VA. PUBLIC SERVICE COMPLETES LAST LINK

The Line Between Occoquan and Remington Joining All V. P. S. Plants Is Completed.

The Virginia Public Service Company announces the completion of the last link of its tie line between Occoquan, Va., and Remington, Va., which joins together all of the plants of the Virginia Public Service Company, as well as those of the Virginia Electric and Power Company. This completed circuit is known as a ring feeder network and is approximately 610 miles in length.

The section just completed joins together the Roncoverte, W. Va., steam station to the Alexandria, Va., steam station by a trunk line 230 miles long. At Goshen, on this line, there is another line approximately 200 miles in length extending through Southern Virginia and extending to Roanoke Rapids, N. C., where the Virginia Electric and Power Company has a very large hydro development.

The transmission line of Virginia Electric & Power Company links Roanoke Rapids hydro plant with other hydro plants and a number of large and efficient steam plants. This line serves the cities of Norfolk, Petersburg, Richmond, Fredericksburg, Quantico and ends at Occoquan, Virginia, where it is connected to another line of the Virginia Public Service Company leading to Alexandria. EARLY DIAGNOSIS CAMPAIGN SOON

Virginia Tuberculosis Association and Health Department To Hold Clinics.

REV. A. STUART GIBSON IS COUNTY CHAIRMAN

Clinics Will Be Held In Prince William County On August 20 and 21.

Plans are being completed for an early diagnosis campaign to be conducted in Prince William County by the Virginia Tuberculosis Association cooperating with the State Department of Health, which will hold chest clinics in the county, August 20 and 21.

A meeting of interested citizens was called by Rev. A. Stuart Gibson, county chairman for the Virginia Tuberculosis Association, to discuss plans for the campaign and for the clinic. It was decided to distribute health literature through the churches and at other public gatherings and announcements will be made at the same time concerning the campaign and clinics. Posters will also be used throughout the county.

Field Worker Explains.

Miss Marian J. Gray, field worker for the Virginia Tuberculosis Association, explained that the early diagnosis campaign is a part of a national movement to teach the early symptoms, or danger signs of tuberculosis, with the advice, "Let Your Doctor Decide", as most people are prone to allow the disease to develop before consulting their physicians.

Examinations For Anyone.

Miss Lillian Bayley, representative of the State Health Department, stated that while the primary object of clinics is the discovery of the early cases of tuberculosis, the examinations are for anyone who is not "feeling well", and that frequently other conditions are found which should have medical treatment, and yet these patients are not under their doctors' care. She further explained that the clinics are for adults and no child under 15 will be examined unless arrangements are made prior to the clinic with the State nurse, or the child is recommended by the family physician for examination. The reason for this, Miss Bayley explained, is that X-ray and tuberculin tests are required to make a diagnosis in children, and the specialist will not have time to examine but 30 patients a day.

MORE RIGID MILK INSPECTION NEED

Mayor Davis Seeks Rigid Sanitary Requirements Surrounding Milk Handling In Manassas.

One of the most important steps ever taken by the Town Council of Manassas was the adoption of a resolution which will lead to regulations governing the handling of milk and cream being delivered to the town before it reaches here as well as the enforcement of regulations governing the care of it by merchants and others who retail it.

This forward movement was brought about by the action of Mayor Harry P. Davis, who called upon the town health officer for a report on the conditions of dairies serving people in Manassas, as well as a report on conditions found to exist with regard to the care of it by the retailer.

Under the plan Dr. Stewart McBryde, the health officer, will meet with the council to formulate regulations governing the care of milk and cream and arrange to set up standards of requirements which when carried out will surround the people of the town with safeguards similar to those enjoyed by consumers in the cities, but not now prevailing 100 per cent here.

The preliminary report of the health officer gave many of the dairies hereabouts a clean bill of health as well as many of the retail merchants who handle the product, but it was revealed that some of the sources of supply did not measure up to proper sanitary standards, and it is to correct these shortcomings that the council will act.

GREENWICH DEMONSTRATION CLUB HAS ENTERTAINMENT

Members of the Greenwich Home Demonstration Club gave a delightful entertainment last Thursday night for the husbands and children of the membership. The party was held on the lawn of the Manse.

Following a brief business session of the club an interesting program was given consisting of a number of readings by the Misses Margorie Middleton and Sara Donohue, while several vocal numbers were given by Mr. Clark, of Manassas.

