CONFEDERATE MEMORIAL ANNUAL

REPRESENTATIVE SISSON, in his magnificent address before the Ladies' Memorial Association and United Daughters of the Confederacy, Monday afternoon, sounded a keynote for a true story of the Southern cause.

EVERYTHING appears to be ready for Roosevelt's moving into the White House, except to have a few Taft cobwebs brushed down.

Stories, when he related a portion of his speech delivered a short time since in Boston.

When his hearers assured him they desired to know the truth, and that Mr. Sisson had told them many things of importance in connection with the great struggle which they had never before heard, he said: "Then why, in the name of God, don't you tear up your living school histories and have one published for your rising generation, which would be consistent with truth?" The Virginia State Board of Education has decided to publish for use in our schools the Confederate Memorial Annual. This is certainly a step in the right direction, for history, as it is finally written when facts and not prejudices are the controlling incentive, can more certainly be relied upon for the true story of an important event.

The Confederate Memorial Annual is a modest and unselfish effort along the right lines. The character of its contributors and sponsors give assurance that its spirit will be that of exact truth and justice. The Confederacy has long since passed into history; the issues out of which it arose are long since settled, but the patriotism that backed it is deathless.

Anything that may serve to inspire in the present generation a true understanding of the past which led to the great struggle, and the motives of those who engaged in it, is worthy of the best effort of every Southern Commonwealth. Then, by all means, let us have the Confederate Memorial Annual in our schools.

THE CATTLE-TICK DANGER

The development of profitable cattle and dairy industries in some sections of the Southern States appears to be hampered by what is known as the cattle tick which carries the germ of the Texas fever, and is otherwise injurious to cattle.

The United States Agricultural Department is co-operating with the agricultural authorities of this and of other states in carrying on a systematic campaign for the extermination of this dangerous parasite, and the farmers of this county would do well to place themselves in a position to eradicate the cattle tick by seeking information from the sources referred to.

Through the efforts of Senator Martin, and Capt. E. J. Husher of Richmond, and the courtesy of General William Cresson of the Ordinance Department of the United States Army, one of the Columbia river guns laid down in defense of Fort Sumpter in the spring of 1861, is now in Richmond, and soon will be mounted on Lee Camp Soldier's Home grounds.

There is a lively time in Chicago today, for the Republican National committee met in that city at 2 o'clock to arrange details for the great convention which will take place there on June 18. The "old-timers" have their steamroller on hand and its weight promises to put the land in good order for Taft. Roosevelt, however, is determined that a certain field shall not be sown in Taft this fall and has served notice on his overrider to that effect.

The injury done by this insect is not limited to cattle among cattle caused by the Texas fever. Cattle are frequently stunted in growth, says the report, and do not reach the size and weight they would otherwise attain. Methods which include washing cattle or spraying them with solutions, or dipping them in vats filled with the solution in being followed out by the Agricultural Department, and such information along that line as may be needed by the farmer or stock raiser may be had of the Department for the asking.

THE BEEF TRUST

CONGRESS will merit the sincere thanks of consumers, in this day of high cost of living, if it succeeds in its probe of dissolving the Beef Trust. Before the close of the present week congress will have ascertained the true cause of the great increase in the price of beef which has obtained in both the wholesale and retail markets within the past month. Never has meat, in the beef line, soared so high since "the cow jumped over the moon." The law of true supply and demand is the only one by which consumers are willing to stand it. It is the only one by which they should be called upon to stand it.

It has been demonstrated that the price of beef has risen despite the fact that there exists no shortage in livestock, as alleged by the Beef trust, and this fact has caused congress to go on the war path to give the beef trust sufficient to understand that they cannot, with impunity, violate the United States statutes made and provided for the purpose of protecting consumers from the greed of wealthy corporations. It is to be hoped that developments will justify such measures as will place the price of beef where they rightfully belong—under control of actual supply and demand.

ENFORCE TAG ORDINANCE

From every section of the State comes information of cases of death from rabies. In one section nearly every member of a family had to seek relief through rabies treatment in a Richmond institution. This affliction is one of the most dreaded of all maladies and should be guarded against in every possible manner. The authorities should see to it that every dog running at large and acting in a way suspicious of having the dreaded disease should be carefully looked after, and in case of a confirmation of such suspicion, killed.

Our town authorities should enforce the dog-tag ordinance in order that it may be determined whether or not a dog running at large on the streets of Manassas belongs in the town. It is too late after the deadly virus has been deposited in the blood of a victim to attempt the prevention of the disease. Look out for the mad dog and "swat" him.

