

LEAGUE TO MEET MONDAY EVENING

Secretary Announces Important Law-Enforcement Session Here January 7.

(H. A. Knevels, Secretary)

We will announce a regular meeting of the Law Enforcement League to be held on Monday, January 7, over the National Bank of Manassas, at 10 o'clock a. m. All officers and committeemen of the Law Enforcement League and all ministers of the county are urged to be present as important business is to be considered.

According to Biblical traditions about thirty-eight centuries have passed since Moses descended from the midst of the lightning and thunder and smoke of Mt. Sinai bearing the tablet of stone on which Yahwe had graved the Decalogue of the ancient Hebrew. For thirty-eight centuries a portion of mankind has been regularly breaking those laws of Moses, or seeking to evade them, even though all civilized governments during the centuries have sought to enforce them. But because they have been imperfectly enforced should we seek to discard those laws? Should the law against murder be revoked because governments have been unable to completely abolish homicide? Because nations have been unable to entirely stamp out the crime of theft, should we repeal the law against it? And so on with all the other crimes of the calendar?

But such is the specious argument used in the nation-wide propaganda against the prohibition law by those who would bring about its nullification or repeal. Because it has not been enforced perfectly it should be consigned to limbo, is the way the wets tell it. But to be fair and square about the question, does not the enforcement of the prohibition law, which has been on the statute books of the nation less than four years, compare favorably with the enforcement of any of the laws which have come down from the time of Moses? The friends of the Eighteenth Amendment do not ask for centuries to demonstrate practical enforcement. All they ask is the brief period it requires for the panorama of one generation to pass in review, the average life of man, a third of a century. In that time the victims of the saloons will have passed away, to be seen no more. The rising generations will know little and care less about intoxicants. By that time officials who fail to do their duty in the enforcement of law will be replaced by men who respect their oath of office.

In the news columns we read that Mrs. Susie Cleveland Youmans, of New York City, a sister of Grover Cleveland, who was visiting her daughter in Chicago, is, according to an interview in the Chicago Tribune, four-square for prohibition. She is for it economically, viewing it in the light of what is best for the country as she sees the light. She is for it personally, quoting St. Paul, "If meat make my brother to offend I will eat no flesh while the world standeth." "The liquor question today," she said, "stands in my mind like the slavery question did in the old days. Slavery had to be done away with."

MAN BOILED IN VAT

Body of Watchman at Extract Works Recovered Sunday.

Boiled until the victim's feet dropped off in his shoes, Charles Courtney, aged fifty-one, met a horrible death Sunday in one of the large acid vats at the Gardner Extract Company's works at Waynesboro - Basic. Courtney was employed at the plant as a watchman, and when he failed to return home for dinner a search was instituted. About four o'clock his body was fished out of the vat. He leaves his wife and eleven children.

Although steam had been cut off as usual on Saturday night, enough heat remained in the acid to roast Courtney's body almost beyond recognition. The exact time when he fell into the vat is unknown. His watch had stopped at 11:10 o'clock.

"LORNA DOONE" COMING

Old Romance to Be Shown at Dixie January 7 and 8.

Heralded by critics throughout the country as Maurice Tournier's "greatest masterpiece" and "a thrilling dramatic spectacle of unrivalled beauty," the screen version of "Lorna Doone" will be shown here at the Dixie Theatre on Monday and Tuesday.

Tournier's fictionization of Blackmore's famous novel has attracted world-wide attention and for once the critics have forgotten to complain that "the picture is nothing like the book." While the novel has been decidedly condensed in the film version, all the main dramatic episodes which have made the book a "best-seller" for three generations have been retained and the spirit of the times has been faithfully reproduced.

For the fan unfamiliar with the novel, "Lorna Doone" offers an evening of exciting entertainment for the love story works out to a triumphant ending only after tremendous conflicts in which life itself is the stake. A spectacular fight in which one man matches his wits against the strength of a whole band of outlaws and the burning of the Doone village after a bloody battle are "thrillers" that would satisfy anyone.

To the book lover, the student of English classics and the educator, the coming of "Lorna Doone" will be a rare treat. Tournier has earned a reputation as an educator in the film industry and his screen versions of classical books and plays have been marked by such artistry that they have won permanent places in the film libraries of schools, churches and community houses.

STEPS IN DARKNESS FROM TRAIN TO RIVER

Unknown Man in Army Uniform Swims to Safety from Icy Waters of Rappahannock.

