

OUTSIDE HELP NOT ACCEPTED

Democratic Candidates State Financial Assistance Will Not Be Accepted.

Complete financial independence of the national Democratic committee has been declared in a statement issued by John Garland Pollard, Democratic nominee for Governor, James H. Price, Democratic nominee for attorney-general, J. Murray Hooker, chairman of the State Democratic Central Committee; Mrs. Robert C. Watts, Democratic National Committeewoman, and Harry F. Byrd, Democratic National Committeeman from Virginia.

"In behalf of the Democratic party, we state that no money has been or will be accepted from or through the National Democratic Committee or any of its officers outside of Virginia," the statement said. "The Republican party must determine its own policy in this respect."

This expression from all of the leading officers of the Democratic party in Virginia re-states a long-standing Virginia policy and disposes of newspaper reports that the national Democratic Committee or individual members thereof will share in the expense of the 1929 Virginia campaign.

State Issues Only.

"The only issues in this campaign are state issues," says the statement. "We are called to elect state officers only and national issues are not involved. Virginians are to determine whether they prefer to continue the progress that has been made or to risk that progress in the hands of those who assail the laws which have promoted it."

The statement in full follows:

"Next November the people of Virginia will elect a governor, a lieutenant-governor and an attorney-general. The Democratic party in a free and open primary in which all Democrats were privileged to participate has nominated men pledged to give this state good government."

"The Democratic party justifies confidence in its promise to give good government by its long record of clean and capable administration and it asks a renewed expression of confidence from the people to enable the party to strengthen and continue the remarkable progress which has been made under successive Democratic administrations."

"The only issues in this campaign are state issues. We are called to elect state officers only, and national issues are not involved. Virginians are to determine whether they prefer to continue the progress that has been made or to risk that progress in the hands of those who assail the laws which have promoted it."

No Outside Money Accepted.

"In all state campaigns in the past the Democratic party of Virginia has financed and conducted its campaigns within the state. In the very beginning of the campaign the people of Virginia have the right to know to what extent the newspaper publications are accurate in stating that the national organizations of the Republican and Democratic parties will finance and conduct the present state campaign in Virginia."

"In behalf of the Democratic party, we state that no money has been or will be accepted from or through the national Democratic committee or any of its officers outside of Virginia. The Republican party of Virginia must determine its own policy in this respect."

"Virginia Democrats are ready and willing to make contributions for the legitimate purposes necessary to present to Virginians the clear and compelling arguments for the continuation of the Democratic administration. The victory which we confidently expect will be a triumph for good government in Virginia and will determine neither the control of the Democratic party in the nation nor the decision of national issues."

Games, Amusements and Dancing Planned With Picnic Starting At 1 O'Clock.

A Labor Day picnic will be given at Dumfries on Monday, September 2, beginning at 1 p. m. The outing is given for the building fund of the I. O. O. F., and members of the order and their families are preparing a program of exceptional interest. There will be games of various kinds, many amusements and a dance will be held in the evening.

A cordial invitation is issued to the people of Prince William County to come and enjoy themselves, according to D. W. Crawford, secretary of the R. E. Lee Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Dumfries.

HENRY FORD BUYS MINE IN ORANGE

Vaucluse Property Once Richest Known Gold Deposit In America.

Fredericksburg, Va., August 28.—Henry Ford has purchased the Vaucluse gold mines in Orange County, said to have been worked profitably before the Civil War but abandoned since that time. The deed for the 200-acre tract, purchased from Judge Alvin T. Embury, of Fredericksburg, was recorded in the Orange County Courthouse yesterday.

The abandoned mine is 20 miles west of Fredericksburg and citizens here were interested in plans Mr. Ford might have. No announcement has been made by the purchaser as to whether the mine will be reopened.

The mines in Orange County are in the northeast corner near the Rapidan river. The first gold mining company incorporated in Virginia was the Virginia Mining Company of New York, operating from 1831 to 1894 near the St. Just postoffice.

The Vaucluse mine, discovered and opened in 1832, was probably the best known of the Orange County mines. In 1843 its plant was valued at $70,000.

Originally Orange mines were very profitable, but on reaching the water level the gold was found to contain foreign substances and the expense of separating the gold was found to be prohibitive. Numerous attempts have been made in recent years to resume active operations, but none of them has been successful.