The hit of the evening was the "Calling Husband To Dinner" contest for which three prizes were offered. Mrs. R. C. Strother proved the most effective husband caller and captured first prize; Mrs. W. L. Lloyd in musical, yet resonant tone, made a sufficient impression on her husband to land second prize, while Mrs. J. L. Mayhugh's "husband calling" placed a good third. The committees appointed by Mrs. W. L. Lloyd, club president, functioned beautifully and the program moved smoothly. The evening was topped off with refreshments consisting of ice cream, cake and punch.

The Democratic Committee for the legislative district composed of Prince William and Stafford Counties, has adopted the following resolution declaring Dan M. Chichester the Democratic nominee for the House of Delegates:

THINGS OF THE SOIL

The Manassas Journal's Complete Agricultural Service
By DAN VAN GORDER

Questions of lawns, gardens and general farming are discussed in this department each week. Readers of The Manassas Journal are invited to use this new column for the answer to their question and the solution of their problems. Address all inquiries to The Manassas Journal Information Bureau, Van Gorder News Service, Manassas, Virginia.

DISAPPEARING SOILS.

Scientists last year unearthed a prehistoric skeleton of a giant animal in the waste lands of western Mongolia, the fossil remains of which were indicative of size far beyond our present day conceptions of animal growth. They believe this animal attained its mammoth proportions through an omnivorous appetite that not only exhausted all plant food within its reach, but rendered it unable to travel to other regions for food. Thus it perished when its local supplies were consumed, the victim of its own greed for continued glutony in a land of plenty. The scenes of this animal's existence is now a bleak, vegetationless desert.

Most of our eastern farming regions of the United States now under cultivation were virgin soil one hundred years ago. Through long centuries of enrichment by decaying vegetation the land was left to the pioneer settlers well supplied with plant food elements. By injudicious cropping on a large portion of these lands so much of the priceless top soils has been lost by erosion and a constant drain by ill-planned cropping that our wheat yield is only 14.6 bushels per acre; corn in the neighborhood of 28 bushels; and other grains and vegetable crops in proportion. Pasturage has declined until five acres are necessary to maintain one unit of livestock through a short pasturing season in many areas.

The recital of these present day agricultural statistics is not in a pessimistic tone, but as a note of warning that like the giant of the rich Mongolian plans back in the dawn of history, we may not consume our means of sustenance with a crowded mammoth civilization, and find moving to other virgin regions impossible and continued existence in our present location fatal.

There are thousands of acres of soils on American farms today under cultivation that should be protected from costly erosion by using them for permanent pasturage or fruit growing. The practice of cultivating hill and steep or rolling lands where washing and gullying cannot be prevented is too expensive to be continued. There are few farms in the eastern part of the United States on which there are not a few acres at least, rendered waste or semi-waste by sheet erosion. On many there are gullies that are almost beyond repair.

Great as has been our soil losses during the last five or six decades by erosion, the drain by improper cropping has perhaps exceeded in removing a larger amount of plant food necessary for proper soil balance.

Every bushel of grain, every pound of forage crop, milk or butter, every animal sold from the farm removes valuable soil elements that must be replaced if the soil fertility is maintained at a standard for continued profitable crop production.

The purchase of artificial plant food in the form of commercial fertilizers is a costly substitute for proper farm management. Physicians administer stimulants to patients only as emergency treatments to permit sufficient time to diagnose the disease and start the body back to normal health. With the possible exception of phosphorus and occasionally potash, fertilizers should be used only in the role of boosting maximum crops to higher production levels. Yet on many farms the use of fertilizers is practiced in order to attain even a minimum production.

Growing legumes, proper rotations, drainage corrections, use of farm manures and other soil building practices are the normal processes by which the soil can be brought back to a healthy condition. Of course, the use of fertilizers will continue to have a prominent place in crop production, and should be a part of the farm and garden management plans, but the practice of relying almost entirely on artificial stimulants for crop growth is too unprofitable for continuance.

A large portion of our farm and truck growing land is in an acid condition. On these soils few legumes will thrive. Thus no nitrogen is restored to the soil from the air by plant action. All nitrogen required by the growing crop must be purchased in high-priced fertilizer mixtures or nitrogen bearing products. Besides this result, potash which is usually present in most of our soils in varying quantities, is unavailable for plant use in acid soils. The application of sufficient lime to neutralize the soil acidity will not only make possible nitrogen fixation by permitting the growing of legumes, but will unlock the valuable stores of potash for plant development.