An unknown young man wearing an army uniform early Wednesday morning stepped from the rear of a train standing on the railroad bridge over the Rappahannock river at Fredericksburg and disappeared into space, a few minutes later being swallowed up in the icy waters of the Rappahannock, according to a first-page news story in the Free Lance of yesterday. A terrified train porter gave the alarm, police headquarters was informed and members of the train crew hastened to the river bank with lights. Several minutes later the missing stranger was discovered in the cab of the locomotive, calmly drying his wet uniform.

The soldier, after taking the fall of about sixty feet and landing in water over his head past the second bridge pier, nonchalantly swam ashore, with the presence of mind characteristic of Uncle Sam's fighters, and landed several feet below the bridge, where he was swept by the tide. The express pulled out, with the passenger still aboard the locomotive, after a delay of only ten minutes for the exciting experience.

The young man opened the coach door himself and stepped out to get a breath of morning air, according to railroad officials, not knowing that the end of the train was on a bridge over the river.

MARINES LEAVE FOR CARIBBEAN

Quantico a Deserted Village with Sea Soldiers Away on Winter Maneuvers.

Three thousand Marines embarked Wednesday on the transports Henderson and Chaumont at Quantico for the Caribbean to act as an accompanying landing force for the nation's fleet of one hundred warships which have steamed from their stations for the winter maneuvers at Panama. Quantico is like a deserted village, with only enough men to act as camp guards until the return of the force early in March.

The force which left Quantico includes infantry, light and heavy artillery, tanks, a strong aviation detachment, a signal detachment, equipped with wireless telegraph and telephone apparatus of the latest and most powerful type; machine gun organizations, automatic rifle companies, trench mortars, a chemical warfare company and a sapper and engineer detachment. Brigadier-General Eli K. Cole as commandant of the base, is in command, Brigadier-General Smedley D. Butler being on a year's leave of absence as director of public safety in Philadelphia.

When assembled in southern waters the fleet will consist of fifteen battleships, four light cruisers, sixty-three destroyers, eleven submarines, one airplane carrier, one airplane tender, four destroyer tenders, three submarine tenders, five layers and thirty-three train vessels, including repair, fuel and hospital ships, and attached to it will be eighty-seven airplanes. The fleet will be under the command of Admiral Robert E. Koontz.

The maneuvers will consist of tactical exercises planned to test the strength of the Panama canal defenses, in which the Army, Navy and Marine Corps will participate, and to test the practicability of attacking and defending a fortified land base by a force of marines in conjunction with a naval force.

COLORED COUPLE SHOT

Man and Wife at Dumfries Fired on from Ambush.

Walter Nash, colored, and his wife, Gussie, were taken from Dumfries to the Mary Washington Hospital in Fredericksburg on Sunday, both suffering from the effects of gunshot wounds which they received on Saturday night, says the Fredericksburg Free Lance. According to the man, he and his wife had been visiting near Dumfries, and were walking back from a dance, when, without warning, they were fired upon at close range. The full load from a shotgun, fired by an assailant from behind a clump of bushes, took effect. The man received a number of shot in his arms and legs, but was protected from more serious injury by a heavy overcoat. His wife was seriously injured in the abdomen and about the face, arms and legs. Their assailants escaped through the woods.

The victims of the shooting were taken to Quantico. An operation was performed on the woman Sunday afternoon.

Mr. F. E. Randall, of Washington, visited friends here this week.

TAX REDUCTION AND MELLON PLAN

Measure Proposed Will Not Relieve Farmers of One Penny of Taxation.

(Washington Letter)

The Mellon tax plan ought to be, and for the most part doubtless will be, discussed solely on its merits and shortcomings and without partisan rancor when the administration tax bill is before the Congress. In the meantime, people who wish to see equitable and scientific tax revision will do well to withhold their final judgment as to some phases of the bill until they have been analyzed and discussed. The nation-wide propaganda of the republican administration in favor of the bill has sought to commit the people of the country to the Mellon tax plan in every detail without telling them exactly what the plan is.

The New York Times of December 27 tells of the secrecy with which the text of the administration tax bill was guarded. The Times says:

"The bill in its entirety has not been made public either by the Treasury Department or by the Ways and Means Committee which has it under consideration. Members of that committee have been endeavoring at the request of Chairman Green to keep the text of the measure secret until after the holidays."

