets of ice water which were provided at the hands of a charming young girl whom the boys christened as "Rebecca at the well." Her name is Miss Annie Bailey and her cheerful face and kindly ministrations will ever live in the hearts of those who profited by her timely aid when the water coolers on board the train were empty, and who dropped dust and quarters in her glass in testimony of their appreciation.

It was in this town which is known far and wide as the ham sandwich mart along the Western Maryland Railway, that the only star was made against the Southern troops, so far as known by our camp.

When the camp's correspondent alighted from the train, to get a relief from his cramped quarters in the overcrowded coach, he was surrounded by several young ladies who posed questions without stint and noticing his Virginia badge paid a high compliment to the mother of confederates, evident testimony to the chagrin of their English and prosperity.

ALICE FREE

Mr. Hunter C. Allen and Miss Genevieve Holiday Free, both of Nokesville, were married at Washington on Monday, Mr. Allen is a son of Squire W. F. Allen, of Nokesville, and a brother of Mr. Guy C. Allen, of Manassas. The bride is the second daughter of Mr. W. R. Free, who for a number of years has been one of the leading business men of Nokesville. The bride's parents reside in the hamlet of Nokesville and express the wish that their future life may be one of contentment, happiness and prosperity.

beau escort, for he said, with anything but good humor, to the girls: "I guess the 'Johnnies' won't be in as great hurry in getting away from Gettysburg this time as they were fifty years ago," to which the correspondent, in the best of humor, quickly replied: "No, we won't be in any greater hurry in getting away from Gettysburg than your troops were in getting away from Bull Run fifty-three years ago," which rejoinder was greatly enjoyed by the ladies who ventured the remark that their young gentleman friend would now be good.

When our train rolled into camp at 8 o'clock it was met by Lieut. Geo. C. Round, who had preceded the camp a day or two with a letter from its Commander to Gen. Brown, Commander of the Virginia division, for the purpose of arranging for our reception in camp. On alighting from the train the camp fell into line and on roll call it was ascertained that four men were missing, consequent upon the separation at Glyndon. A detail was made to hunt them up which was soon done and without much delay the camp stood in front of the quarters allotted to it at the head of West Fourtieth street.

It was found that several tents which had been reserved for our camp had been appropriated by an officer from the Valley of Virginia for his men which made it necessary for our commander to seek for our quarters. While he and comrade Holiday stood guard over three tents, Lieut. Round went in search of men to occupy them, but falling in with Gen. Brown who volunteered to find quarters for the camp, Mr. Round forgot the vigil of Commander Hutchinson and his comrade and left them in anxiety until Gen. Brown's mission had been fulfilled and he and Mr. Round returned to headquarters.

After partaking of supper a majority of the weary veterans retired to their cots to seek God's nature's sweet restorer—balm sleep—but the hum of conversation on the part of the more wakeful made it anything but easy for them to do so.

The next morning members of the camp made a tour of General Lee's line of battle and also of that of General Meade's Generaling on Confederate avenue along which were placed scores of guns occupying the same position as when they belched flame and at the enemy fifty years ago, one sees at a glance the magnificent position of the Federal guns on "Little Round Top," which poured death and destruction into Pickett's division as it charged across the ravine and up to the enemy's lines. Here, too, can be seen the unfinished equestrian statue of General Lee which was viewed by thousands of both armies with bared heads and genuine reverence. While on Meade's line of battle Lieut. Round and the writer stood with clasped hands at the cannon in front of "The High Water Mark," the point where General Armistead fell, and were photographed while dozens of Union veterans stood by with smiling approval.

It was at this point, also, that Lieut. Ben. Hutchinson, brother of Ewell Camp's commander, Capt. Charles Berkeley and Sergeant Compton were captured. It was there that Lieut. Round introduced to a gathering of New York veterans, Col. Edmund Berkeley, who recited a poem which elicited rounds after rounds of applause. Commander Hutchinson was called on for a speech which he gave in the spirit of amity and in appreciation of the cordial welcome to Southerners everywhere evident throughout the great encampment, and he was cheered to the echo. At the conclusion of this speech Lieut. Round proclaimed that this great reunion and peace jubilee would be an object lesson for American youth for generations to come.