The return of soil fertility through the use of farm manures is too practical to require comment. Failure to follow this practice is quite often the descending avenue to lowered crop production and eventual failure.

In regions where livestock farming is possible, where markets are available and land suited to this industry, dairying and other livestock activities permit a swift rejuvenation of tired soils.

But soil depletion is not confined alone to major crop farming. Vegetable gardeners face a battle for production standards through failing soil as that call for heavy outlays for artificial fertilizers. With the vegetable grower crop rotation is not always possible. Here the use of manures, especially green manure crops, is urgent.

Checking the annual drain of erosion and the steady decline of soil fertility through selling crops from the soil with little or no return of plant food elements is a problem that faces every grower of crops. It requires a constant and scientific application of cautious management to solve.

Primary arithmetic will reveal that one hundred years more of soil exhaustion at our present rate will bring our choicest lands to the status of the barren regions of death in western China where the giant mammoth perished from its own abnormal growth and failure to utilize its growth and failure to utilize its health and life sustaining necessities. SEE IT THROUGH.

When you're up against a trouble,

Meet it squarely, face to face;
Lift your chin and set your shoulders,

Plant your feet and take a brace.

When it's vain to try to dodge it,
Do the best that you can do;
You may fail, but you may conquer,

See it through!

Black may be the clouds about you

And your future may seem grim.

But don't let your nerve desert you;

Keep yourself in fighting trim.

If the worst is bound to happen,
Spite of all that you can do,
Running from it will not save you,

See it through!

Even hope may seem but futile.

When with troubles you're beset,

But remember you are facing
Just what other men have met.

You may fail, but fail still fighting;

Don't give up, whatever you do;

Eyes front, head high, to the finish.

See it through!

D. M. CHICHESTER UNPOSED.

It is not known whom the Republicans will choose to oppose Dan M. Chichester in the November election, or whether they will put any one in the field. Inquiry reveals that there is very little Republican hope of defeating the Democratic nominee, or of even making a creditable showing against him. They appear to be more interested in their candidate for Governor for whom they hope to poll a record vote in the two counties. Republican leaders say they will carry Stafford, which is normally Republican, by a substantial majority, and make the best showing in Prince William they have ever made.

However, many of the Republican leaders believe that if they nominate a candidate for the legislature Chichester and his friends throughout both counties would be stirred to such activity as would result in such a large Democratic vote that they might not even be able to carry Stafford for the Republican candidate for governor.

E. E. Fisher, of Stafford, is still considered the strongest candidate the Republicans could choose, but many of his own party admit that he probably would not be able to carry a single precinct against Chichester. It seems unlikely that the Republicans will nominate a Prince William man in view of the poor showing made two years ago by their candidate who was from this county.

BUREAUCRACY GROWS.

More and more is the disposition manifest to attribute a degree of responsibility for the tariff, now incubating behind closed doors, at the hands of the Republican members of the Senate finance committee.

There has been a very general effort exercised indirectly to convey the impression that the President was opposed to the exactions of the bill as it came from the House of Representatives, but nobody has yet been able to get a direct expression from the President about this.

When the debenture plan of farm relief was pending in the Senate President Hoover solemnly warned Congress that foreign governments would retaliate for such an enactment by establishing countervailing duties. We have not been told by the administration why such foreign governments would so act in the case of the debenture and not in the case of a prohibitive tariff.

Senator Borah, Republican, of Idaho, assails the new tariff from another angle, one peculiarly concerned with the President. Borah denounces the flexible tariff provision as exceeding in wickedness any proposal in the new tariff bill.

"In my opinion," says Senator Borah, "there is no better illustration of the growth of bureaucracy to be had than the story of the flexible tariff. Congress started out by authorizing the President, upon ascertainment of a simple fact, to wit, the passage of a law in a foreign country, to put into effect certain rates. Congress next authorized the President, with the aid of the Tariff Commission, to ascertain the cost of production at home and abroad. Now in this bill they propose that he shall ascertain the difference in competitive conditions at home and abroad. In other words, we are now delegating the full taxing power to the Executive. In my opinion, the present proposal is in utter violation of the Constitution. Absolute bureaucracy is sure to result if the trend is not checked."