Since then, under pressure of democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee, the bill has been made public.

The features of the Mellon plan which stand out are, first, a reduction of the higher surtax from 50 per cent to 25 per cent, which means a tax reduction of nearly $200,000,000 on surtax incomes of the big taxpayers; secondly, a reduction of 25 per cent on earned incomes as differentiated from unearned incomes. The first of these proposals, the reduction of the higher surtax, was attempted in the last Congress, when Secretary Mellon made the same recommendation he is making now, and the republican tax bill provided for a reduction of the higher surtax from 65 per cent to 32 per cent. President Harding made a personal appeal by letter for such reduction. The democrats in the Senate offered an amendment fixing the higher surtax at 50 per cent, which was accepted. Ninety-four republican members of the House voted with the democrats to accept the democratic Senate amendment, which is now the law.

The second proposal of Mr. Mellon to reduce the tax on earned incomes 25 per cent is a half-way adoption of a democratic amendment offered by Senator Harris, of Georgia, in 1921 to reduce such earned incomes 50 per cent, which was defeated in the last Congress by a solid republican vote.

The third reported feature of fixing the normal tax at 3 per cent instead of 4 per cent on the first $4,000 net income and 6 per cent on the remainder is a modification of Senator Gerry's amendment to the republican tax bill of 1921 which provided for a normal tax of 2 per cent on the first $5,000, of 4 per cent on incomes between $5,000 and $10,000, 6 per cent on incomes between $10,000 and $15,000 and 8 per cent on incomes above that amount which was defeated by a solid republican vote with the exception of Senator Hiram Johnson.

Under the Mellon plan as reported the change on surtax rates makes the surtax begin on incomes of $10,000 instead of on $6,000 as at present.

No democratic opposition has developed to any of the Mellon proposals for either normal tax reduction or surtax reduction on the incomes of smaller taxpayers up to $15,000 or $20,000, and upon some of these features it is entirely probable that the democrats will insist upon a still greater reduction to this class of taxpayers.

With respect to the higher surtaxes, the democratic attitude seems to be, with the exception of a few individual members, that only such percentage of reduction should be made as can clearly be shown to be equitable. Upon this proposition, the opinion of many leading democrats in both houses is that the amount of reduction if any should be worked out by tax experts upon the basic theory underlying income taxation, which is ability to pay.

The entire record of tax reduction and attempted tax reduction since the close of the war shows that equitable tax reduction and all attempts to secure the same have been defeated by the republican members of the last two republican Congresses, and that the democrats have unanimously supported every measure for equitable tax reduction.

For a hundred years and more the democratic party, without any blare of trumpets or frenzied propaganda, has scrupulously preached and practised the twin policies of rigid economy and the lowest level of equitable taxation. During recent weeks the country has witnessed the unusual spectacle of a nation-wide propaganda in support of the specific Mellon tax reduction proposals. According to this propaganda, any citizen or member of Congress who does not pledge his unqualified support to the precise Mellon proposals by signing on the dotted line is prescribed as an enemy of honest equitable tax reduction. This arbitrary test was applied before the legislative draft of the Mellon tax reduction proposals, except in small part, had been made public.

In the meantime a desperate effort has been made to convince the farmer, the tradesman, and others that great mountains of imaginary burdens will be removed from them if the Mellon proposals can only be enacted into law as they are now written. The view has been heralded everywhere that all classes of income taxpayers whose income is derived from personal service will be given a reduction of 25 per cent in their taxes below the rates prescribed for incomes derived from invested capital.

The farmers of America and most of the individual tradesmen will now be astonished to discover that while the Mellon proposals on earned and unearned income take care of all salaried individuals, including $75,000 to $100,000 presidents of great corporations, to the extent of a 25 per cent tax reduction, every farmer and individual tradesman who combine their personal services with their capital for the purpose of producing taxable income are omitted from the 25 per cent earned income tax reduction of the Mellon proposals.

The Mellon definition of earned income is that it means wages, salaries and professional fees. The farmer and the tradesman, therefore, who supply their own capital and personal services do not receive either wages or professional fees. They work for themselves and derive an income from their joint capital and personal exertion. Undoubtedly, the owner of land who cultivates it himself should be regarded as earning his income, even though the owner of land who lets it to others to cultivate might not, at least in many instances. The democratic attitude is that at least all farmers or tradesmen whose income is derived substantially from their own personal labor should be given a 25 per cent tax reduction, which they are not given under the Mellon proposals.