Standing in an automobile by the side of General A. P. Hill's daughter, Mrs. Lucy Lee Hill Macgill, Gen. Ell Torrence, ex-Grand Commander of the G. A. R., uttered sentiments which fairly took the breath of his Confederate hearers. Pointing to the gray-clad warriors, he said: "I would not have you be ashamed of your military record, on the contrary, you should be proud of it. You were fighting for a principle which you believed to be right, as much so as our boys in blighting for a principle which they thought to be right, and I want to tell you that I want to see every Confederate grave covered with the same flowers and by the same affectionate hands by our people as the graves of Union soldiers are now covered by them." This declaration had a great effect on the lips of the speaker when a shout went up from the veterans of both armies which fairly shook the hills, and the hearty amen which came from the Federal ranks could plainly be heard amidst the great storm of applause. Another incident typical of the great wave of fraternalization which swept over the multitude there assembled was the immense column of mixed veterans which paraded the main thoroughfares of the camp, headed by two standard-bearers whose flag stars and stripes and of stars and bars were entwined. As the great throng went by to the music of the A. P. Hill band of Petersburg and a band from the Pennsylvania encampment, joy seemed unconfined and cheer after cheer went up from the enthusiastic assemblage. When the column was halted the Southerners, with their colors, took position on the South side of the street and the Northerners, with the stars and stripes, took their position on the north side. Prefacing the object of the demonstration with words of welcome and of true friendship the commander of each contingent gave orders to advance to the center of the street and clasp hands with their enemies of fifty years ago. The scene which followed was one to be remembered. Not only was there grasping of hands but the veterans of the blue and gray actually fell into each other's arms, and with tears streaming down their faces, gave unmistakable assurance of renewed friendship and cementing of those of the North and those of the South henceforth as true Americans.

The climax of the great peace reunion came with the signaling of messages by means of the flag code, from Little Round Top to Seminary Ridge, July 4. Lieut. Round, who had just been unanimously elected president of the U. S. Signal Corps Association, together with his colleagues, Serg. Chas. D. Marey, conceived the idea of pronouncing, as it were, the benediction upon the great event by the signaling of these messages. From Seminary Ridge Lieut. Round wig-wagged the message: "Glory to God in the Highest," and from Little Round Top came the reply: "Let us have peace." Again came the response from Seminary Ridge: "Duty is the sublimest word in our language," the former quoted from Grant and the latter from Lee.

On Wednesday morning Commander Hutchinson, with twenty three of his men boarded the train for home, leaving the remaining veterans to return on Thursday. In the union depot at Washington the homeward bound members of the camp gathered around their commander and tendered him a vote of thanks for his efficient services in caring for them while at the great camp, and while enroute, for him, from the same, and for affording them one of the most enjoyable events of their life. It is the opinion of every member of the camp who attended the reunion that the cordiality shown the Confederates by the Union veterans could not have been more perfect, and that the satisfaction they received fully compensated for any sacrifice they had made in order to be present upon such a glorious occasion.

Best Medicine in the World
"My little girl had bloody dysentery very bad. I thought she would die. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy cured her, and I can truly say that I think it is the best medicine in the world," writes Mrs. William Ogden, Clare, Mich. For sale everywhere.

THE DYING NEVER WEEN
It is a striking fact that the dying never ween. The sobbing, the heart-breaking agony of the circle of friends around the death-bed, call forth no responsive tears from the dying. Is it because he is already insensible and stiff in the chill of dissolution? That cannot be, for he asks for his father's hand as if to gain strength in the mortal struggle and leans on the breast of a mother, sister or brother in still conscious affection. Just before expiring he calls these loved ones and with a quivering lip, says, "I am dying, showing that the love which has his ever borne in his heart is still fresh and warm. It must be because the dying have reached a point too deep for earthly sorrows, too transcendent for weeping. They are face to face with higher and holier things, with the Father in heaven and his angels. There is no weeping in that blessed abode to which he is hastening."

814 Two Children of Heaven
You can thank grateful, ill-tempered children for their health, happy tempers by ridding them of worms. OF RETIRING PRESIDENT MANASSAS CHAPTER, U. D. C.

Following is the president's address and read at a meeting held July 2, 1913. There remain only two days time for exhibitors to enter their horses in the Manassas horse show.

The fourth of July was enjoyed by a number of Manassas young people when they went to Blandford Bridge about four o'clock in the afternoon.

The current dues have been collected, but that many of the delinquent dues of several years' standing have been paid. The latter has been accomplished by personal appeal, in many instances in the form of a note.

Every Street in Manassas. Backache? Kidneys weak? Distressed by urinary ailments? Don't have to look far. Use what Manassas people recommend. Every street in Manassas has its cases.

Respectfully submitted, ELA ARMISTEAD SULLIVAN, Treasurer, Manassas Chapter, U. D. C.

Miss Mary Ellicott spent the week-end with Miss Lucile Clarke. R. E. Ellicott, of Washington, spent Sunday afternoon at C. E. Clarke's.

Prize money was distributed to the winners of the horse races. The flying machine proposition seems to be an assured thing, but the deal has not been completely closed at this date.

James F. Gulick has in his possession a small bible which was found on the Gattysburg battlefield on the day that Pickett made his famous charge.