And Borah was the staunchest supporter of Herbert Hoover during the campaign. He, more than any other individual, stilled the revolt of the Northwestern farmers against Hoover's candidacy, and he caused the candidate to promise an extra session for farm relief, that has resulted, sorely to Borah's disappointment, in an opportunity to impose further burdens on the farmer as well as every other citizen, for the benefit of the favored interests whose dividends are increased under the proposed tariff schedules.

HEADQUARTERS AT MURPHY'S.

Those who are interested in knowing who will govern Virginia if the Anti-Smith-Republican ticket wins next fall, will gather some information by looking about Murphy's Hotel, in Richmond. They will find, in rooms, listed in name of Bishop Cannon, offices where the Reverend J. Sydney Peters, once having a wide and not too inspiring reputation in the State, is in command of Headquarters. Mr. Peters, it is said, is a "strong-silent man," not addicted to publicity but politically astute. E. E. Johnson, a Culpeper attorney, is officially the head of the Anti-Smith faction in Richmond, but with Bishop Cannon and Rev. Peters on the scene, Mr. Johnson will not do any very original work.

It is useless to go extensively into the past, for all Virginians will remember that when Rev. J. Sydney Peters was at the head of the State Prohibition Department certain incidents occurred which did not polish up his reputation, and that when he went out of the office it was without public mourning.

It is entirely apparent that if the Anti-Smith-Republican ticket wins this fall, Virginia is to

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

FOR AUGUST 4, 1929.

The International Sunday School Lesson for August 4, is "Belshazzar's Feast"—Daniel 5:1-31. A Temperance Lesson.

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

A brick from Babylon lies in my study. All the way from the ruins of Babylon, where jackals now howl and owls hoot and where no man dwells, I carried this souvenir. It is the strange policy of the present Iraq Government to let the ruins of Babylon, so carefully excavated by the Germans under Dr. Kaldewey, revert to shapeless desolation, and whose ever cares to do so many carry away mementos of the great days of Nebuchadnezzar.

When I visited Babylon in January, 1911, the whole plan of Nebuchadnezzar's palace had been meticulously laid bare, so that one could walk through the identical chambers and passageways once trodden by the feet of the famous monarch who ruled his world. I was most of all impressed by the great throne room of the palace, every brick of the floor in perfect position, where it had been cemented in bitumen, twenty-five hundred years ago. The Germans even pointed out to me the alcove where doubtless stood the king's throne. Here sat Belshazzar during the revelry which was so dramatically ended by the mysterious hand, writing a message of doom on the opposite wall.

One of these throne-room bricks still remain on the sadly-despoiled site where I recently went again to Babylon. So I brought it home with me, the black bitumen still clinging to one side, and the other stamped with the name and a grandiloquent inscription of Nebuchadnezzar. The brick is sun-baked, about 15 inches square and three inches thick. I hope it will serve as a commentary upon the Book of Daniel for the students at Columbia Theological Seminary.

A Real Man in a Real Time. Any evidence is to be welcomed that helps make real and historic these Old Testament stories. The tendency is widespread to regard them as religious nursery tales. That Belshazzar's feast was a real feast, and that he himself was a real man in a real world, is the first message of this Lesson. It used to be the fashion, among the pseudo-learned sceptics, before archaeology had come into its own, to deride this tale of Belshazzar. It was boldly affirmed, within the memory of most readers of these lines, that there never had been such a person as Belshazzar. He was said to be only a fiction of a fanatically Jewish imagination.

Then, upon a momentous day, the late Dr. Albert T. Clay, of Yale, deciphered a cuneiform tablet from Nippur, mentioning Belshazzar as the brother of a daughter of Nabonidus, who had been sent to Ur of the Chaldees as abbess of a convent, or similar religious institution. Now, marvel of marvels, Major Leonard Woolley has excavated, at Ur of the Chaldees, that very convent, with records concerning the abbess, her brother Belshazzar, and her father Nabonidus, who, after a brief interval, had succeeded Nebuchadnezzar as king of Babylon! These uncanny confirmations of Scripture which our own day is bringing to light in such number recall the passage, "He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh".

An Oriental Carouse. One of the classics of all literature be ruled by an oligarchy of which Bishop Cannon will be the head and front, Reverend J. Sydney Peters the Lieutenant General, and Henry W. Anderson and C. Bascom Slemple only the advisory staff. It will not be a government by either the Democratic or the Republican party. It will be government by the Bishop.—Free Lance.