Notwithstanding these astonishing omissions, some senators and congressmen representing agricultural constituencies are understood to have declared unconditionally for these tax reduction proposals.

In considering opposition to any phases of the Mellon plan, account must be taken of the large amount of republican opposition, which is by no means confined to the so-called progressive or radical element in the party, but is prevalent throughout the entire western section of the country, and particularly in agricultural sections. It is recalled that 94 Western republican members of the last Congress voted against the Mellon proposal in 1921 to reduce the higher surtaxes from 50 per cent to 32 per cent, and most of these members were returned to the present Congress.

One reason for this opposition is that the Mellon plan to reduce the higher surtaxes from 50 to 25 per cent will not relieve the millions of farmers of this country of one penny of taxation.

The chief beneficiaries of tax reduction made in 1921 by the last Congress were multi-millionaire surtaxpayers. On 1921 net taxable incomes the rate on $200,000 was 56 per cent and increased until the maximum was 65 per cent on incomes of $1,000,000 or more. As a result of the 1921 revenue bill the surtax rate on net taxable incomes from $20,000 up is 50 per cent. This saved the very large taxpayers $61,500,000. The repeal of excess profits taxes saved the same class of taxpayers $450,000,000 additional, making a total saving in taxes to the very big taxpayers of $511,500,000.

The smaller surtax payers also received some benefit by reason of the fact that on 1921 incomes the surtax started at $5,000, and under the tax bill passed at the last session the surtax rate for 1922 began on individual incomes in excess of $6,000. All attempts in the last Congress by the democrats to give substantial relief to the small taxpayers were defeated by the republican majority.

The enormous relief of $450,000,000 by the repeal of excess profits taxes went to the big corporations. During the four years of war these corporations so relieved made over $80,000,000,000 after paying excess profits taxes. About $19,000,000,000 of this was made by 1,000 corporations, among the largest of which were the "Mellon interests," dominated by the present Secretary of the Treasury, the steel trust, woolen trust, packers trust, coal trust, powder trust, Standard Oil, etc., all of which have enthusiastically endorsed the Mellon plan without, presumably, knowing the text of the administration bill to put the Mellon plan in effect. These are the same people who are now asking that the higher surtax rates be reduced from 50 per cent to 25 per cent on the theory that billions of dollars of wealth now tied up in tax-exempt securities will be withdrawn and reinstated in industry, accompanied also by the statement that the proposed reduction in the higher surtaxes would eventually yield a larger revenue from great incomes than at present. These statements rest more on theories than on facts. If it can be shown by impartial expert testimony that these interests are entitled to any further reduction from what they received in the last Congress, it will be a matter for this Congress to take into consideration as a matter of equity.

Taxation is a necessary evil to human governments. It is always a painful subject. There is no such thing as popular legislation for the levying of taxes, however popular the idea of tax reduction may be. There are, however, some ways and means of levying and collecting taxes less objectionable than others. The tariff for instance, lays tribute on the pauper's crust of bread and the beggar's rags; makes the poor bear a heavier burden than the rich, but worst of all it permits the use of the people's government to take toll from the people principally, if not primarily, for the enrichment of special privilege.

The income tax is the nearest approach to equitable assessment of the cost of government, because it seeks to make each citizen pay in proportion to his means, and indirectly, in the ratio of the protection and benefit he receives from government for himself and his property.

The tariff tax on the other hand, except when levied for revenue and upon a competitive basis is the most unfair and discriminatory tax that can be levied. It is the creation of the republican party which uses it as a bribe to capital, to industry and to every agency that will accept it as a return for support of that party. The revenues from the income tax go into the Treasury of the United States, but under the existing Fordney-McCumber Tariff act only 12½ per cent of the revenues go into the Treasury and the balance, $3,500,000,000, goes into the pockets of special privilege.

Secretary Mellon's tax plan proposes a reduction of only $323,000,000. The Fordney-McCumber Tariff lays a tax upon the people, conservatively placed at $4,000,000,000. Any consideration of tax reduction to benefit all of the people must necessarily include a reduction of the extortionate rates in the present tariff bill, which is responsible largely for the high cost of living and for the more rapid concentration of wealth in the hands of the special privilege class. The chief beneficiaries of this tariff are the large trusts and the great combinations of capital of which the "Mellon interests" are a part. There is no suggestion from Secretary Mellon or President Coolidge or any member of the administration for a reduction of this enormous tariff tax. On the contrary, the President lets it be known that he ascribes what he calls our present prosperity to this tariff tax, which keeps up the present high cost of living.