Nothing is known here as to Mr. Ford's intentions regarding the property. The sale was completed with H. B. English, a Washington attorney, acting for Mr. Ford in the transaction with Judge Embury. While the deed does not state the purchase price, it is understood to be $10,000.

There was considerable speculation in Fredericksburg today as to whether the Detroit automobile manufacturer planned to restore the mines to active operation through use of modern machinery. A number of persons thought it more likely that the mine property was purchased because of its historic associations. A battle was fought there in the Civil War during the general engagement of the Wilderness, the fight being practically a drawn battle.

The Vaucluse tract is a part of the original grant of land from the King of England to Alexander Spotswood, first governor of Virginia, and chief of the famous Knights of the Golden Horseshoe. Spotsylvania County takes its name from Governor Spotswood who instituted the iron mining industry in the United States and developed several important colonial iron mines on the Rapidan River not far from the site of the Ford purchase.

CARNIVAL MAKES HIT IN MANASSAS

Friday And Saturday Will Be Biggest Days In Week's Festivities.

That a tidy sum will be realized for the Volunteer Fire Department of Manassas through the carnival which the United Exposition Shows is giving here this week seemed more than assured today.

The carnival has increased in popularity each night and with the added attractions booked for Friday night and all day Saturday crowds from all sections of the county are expected to pour into Manassas to enjoy the latest wrinkles in amusement devices.

Fire Apparatus Here.

The new piece of modern fire apparatus arrived here last night and was exhibited for a time at the carnival grounds. While its late arrival prevented exhibiting it each night, as scheduled, the spick and span equipment will be at the grounds each night throughout the carnival, and it is planned to give a practical demonstration of the manner of working it on Saturday afternoon. Members of the Volunteer Fire Department will be on hand and will put the engine through its paces for the entertainment of the host of visitors.

Crowds Are Appreciative.

The committee in charge of the carnival has left no stone unturned to make the event the biggest and best ever held in this section, and the response of the public to their invitation to come out and enjoy themselves as well as assist the Fire Department in raising needed funds, indicates a full measure of appreciation of the volunteer fire ladders.

STATE TAKES OVER ADDED MILEAGE

Completes State Maintained Road From Manassas to Dumfries and Richmond Highway.

Cheering news comes to Prince William County from H. G. Shirley, State Highway Commissioner, with his announcement that the State will take over for maintenance two and a half more miles of what is known as the "Cross County Road", by September 1.

This addition to the highway system is made by the Commission under the authority granted it by an act of the Legislature, and will give the people of Manassas and Prince William County an all-the-year-around outlet to the Richmond-Washington Highway.

Extension to Route 709.

The recent allocation is designated as "an extension of Route 709 to a point (Dumfries) on Route 31, Richmond-Washington Highway." Eight miles of the "Cross County Road" from Manassas to Independent Hill was taken over by the State last October, eight miles more from Independent Hill in the direction of Dumfries was added to the state system on last April 1, so that this latest allocation will complete the road to Dumfries.

Dan M. Chichester, representative for Prince William and Stafford counties in the House of Delegates, is a member of the Roads Committee, and has been active in highway legislation, and this highway connecting Prince William with the Richmond-Washington Highway, through Dumfries, has been largely due to his untiring efforts on behalf of the county.

SURPLUS PROPERTY SALE AT NOKESVILLE

Brentsville District Agricultural Committee to Conduct Big Sale September 7.

The sale of surplus property conducted several months ago by the agricultural committee of the Brentsville District proved of such benefit to the community that the committee has been prompted to sponsor a similar sale. On Saturday, September 7, another sale will be held for the benefit of anyone wishing to dispose of accumulated surplus stocks of machinery, vegetables, household and kitchen furnishings.

Many people of the community have already listed property to be sold among them being several good horses, heifers of all ages, sheep, dairy supplies, hay, hogs, cows, farm machinery, poultry, corn, weanling colts, good cows, soon to freshen, and a vast array of other articles.

The sale on Saturday, September 7, will be held at Nokesville, and for the convenience of those who come to buy or sell the committee has arranged for the serving of lunch.

The committee having the sale in charge has M. J. Shepherd, as chairman, and the following members: J. S. Huff, F. M. Swartz, G. A. Wood, John Ellis and F. H. May.