A Virginian man has had his appendix shot out in a gun fight. The patient's physicians say that while the removal of the organ was not altogether necessary at the present time, it was just as well, everything considered, for he might have had appendicitis later on. This is reminiscent of the story from Plutarch about the boy who, having thrown a stone at a dog, and hit his cruel stepmother, remarked that although he intended it otherwise, yet the stone was not entirely wasted.

—a perfect picture in words—is this fifth chapter of Daniel, with its story of Belshazzar's feast. Oriental magnificence, and the orgies which go with a drunken carouse, are clearly depicted. Flushed with strong drink, the party thought it would be "smart" to use as drinking cups in their debauch the sacred vessels of the Jews which Nebuchadnezzar had brought to Babylon after the destruction of the temple at Jerusalem. That kind of drunken bravado has had many a parallel since. Every man of the world knows kindred tales concerning present-day "parties", and their defiance of the decencies and the sanctities.

"When wine's in, wit's out." There is no need to cite modern instances of this truism. Drunkenness insures a person the privilege of making a fool of himself. I wonder if it would not be useful temperance propaganda, now that the amateur movie camera has come into common use, to take action-pictures of drinking parties, to show later to the participants when they become sober. No man of intelligence would ever again get drunk could he once see and hear his own actions while intoxicated. Every drinking party is a substantial evidence of the truth of Shakespeare's observation that strong drink is an enemy taken in the mouth to steal away one's brains.

It is scarcely too general a proposition to declare that modern drinking is atrophying all the finer sensibilities of those who indulge in it. Last Eastertide I attended in Philadelphia a performance of Wagner's solemnizing "Parsifal". During an intermission I joined a crowd of ladies and gentlemen about the drinking fountain; and there I saw a young society man brazenly take out a silver flask and share his gin with two other youths. The poor gilded fool had so calloused his hereditary instincts concerning the proprieties that he was without shame. Our recent commissions to examine into the consequences of bootlegging should give heed to the havoc that it is playing with the qualities of real gentility among a certain class of youth. Drunken Belshazzar, the unkingly figure, has had many successors.

Thrones That Topple. It may seem clever and courageous, to a drink-befuddled brain, to flout the decencies and to spurn the sanctities. Consider all the maudlin witticisms and defiances that have been hurled at the Prohibition law, and all other law, by drinking parties. Even so, Jehovah seemed a jest at Belshazzar's feast. It was fine sport to defile the holy vessels of His temple. There is nothing sacred—either patriotism or chastity or yet religion—when the wine flows in carouse.

Must we do all over again the old task of showing a new generation that considerations of personal health, social well-being, political purity and economic stability are all bound up with abstinence from strong drink? Have not young people sufficient native sense to look upon the past and learn? Are noble purposes and lofty ambitions so dormant that young men and women will cripple their powers by silly indulgence in an appetite which has to be cultivated? For the sake of sharing the modern versions of Belshazzar's feast, with the attendant sense of being "in things", will youth forego the primary prizes of person character and public service?

Weighted and Wanting. In letters of light, affrighting the drunken feasters, there appeared, dancing, dazling, dazing, upon the wall of the throne room of Babylon's palace four mysterious words, and the incredible Hand that wrote them. Upset were the vessels of wine as the startled carousers half rose from their reclining postures: I wonder if any of the spilled wine of that feast fell upon my brick? Nobody understood the meaning of the marvel: even the palace wise-men could not interpret this unprecedented happening. That it was dire and ominous was made only too plain after Daniel had given the interpretation. The king and the kingdom had been weighed in the balance and found wanting. Their feast day was their judgment day.

To face the terrible decree of the All-Wise and All-Powerful, "weighed and found wanting"—that is uttermost doom. That tribunal is inescapable, both here and now, as well as hereafter. The balances of God are for the weighing of every life. Many are found fit and fruitful: some share Belshazzar's fate. In the very midst of life's revelry the scales are sometimes set up: the banquet hall of life becomes a judgment hall. Within all the range of human mentality there is no more solemn thought possible than that everybody is inescapably answerable to the Living God.

MRS. D. ANNE EVANS IS BURIED FRIDAY

Died At Buckhall On July 24, Aged 71. Popular And Loved Throughout Community.

Mrs. Deliah Anne Evans, wife of W. A. Evans, died on Wednesday night July 24, at Buckhall, following an illness of several years.