The democratic party favors honest and scientific taxation, with taxes equitably levied and as low as the needs of government will permit. It favors this policy both with respect to income taxes and to tariff taxes, and there is every reason for asserting that the representatives of the democratic party in Congress will adhere to this traditional party policy in discussing and voting upon the so-called Mellon plan in order that equitable tax reduction may be had.

Officers of the republican administration, including Secretary Mellon and leaders of his party in Congress are provoking resentment among wage-workers, farmers and every class of consumers by their persistent exclusion of the tariff from their discussions of taxation. They are being charged with a deliberate attempt to forestall a reduction of the republican tax of $200,000,000 a year on sugar, and the exorbitant duties on other necessities.

In his annual report Secretary Mellon says: "High taxation, even if levied upon an economic basis, affects the prosperity of the country, because in its ultimate analysis the burden of all taxes rests only in part upon the individuals or property taxed. It is borne by the ultimate consumer. High taxation means a high price level and high cost of living. It can safely be said that the reduction in the income tax reduces expenses not only of the 7,000,000 income taxpayers but of the entire 110,000,000 people of the United States."

The income tax is the one tax which, as a rule, cannot be passed on to the consumer. The tariff, on the other hand, is paid in full and more by the consumer by reason of pyramiding and profiteering.

The aggregate of all the income and profits taxes collected for 1921, as shown in the latest report, was $1,420,962,538. This sum was paid directly by some 7,000,000 individuals and corporations. Tariff taxes total $4,000,000,000 annually—$2,500,000,000 more than the aggregate of income and profits taxes collected for 1921.

Income and profits taxes average $13 per capita. The tariff costs every man, woman and child of the 110,000,000 inhabitants of the United States $36 each.

Secretary Mellon is heavily interested in the Aluminum Company of America, among scores of other big corporations. This concern, known as the Aluminum Trust, was prosecuted by the government for violating the Federal laws prohibiting restraints of trade and other similar practices and is even now being attacked in the Federal Courts on practically the same charges. In the face of these alleged breaches of the laws the republican Congress gave Mr. Mellon's trust "protection" ranging from 22 to 71 per cent—and averaging 45 per cent—on its products.

On July 31, 1921, Mr. Mellon's trust had accumulated a surplus of $92,153,861, and according to its president, had earned during the ten years ended December 31, 1920, an average of $10,000,000 annually. This was after deductions for interest, taxes, depletion, depreciation, etc. Every user of aluminum in the form of wire, parts of automobiles, kitchen ware, etc., pays the present tariff on this monopoly's products and helps thereby to swell its earnings and surplus. There is a republican tariff of 11 cents a pound plus 55 per cent ad valorem—equivalent to 71.2 per cent on every pot and pan and utensil of aluminum sold to the housewives of the United States.

There are many combines and monopolies which, like the Aluminum Trusts, are being enriched by this republican tariff. Like Secretary Mellon and the authors and beneficiaries of the Fordney-McCumber law they doubtless would like to limit the meaning of the phrase "tax reduction" and make it apply only to surtaxes. In that way, apparently, they hope they can keep the vast wealth they derive from the tariff and at the same time get the advantage of a decrease in their income and profits taxes; in short, win both ways.

SCHOOL LIBRARIES

While the number of library books available to Virginia schools and communities has been of unenviable record in contrast with the number provided in other states, our present library situation, with an insistent demand from a rising generation of readers, promises a favorable elevation in rating.

Under the old plan, prior to July, school officials obtained small $40 libraries from a book dealer under contract with the state board of education, and the money for the books was supplied co-operatively by the community, the school board and the state board of education. Under the new plan, books are to be obtained direct from the publishers, according to a specially prepared Virginia list, and at an estimated saving of twenty per cent, which is of particular value in consideration of strained public finances for educational work throughout the state.

A feature of the old plan, still operative, permits the purchase of $40 worth of books, $15 to be paid by subscription, the same amount by the school board and the remaining $10 by state aid. Unfortunately the state appropriation for the purpose has been exhausted, but orders are being filled, with the understanding that the $10 state aid will be refunded whenever another appropriation is made by the legislature.