PARAGRAPHS

"I AM not mad, my noble Festus, but speak the words of truth and soberness" —Shakespeare.

SOME boys never know, in their own estimation, really how much of a man they are until "pa" die.

The Seventeenth Annual Convention of the Virginia Federation of Labor was in session in Lynchburg, this week.

ONE little boy, at least, is not glad that school has closed since he has to attend to the baby and "swat" the flies.

The father is always as proud of the first baby, especially if it be a boy, as a little girl is of her pretty red dress.

Never mind the weather, there will be lots of fun at the entertainment given by Miss Williams, Friday night.

A MAN is never more stuck up than when he sits on a sheet of fly paper which has been carelessly left lying around.

EVERYTHING appears to be ready for Roosevelt's moving into the White House, except to have a few Taft cobwebs brushed down.

H. B. MILLER TRAIN CONTROL COMPANY

ANNUAL SESSION IN STAUNTON

Interesting Talks Indicating Progress and Development of the Company's Work since the Past Year.

Fresh impetus was given the Miller Train Control invention when the large body of Stockholders met in Staunton, last week in annual meeting, to discuss what had already been accomplished during the year and of the prospects in the future.

Following is the story of the meeting as told by Mr. Miller:

"While in Staunton on Monday last, we had the pleasure of attending the annual meeting of the Miller Train Control Corporation, whose home office is located in that most beautiful and progressive city.

"This Company, as many of our readers will recall, was some time since organized for the purpose of financing and promoting what has been recognized by many of the highest authorities in such matters as the greatest invention of the age for preventing railroad collisions and the consequent saving of human life. We were particularly interested in learning more about this wonderful invention and of the progress being made through the mechanical and construction departments of the company to satisfy the great railroad world of the practical utility and adaptation of the invention to its systems, for the reason that the inventor of the appliance, Mr. H. B. Miller happens to have started his brilliant career as the editor of a weekly newspaper in Rockingham County, and who, in addition to being a mechanical genius, is one of the most clever and affable gentlemen it has ever been my pleasure to meet. Apart, however, from this particularly pleasing interest, an invention such as his designed to protect the lives of the traveling public from all kinds of horrible train collisions, and moreover, beyond question to be absolutely equal to the perfect performance of its humane mission, automatically and accurately whether the train crew slumber, or otherwise, appears very strongly indeed, to the sympathetic side of our nature.

"Having digressed thus far from what we had simply intended as an account of the above occasion, we may say further, very briefly, for the benefit of your readers not familiar with this invention, that the Miller Train Control Device is an appliance, the mechanism of which is placed below the seat of the engineer, outside the cab, and an electrical current of low voltage is communicated through a metal shod attached to a rod and coming in contact with a steel lamp planted beside the track. In its principle and operation it appears to revolutionary all kindred systems and appliances, in that it does not depend upon the exercise of great power to stay collisions of trains, but simply makes them impotent to collide, by absolutely depriving them in an impending dangerous situation, made known to themselves without human notification of the propelling force necessary to get together on a stretch of track equipped with the device.

"The meeting to which we have referred was attended by a large representation of the eleven hundred stockholders, and a like-looking body of business men we have never seen assembled together. Whilst in keeping with the carrying out of the ideas and wishes of the inventor and his close friends and associates, in the matter of the placement of stock, the most of those in attendance were Virginians, coming from the counties of Augusta, Rockingham, Frederick, Clarke, Prince William, Spotsylvania, Loudoun & etc., there were a few deeply interested attenuants from

West Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia. The whole formed what had much the appearance of some big fraternal organization, so cordial and sincere of purpose did all seem in their brotherly association.

The reports of the president and other officials were listened to attentively and were received with marked enthusiasm. Interesting talks, indicating the satisfactory progress and development made in handling the many big propositions under consideration, all the old officers and directors were unanimously re-elected.

Hon. Thos. H. Lion of Manassas, C. L. Parker, of Washington, D. C., and others.

"As indicative of the thorough satisfaction of the stockholders with the work being accomplished and the splendid progress being made in handling the many big propositions under consideration, all the old officers and directors were unanimously re-elected.

What amount of bonds did your town issue for the water works?

What amount for light plant? What amount for sewerage?

What is your corporation tax rate?

What power do you use for pumping water?

What for running dynamos?

Are your street lights satisfactory?

Do you have plenty of water? What is the source of your water supply?