State Fast Reaching Important Place In Country's Dairy- ing Field.

Richmond, August 29.—Dairying has been showing a gradual growth in Virginia for many years, and the rate of increase has been more rapid during the past few years, according to statistics compiled by the United States and State Departments of Agriculture.

Creamery butter production during 1928 was nearly twice the amount produced in 1922; cheese production increased nearly 400 per cent since 1922; the production of condensed and evaporated milk nearly doubled, and there was an increase of 30 per cent in the production of ice cream. During 1928 there were 41 creameries operating, 8 cheese factories and 8 condenseries and evaporated milk plants. In addition to the butter produced within the State, last year approximately 650,000 pounds were made in other States from cream shipped from Virginia. The production of milk for consumption in town and cities has also increased considerably. In all parts of the State more farmers have been selling milk and cream each year, but during the past year Southwest Virginia made a tremendous increase in dairying, and this section promises to become one of the most important dairying districts in the East. In the Shenandoah Valley dairying has always been an important source of farm income and this section has shown an increase in recent years.

Milk Production Increases.

The production of milk has increased more rapidly than the number of cows, due to the fact that farmers have improved both their methods of feeding and the type of dairy cow. Reports from dairy manufacturing firms for the first half of 1929 indicate a considerable increase in the production of dairy products as compared with 1928. Butter production during this period was approximately 20 per cent larger than last year; cheese production nearly 400 per cent; ice cream 5 per cent, and evaporated and condensed milk 32 per cent.

While excellent pastures have been the cause of some of the increase, there are more dairy cows on farms than in 1928. The following statistics show the great increase that has been made since 1922: Creamery butter production in 1928 was 6,051,000 pounds, compared with 3,306,000 pounds in 1922; cheese 507,000 pounds, compared with 128,000 pounds; condensed and evaporated milk 4,500,000 pounds, compared with 2,600,000 pounds and ice cream 2,900,000 gallons, compared with 2,500,000 gallons.

Officials of the State Department of Agriculture and Agricultural College believe that within a few years Virginia will be one of the most important dairy States in the East, as climatic, soil and market conditions in this State are unusually favorable for dairying.

DR. E. N. LILLARD SUCCEEDS LATE DR. GRAY

County Gets $1,602.60 From July 1½ Cent Gas Tax Collected By State.

The regular meeting of the Board of Supervisors of Prince William County was held on Tuesday, August 27, with all members of the Board present, and Chairman James R. Larkin, presiding.

Certain accounts were examined and allowed and warrants ordered drawn on the county Treasurer in payment.

District Road Funds Paid.

Bills for work on county roads in the various districts were presented and ordered paid out of the road funds of the districts effected as follows:

Coles District—$400.46. Dumfries District—$584.00. Gainesville District—$289.52. Manassas District—$99.85. Occoquan District—$6.00.

Funds Transferred.

Payments made from the Dog Tax Fund amounted to $140.25, while the board authorized the transfer or loan of $2,000 from this fund to the county fund so as to meet current expenses in anticipation of taxes to be collected, the fund to be reimbursed when fund will permit repayment. A similar sum was authorized transferred from the 1 cent tax fund under the same conditions.

Authorization was made for payment by the Treasurer of $1,000 to the National Bank of Manassas, for retiring bond in connection with the Occoquan District Road Bond Issue Fund, and the payment of $200 in interest due.

Citizens Ask Road.

A petition from the citizens interested in the highway from George Wood's Corner to Ernest Reid's Corner, in the Brentsville District prayed that the road be made passable. H. L. Tubbs, County Road Superintendent, was instructed to make an inspection of the road and make a report to the supervisors.

James R. Larkin and L. Ledman, the committee appointed by the Board of Supervisors, upon request of the County Treasurer, for an audit of his accounts, reported completion of the audit and presented their report.

Nokesville-Catlett Road.

It having been found necessary to alter the location of the road opposite lands of John Anderson, in connection with the improvement of the Nokesville to Catlett Road, and because of inability to come to terms for the land with Anderson, H. L. Tubbs was instructed to examine into and report the expediency of the change in location and what damages, if any, would accrue to Anderson's property by reason of the change.

Dr. E. N. Lillard was appointed physician to the poor for the Brentville District, succeeding the late Dr. Gray.