COMMITTEES IN CONGRESS

Five Virginia congressmen have been assigned by the democratic House caucus to "exclusive" committees, which are recognized as most important assignments barring membership on any other congressional committees. Hon. R. Walton Moore, of the eighth district, is assigned to the important Committee on Foreign Affairs.

The other committee assignments are as follows: Mr. Bland, of the first district, Merchant Marine and Fisheries, Expenditures in Department of Justice and Patents; Mr. Deal, of the second district, Rivers and Harbors; Mr. Montague, of the third district, Judiciary; Mr. Drewry, of the fourth district, Naval Affairs; Mr. Hooker, of the fifth district, Post Offices and Post Roads; Mr. Woodrum, of the sixth district, Industrial Arts and Expositions; Mr. Harrison, of the seventh district, Appropriations; Mr. Peery, of the ninth district, Roads, Census and Revision of Laws, and Mr. Tucker, of the tenth district, Education, Expenditures of the Treasury and Railroads and Canals.

OUR COTTON RECORD

With the mercury hanging low and frost nipping finger tips and venturesome ears, a bit of information affecting Virginia's cotton crop is welcome news to us who live in northern Virginia, reminding us in definite terms that we still belong to the Sunny South.

Virginia has won the distinction this year of making the highest yield of cotton per acre of any state in the union, according to statistics compiled by Mr. Henry M. Taylor, of the Virginia crop reporting service, and broadcast throughout the state by Mr. Carter W. Wormeley, of the state department of publicity.

Virginia's average acre of cotton, not including the seed at $12 an acre, was valued at $104. Arizona is the only state in the union which made a higher average per acre, and the valuation in Arizona, where long staple cotton is grown on irrigated land, was only $105.75. North Carolina's average acre was valued at $89.32. In Mississippi the value dropped to $28.93, and in Florida, at the bottom of the list, to $11.52.

Cotton growing is something fairly new for the Old Dominion. Virginia cotton planters this year devoted 73,000 acres to the crop, which is thought to have made 50,000 bales of cotton. Last year 55,000 acres produced about 27,000 bales. How is that for Virginia?

THE GREATEST THINGS IN THE WORLD

There are politics, sermons, theatres and books. Country houses, gardens, motor cars and cooks, Murders and divorces, latest styles in dress, Of incalculable value and importance measureless; But there is nothing in the whole world so worthwhile As a wide-eyed baby with a toothless smile!

There are film queens, vampires, charity sales; Old college chums with hard-luck tales; Painted little flappers who greet you with a kiss, Ladies who "don't know why I am telling you all this!" But there is nothing in the world that your heart can beguile Like a wide-eyed baby with a toothless smile!

There are oily promoters who make you sign a creed; There are agents who sell you books you can't read; There are men who cajole you and lead you far astray, And women who wheedle all your money away; But there is not in all the world such a tempting, winning wile As a wide-eyed baby with a toothless smile!

You may travel around from Paris to Peru; To Irkutsk, Oshkosh, Tunis, Timbuctoo; To Maine or Madagascar, to Turin or Troy, To Arcady or Arkansas—you'll never find a joy From Greenland's icy Mountains to Ceylon's sunny isle, Like a wide-eyed baby with a toothless smile! —Carolyn Wells.

LEAGUE TO MEET MONDAY EVENING

The Treasury Department on November 30 reported that during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, the prohibition bureau turned into the Treasury of the United States $5,142,566, representing fines, taxes, penalties and forfeitures in connection with the enforcement of the dry laws. The figures do not include fines assessed in state courts. In making the figures public the bureau pointed out that the appropriation for prohibition enforcement last year was only $8,350,000. These figures are commended to the consideration of the croakers who are harping on the alleged cost to the taxpayers of prohibition enforcement. When the fines, taxes and forfeitures collected by the states are taken into consideration, prohibition law enforcement is more than paying its own way.