Mrs. Evans, who was one of the best known residents of Prince William County, reached her seventy-first birthday three days before her death, having been born in Fairfax County on July 21, 1856.

The deceased, who came to Buckhall as a bride about 48 years ago, was greatly beloved throughout the community and up to the time of her illness had been active in church work and community affairs.

Funeral services were held on Friday afternoon at Buckhall, prayer being said at the house by Rev. George Hasel, minister of Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, South, after which the remains were carried to the Methodist Church, Buckhall, where the rites were held, followed by burial in the cemetery there. The esteem in which the deceased was held was attested by the number of people of the county attending the funeral, one of the largest ever held in the Buckhall church, while the numerous and beautiful floral pieces gave further evidence of her wide popularity.

The pallbearers were: Messrs. Jack Stauf, Wood Jasper, Robert Young, Paul Irwin, John Colbert and David Colbert.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Eva Pruitt, of Alexandria, and Mrs. Annie Weaver, of Buckhall; three sons, Messrs. Grover, William and Ernest Evans, of Manassas; one sister, Mrs. Martha Croson and a half sister, Mrs. Ada Rollins; two brothers, Messrs. Davis and Jack Gheen, and a half brother, Mr. P. S. Scientists say that flies carry germs of typhoid fever, infantile paralysis, summer disorders and over thirty other diseases. Flies should be killed. FLY-TOX is harmless to people but sure death to mosquitoes, roaches, moths and bedbugs as well as flies. FLY-TOX was developed at the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research by Rex Research Fellowship. Insist on FLY-TOX with its perfume-like fragrance.—Adv.

Mr. Herbert Neher and Miss Eva Hinegardner were recently united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents at Midland, Va.

The bride is the attractive daughter of Rev. and Mrs. John Hinegardner, of Midland, Va. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Neher, of Detroit, Mich., and is a business man of Schenectady, N. Y. He is employed as an electrical engineer for the National Radio Co.

The marriage took place on the beautiful lawn, and a bower of flowers, from which suspended a wedding bell of white flowers. The bride looked lovely in her bridal robe of white georgette over white satin, long veil of net, and orange blossoms. Her bouquet was bride roses and lilies of the valley. The wedding ceremony was conducted by Rev. Mr. Garber, of the Valley of Virginia, and was most impressive and beautiful. The wedding march by Wagner from Lohengrin was played by Mrs. Evelyn green. "O Promise Me" was sweetly sung by William Conner, of Manassas, accompanied by Miss Etta May Hottle, of Manassas.

The little flower girls, who strewed the path of the bride with rose petals, were Leona and Virginia Armstrong, and were dressed as fairies. The best man was the groom's brother, Robert Neher, of Dayton, Ohio. The matron of honor, Mrs. Willie Hinegardner, wife of the bride's brother, of Connecticut.

The bridesmaids were Agnes Miller, Midland, and Thelma Ramey, of Manassas. The groomsmen was John M. Kline, of Manassas.

All Sorts of Sandwiches

THE fun of a picnic starts with the making of the sandwiches if you go about it right. Don't retire to your kitchen and do all the work yourself, but invite your guests in and let them have a foretaste of the good things they are going to get to eat by letting them help make the sandwiches. If you're going far put your fillings in glass fruit jars so that the sandwiches won't get soggy and limp before you arrive. If your picnic grounds are nearby, put the sandwiches together right in the kitchen, and wrap them in oil paper to keep them fresh.

A Few New Kinds

They say that a new sort of sandwich is invented at every picnic. Here are a few recent inventions which were all eaten up when they were made:

Peanut Butter and Pineapple Sandwiches: Cream one-half cup of peanut butter, one-half cup of drained crushed pineapple, two tablespoons of chopped maraschino cherries, one tablespoon of cherry juice and one tablespoon of pineapple syrup together, and spread between thin slices of buttered white bread with a leaf of lettuce in each.

Cheese and Fruit Sandwiches: Mash two cream cheeses, add one-fourth cup of crushed drained pineapple and one-fourth cup of strawberry preserves, and cream well. Use between thin slices of buttered bread.

Pineapple and Marshmallow Sandwiches: Melt twelve marshmallows in a double boiler, add one-fourth cup of drained crushed pineapple and cook ten minutes. Cool and spread between buttered rounds of brown bread.