According to Mr. Hart, Willis Robertson, chairman of the commission, was authorized to close a contract with the Gray Lumber Company, owners of the land, for its purchase at $6.25 an acre. The authorization was given at a called meeting of the commission held in Roanoke and from which Mr. Hart returned to his office here yesterday.

This, together with the 2574 gallons of whiskey and thirty-nine automobiles taken by the department, made a total value of property appropriated by agents of department of $60,424.75. This figure was based on estimated values of the automobiles and equipment.

GUARDING SHADE TREES.

Shade tree insects often exact their heaviest toll during late summer and early fall. It is important that the tree be given assistance in withstanding this attack or they may be permanently marred or killed.

If proper care has been accorded the trees during the spring and early summer there may be few insects present at this time. But reports from over the country indicate that bagworm, white tussock moth and wooly aphid are especially active. Several readers have complained of heavy damages to maples from aphids. In many areas the elm borer continues to kill valuable old trees with little evidence that its spread will be checked.

Bagworms can be controlled largely at this time of the year by hand picking. This method is often more effective than spraying or other combative efforts. The wooly aphid, while not often fatal to trees, often inflicts sufficient damages to the smaller limbs and twigs to cause permanent disfigurement. Being a sap sucking insect it is immune to Bordeaux mixture and other arsenical sprays. A contact poison is necessary. Lime sulphur, miscible oil, kerosene emulsion or nicotine sulphate are the leading poisons of this class. Where wooly aphids have attacked portions of the tree, a spraying of the effected and nearby limbs with a nicotine sulphate spray will usually afford protection. The best form of this poison is sold under the trade name of "Black Leaf 40". Directions for its use are included with each bottle.

The elm borer continues its attacks on elms in several areas with no known means of control yet devised to stop its ravages. Inflicting its damages beneath the protection of the bark, the borer girdles the inner bark layer of the tree, producing the death of the tree usually in the first year, with no means available of reaching the pest or stopping its attack. In infested areas tree owners are urged to cut down and burn infested elms either in the fall or winter to prevent the borer from reaching maturity to continue its activities. The borer spends the winter in the inner bark of the dead or dying tree, emerging about the middle of May as a small millow which lays its eggs in the bark of healthy trees. These eggs hatch within a few days and the young larva begin their work of girdling the tree where it hatched. Only through cutting down and burning infested trees before the parent millow emerges to lay its eggs will the elm borer be controlled.

In regions where this borer is at work it is perhaps unwise to plant elms for future shade tree purposes. Unless there is developed some means of combating this pest the elms of eastern United States are doomed. Until there is some control method devised, maples, pin oaks, lindens and other preferred trees should be planted.

It is important that shade tree wounds be given attention at this time of the year. Pruning wounds, wounds from other causes, and any bark abrasions should be given a disinfecting treatment and then a heavy coating of white lead paint or other effective sealing material. Any long stubs that remain from the spring pruning should be cut back close to the tree and given this treatment. Long stubs are fatal to shade trees. They cannot heal over, and always create an entrance place for rot and disease, usually carrying the decay into the heart of the trunk or limb. Now is not an unfavorable time to inspect the trees to see that no long stubs remain to endanger them.

An open wound or long stub where a limb has been improperly pruned or has broken off are likely to prove as fatal as an untreated wound in the human body. Shade trees are continually being attacked by millions of spores of disease that float in the air. An open, untreated wound furnish a lodging place for these spores where they immediately begin their work of decay and death. There are perhaps more shade trees permanently marred and killed by long stubs, being left after pruning than from any other cause. Limbs should be pruned off near the body from which it is cut. It should be readily seen on trees where limbs have been removed two or more years before that it is impossible for the tree to heal over a stub wound not close to the parent trunk or limb. An inspection of a few trees will usually reveal several trunks rotting from the existence of a long stub. Prune close is a rule that cannot be overemphasized. Too often many who pose as professional pruners and tree surgeons will leave these telltale evidences of no knowledge of the simple haling processes and requirement of the shade tree.

Many home owners have found autumn the preferable time of the year for planting new trees. If the trees are kept thoroughly watered during the dry periods preceding winter, fall plantings will usually show some advantages over spring planting. Where the trees are planted immediately after removal from the wrappings or from their place of original growth and well watered and tied to a firm stake to prevent swaying during the winter, they quite often begin to make early growth in the spring that justifies fall planting.