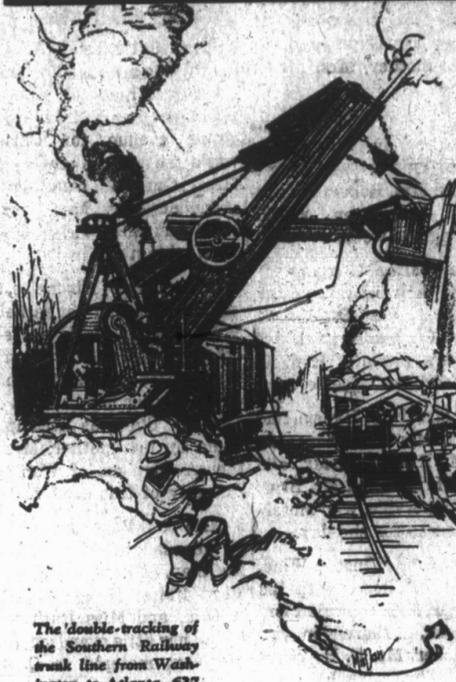

Judge Barrett, of the Federal court of Savannah, Ga., on December 7, sentenced 24 defendants convicted on conspiracy and other charges of violating the prohibition laws, to pay fines totaling $150,500 and to serve terms in the federal penitentiary. The majority of those receiving the penalties are well known Savannah men. The sentences ranged from $500 fines to $1,000 fines and from one to two years in the penitentiary. Here is still further evidence of the fact that money and influence no longer grant immunity to the violator of the prohibition laws. The "higher ups" in rum running and bootlegging conspiracies are headed for federal prison just as certainly as the poor ignorant back alley bootlegger is headed for the county jail.

The "gigantic rum fleet" which was loudly heralded as being off the New York and Jersey coast before the holidays, is said by the New York Tribune, on investigation, to have dwindled to two boats, and they were outside the twelve-mile limit. Are those stories about the rum fleet simply the propaganda of bootleggers put out on purpose of inducing the thirsty to purchase the poisonous concoctions falsely labeled as well known brands of foreign liquors?

Here is another editorial taken from the Washington Post of recent date. All the boozers should carefully read it. "Investigation by the bureau of internal revenue has proved that the great bulk of bootleg liquor carries poisons that spell death or chronic diseases for drinkers. Facts found by Dr. J. M. Doran, head of the bureau's industrial alcohol division, are enough to make the most reckless drinker shudder and "swear off." With death and disease as the handmaids of John Barleycorn, drink takes on a real menace. Realization that the gratification of a desire for a swallow may cost life and health should make the drinker pause. With full warning of the menace that lurks in bootleg booze, drinking takes on the nature of suicidal action. "It is told on the street that a customer of one of our most popular and prosperous bootleggers reports that when he filed a kick about the high prices of booze, he was told, "Why shouldn't it be high when I have to pay for protection?" Will the reader kindly find out for us just who gets the money? We think we know but we want all the information we can get on the subject.

BLOND BESS OPINES
 "Yes, I'm a flapper and powdering my nose is quite a problem—in fact, it keeps me so busy I haven't time to put it into other people's affairs."

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

The double-tracking of the Southern Railway trunk line from Washington to Atlanta, 637 miles, cost $52,000,000.

Plowing back the earnings

In the ten years ending 1920 freight traffic on the Southern Railway System more than doubled. This was a very much larger gain than was shown by the railroads of the country as a whole. The South was growing faster than the rest of the country.

The Southern had to meet the test, but we had provided for such a demand. In these ten years we had expended $104,000,000 of new capital to increase the carrying capacity of our lines.

Our double-track had been increased from 443 to 1,021 miles; yard tracks and sidings from 2,786 to 3,351 miles; the tractive power of our locomotives had been increased 40 per cent; our average freight trainload had mounted from 274 to 500 tons, a notable gain in operating efficiency.

Of the $104,000,000 expended for additions and betterments, $21,000,000 only was obtained by the sale of new securities. The other $83,000,000 was taken from earnings and used in the improvement of the properties.

The upbuilding of the Southern Railway System to keep pace with the South has been planned with an understanding of the transportation needs of the South by men bred in the traditions of the South to know its problems.

The Southern serves the South, and it will serve the greater South of the future.

Southern Railway System Last year spent in the South $20,000,000 more than it received from the South.

EYE DEPENDENCE

Quickness of the eye is essential to success in both active outdoor sports and the harder game of business. Men and women of keen vision are the leaders everywhere. This being true, how particular a person should be to make sure he is not being handicapped by some known or unknown defect of vision. If you are not absolutely sure that your eyesight is perfect, have your eyes examined; and if the result shows that you need glasses, get them at once and wear them faithfully. Don't let foolish prejudice stand in your way—often the seemingly small things in life make the dividing line between success and failure.

