FEDERAL RESERVE BANKS OPENED

Marking a new ora in the financial history of the United States the twelve Federal Reserve Banks of the new currency system opened their doors Monday morning. It is the belief, of the auiness and have a large influence in restoring good times.

The new system permits the expansion and contraction of the is weary of "war news." So are we. money supply of the country in keeping with the actual needs of business, whereas the old system maintained the same amount the circulating medium for seasons and all financial situations.

Summarized, the effect of the newly-organized system, according to officials in Washington, will be to prevent panics.

President Wilson signed the Federal Reserve Act nearly a year ago, but sufficient progress has not been yet made by the organiza tion for the system to permit the twelve reserve banks at this time to undertake the exercise of all the functions vested in them by this act. Because of the extraordinary financial situation in this country, which has resulted from the European war, the Federal Reserve Board thought it best that all possible haste should be made in opening the reserve banks for a limited exercise of their functions. The operations of the banks at the outset, therefore, will in 1916. be limited to the following:

- 1. Acceptance of deposits of reserves payable in lawful money.
- 2. Discounting of bills of exchange and commercial paper. 3. Acceptance of deposits of checks drawn by member banks on any Federal reserve banks or member banks in reserve ank central

Secretary McAdoo says that the opening of these banks marks a new era in the history of business and finance in this country. It ain's army is to the Germans is believed that they will put an end to the annual anxiety from which the country has suffered for the past generation about insufficient money and credit to move the crops each year, and will give such stability to the banking business that the extreme fluctuations in interest rates and available credits which have characterized banking in the past will be destroyed permanently.

THE COST OF ADVERTISING

Who pays the cost of advertising?

reserve cities within their respective districts.

The Bureau of Corporations of the United States is investigating the subject of the value of advertising, and trying to determine how far it is economically profitable, and whether it costs the publie anything. It will no doubt he found that money judiciously spent in advertising reduces the cost of getting the goods to the turkey is.

The highest selling costs are found in the stores where sales are slow. When a merchant doubles sales, by letting the public know about his goods, he usually adds very little to the expenses of sales forces. The overhead expenses, such as taxes, insurance, heat, light and rent, are increased but little, if any. Consequently the charge that has to be made to each urticle to pay clerk hire and overhead expenses is reduced. A merchant can afford to sell for less money, meanwhile making a larger profit for himself.

If there were no advertising, buying would be very heavy at the height of the season, and would drop off more than it now does between the rush periods. The most economical agency for distributing goods is one that keeps along somewhat the same from one month to another. Advertising informs people that there are special bargains at mid-season periods. It teaches the people that by waiting for those periods, they can make economies. That tends to equalize retail trade, and save the necessity for extra expense during rush periods.

Advertising performs all that could be accomplished by house to house solicitation and at a far less cost. It visits a hundred homes and talks to the inmates thereof, while a solicitor could enter but one. Advertising then is not an extra charge added to the cost of the goods. It is simply a part of the normal selling expense, reducing the cost of the sales force.

You can't go far wrong. Any fellow's mother's religion ought to be good enough for him. So next Sunday give up the lazv hour in bed. Have your best clothes ready. Put 'em on and start out with your head up and your shoulders back. You're doing one of the best things you ever did in your life and if you keep t up you will never be sorry. And you'll be surprised to see how good it feels to be in church. And above all things, if there is congregational singing, SING. A SONG OF THE THANKFUL TIME

We think of Thanksgiving at seeding time-In the swelling, unfolding, budding time, When the heart of nature and the hearts of men Rejoice in the earth, grown young again, We dream of the harvest, of field and vine Of granaries full, at Thanksgiving time. We think of Thanksgiving in growing time-In the time of flowers, and in vintage prime; When the palms of the year's strong hands are filled With fruitage, with grain and with sweets distilled. With a dream of hope is a truth sublime, Then our hearts make room for the thankful time. We think of Thanksgiving in harvest time-In the yielding, gathering, golden time; When the sky is fringed with a hazy mist And the blushing maples by frost lip kissed; When the barns are full with the harvest cheer, And the crowning, thankful day draws near. We think of Thanksgiving at resting time-The circle completed is but a chime In the song of life in the lives of men We harvest the toil of our years, and then We wait at the gate of the King's highway For the dawn of our soul's Thanksgiving Day.

-ROSE HARTWICK THORPE

The merriest, happiest, jolliest season of the year will soon be here, when in the churches and homes the glad tidings of great joy will be sung and said and all will go as cheerfully and merrily as wedding bells. Shopping will soon be in order. When; where and what to buy will soon be the absorbing question and will have to be answered. We will undertake that task now. We would advise our people in this city and section to make their purchases early and thereby not only avoid the rush, but can make their selections from A new idea in marriage ceremonies, an idea which will not only a stock of goods before they are picked over. So we most earnestly and emphatically urge all individul purchasers to patronize our home merchants, to buy from our own people. It is their duty as citizens of this city and section to do so. Help home industries and home enterpises. Commence now before the rush.

A DANGEROUS PASTIME"

The first question an honorable man asks when he sees a girl flirting is whether she is a respectable girl or not. You see how it raises doubt at once. This being the case no modest girl can af. ford to indulge in this pastime among strangers. When the down is brushed from the peach the beauty is so marred that it can never be restored, and so when a girl throws lightly aside that sweet and modest reserve so becoming a maiden, she loses her greatest charm and becomes rather common and cheap. Flirting may seem to the giddy and thoughtless girl to be wonderfully amusing and she may even get an idea she is quite fascinating, but it is a degrading pastime and should be frowned upon by every young lady who has an ambition to be a worthy and charming woman.

A PECULAR SAHARA

executive committee of the Anti-Saluen League of North Carolina is preparing to introduce a bill into the next legislature which will make it a crame for any resident of the state to have any sort of liquor in his possession or in his home. It will not be necessary to show that the citizen attempted to give away to his friends or to sell the liquor. The very fact that he has it in his possession or in his home will be sufficent to send him to the penetentiary. Therefore the new bill will be the most drastic ever offered for passage. The present prohibition law of North Carolina is extreme in its provisions, but there is said to be more bootlegging in the state than in any other dry state. It is in the hope of destroying this bootlegging and the keeping of blind tigers that the Anti-Saloon League will work hard for the passage of the new bill.