Pay With a Check

¶ Said a farmer friend the other day: "I've been owing a little bill to old man Blank, 12 miles south of here, for some time. I guess I'll drive over there today and pay him."

¶ We talked him out of it. Not out of paying the debt, but of making the drive. We advised him to mail Mr. Blank a check. The whole transaction then cost only the price of a two-cent stamp. And when the check came back it acted as a receipt. You can't afford to crank up even a "Henry" and make a 24 mile drive when a two-cent stamp will do the work for you, and do it better.

Will Not Prosecute Officer.

No action is to be taken against Len Wilborn, said to be a state prohibition agent, who shot and wounded Walter Harris, near Virgilina, when Harris tried to escape after being arrested on the charge of drinking in a public place. Harris is alleged to have attempted his escape when granted opportunity to give bail pending appeal from the decision of the justice who fined him $24. Wilborn is a brother of Mayor John Wilborn, of South Boston.

Clock Menaces Life.

William B. Cornwell, prominent Winchester corporation and railroad president and a brother of former Governor John J. Cornwell, of West Virginia, was knocked down and rendered unconscious Saturday evening when a large grandfather's clock in the hallway of the residence of W. A. Baker toppled over, striking him on the back of the head. Mr. Cornwell was one of a party of friends being entertained at the Baker home before a dance. He was given first-aid treatment by a physician who was present and then removed to his home, where he regained consciousness.

Dies from Seasickness.

John Mozingo, aged twenty-five, was found dead on Christmas day in the engine room of his gasoline launch on the Potomac, where he had gone to lie down while suffering from seasickness, says a news letter from Heathsville to the Richmond Times-Dispatch. The sea was rough and all members of the party on his boat felt the effects. When they failed to return at the expected time a search was instituted. Mr. Mozingo was found dead and other members of the party in a desperate condition. The others are now out of danger. Mr. Mozingo leaves his wife and one child.

Centenarian Passes Away.

John McCarthy, said to have been more than 100 years old and one of the pioneer employees of what is now the Southern Railway system, died last week at a Catholic institution in Richmond and was buried at his former home in Harrisonburg. McCarthy was born in Ireland and came to America as a young man. His first work was in the construction of what was then the Manassas gap railroad, between Manassas and Strasburg. Later he was employed in the building of the Southern branch line from Strasburg to Harrisonburg. Some years ago he received a gold medal from President Fairfax Harrison, of the Southern Railway, in recognition of fifty years of service with the road.

Burned by Fireworks.

The use of Christmas fire-crackers at Martinsville has probably deprived James Cox, four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Cox, of his eyesight. The little boy is in a Danville hospital with one eye virtually blown out and the other so badly injured that he may never have the use of it. The child was standing behind an older boy for safety when a Roman candle backfired and two balls of fire struck him in the eye.

Josephine Garth, six-year-old daughter of the late Lewis Garth, was badly burned about the body and arms while fireworks were being discharged at the home of Herbert Peyton, near Charlottesville. A sweater thrown over the child's head by her nurse, probably prevented her from swallowing the flames.

Who Slew the Bear?

The bear is dead! The report came to Sylvatus that a bear was in Wythe county a mile or so from Sylvatus. A dozen or more citizens journeyed forth to battle, according to the story from Sylvatus to the Times-Dispatch. Steve Richardson, being the first to see the object of pursuit, immediately took deadly aim and fired. The big black fellow fell. While Mr. Richardson's friends were congratulating him on killing the bear, a few citizens from Hillsville came up and escaped with the game.

And then! A bear chase has been in progress in Carroll county, says the Times-Dispatch correspondent from Hillsville. Dr. G. M. Good and Harold Early, assisted by many other men, rounded him up about eight miles north of Hillsville, and killed him. He was brought to Hillsville and viewed by many who had never seen a bear.

WE ANNOUNCE THE OPENING OF

The Oyster Season

It is with perhaps a pardonable pride that at this season of the year we try to emphasize the excellence of our cuisine. To lovers of sea foods it means that their time of the year has arrived. We are now serving oysters in the various ways, and we would like your patronage. Just as a little reminder, a box of fried oysters taken home after the show would prove very acceptable. We also sell them in quantities. And if you are ever in doubt as to what is absolutely the best candy to eat—not for the pretty box, for you can't eat that—try Martha Washington.