An important factor in the cure of tree disease and eradication of insect pests is the health of the tree. Herein prevention proves its value. Maintaining the best health condition possible will enable the tree to withstand many disease and insect attacks. This angle is especially vital to the tree at this time of the year when many insects are most active. Of course, spraying while the tree is in the dormant stage, and often applications after the leaves have appeared will forestall many insect damages, but constant care is necessary to maintain the health that is essential to the tree's continued development.

Sanitation, fertilization and immunization against insects and disease are not problems for experimentation. Where disease or insect injuries will not yield to known remedies it is highly advisable that a tree surgeon be called. Tree surgery is another phase of tree care that requires expert attention.

Close inspection for insect injury and immediate treatment for control are important factors in the late summer and fall care of shade trees.

LABOR AND COMMUNITY GROWTH.

What a desolate place this world would be in which to live if no one worked. Without labor where would all of our present day conveniences be?

In speaking of labor, we must remember that there are many kinds of labor that go toward making our present day life what it is. Productive labor runs the gamut from the highly trained labors of the professional man to the less intricate labors of he who works by the day. That each is of the most vital need in the smooth functioning of our community life all will agree.

So it is to Labor that we bow our heads, praying that as long as man is on earth there will be those who will labor to accomplish that which needs to be done.

COMMUNIST HOLIDAY FAILS.

August 1 was to have been a Communist "Holiday". All over the world, in the great cities, special details of police were on duty to keep order in case of demonstrations by the radicals on behalf of the "exploited" and "oppressed" wage earners.

August 1 came and nothing happened. It was merely another day. The communist demonstration was a flat and pathetic failure. In this country especially, the workers seem content to ride about in their automobiles, live in modern homes, attend high-grade amusements and work for good wages under the best conditions.

It is from sources other than communism that danger threatens American ideals and traditions. The slow encroachment of local and Federal socialism that has placed our government in competition with various lines of industries, all the way from printing envelopes to carrying freight and doing a banking business, is insidiously undermining the doctrines of individualism and personal liberty.

As the politician is exalted, the private citizen is pushed down. Such a tendency constitutes the greatest menace to democracy and free government.

THE TRAGIC RECORD.

As another summer draws toward its close the newspapers are crowded with reports of devastating fires. A dropped cigar or cigarette, a campfire incompletely extinguished, such little careless things as these have resulted in the destruction of magnificent forests, great factories and thousands of homes.

The most tragic part of it all is that the waste is entirely unnecessary. It is a matter of moments only to properly put out a fire or step on a burning cigar stub, or properly inspect a building for possible risks. Yet when these small tasks are left undone the result may be a conflagration that wrecks the work of years.

A little care and a little knowledge and a little energy on the part of our citizens would reduce our fire loss to a minimum. The fact that losses have been decreasing, for two years, is hopeful, but inconclusive. Our fire record remains a national disgrace, a black blot on our efficiency and prosperity.

Insurance and fire-resistant construction of buildings and fire patrols in our parks and forests, are necessary protections. But valuable as they are, they can never be a substitute for individual "fire carefulness". And we pay each year for our carelessness with close to a half billion dollars, beside the inestimable loss in business and human lives.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

One thousand four hundred and forty American cities and towns, with a total population of 3,000,000, have dispensed with municipal operation of electric plants and now receive service from private companies. Four hundred and eighty-nine municipal plants, serving 1,600,000 people, which at one time operated their own generating plants, have junked them and now buy electricity wholesale from private sources, according to statistics of National Light Association.

Municipal ownership was doomed when the modern plant of large central station service and interconnected plants was inaugurated. These great systems with their efficiency, economy and unrivaled facilities offer a service which municipal plants can never equal.

Municipal ownership in practice has not worked out according to theory. Waste, inefficiency, lowered standards of service, added tax burdens and some times political entanglements have been the rule rather than the exception.

Good electric service is so vital to modern industrial and domestic life that only the most efficient power production and distribution methods will survive.

WHEN WATER WAS WATER.

Who remembers the time when you could turn on a spigot in Manassas and draw a glass of clear, sparkling water with which to quench your thirst? We do, and we long for a speedy return of the good old days when water was water. There's enough air, both "hot" and cold, blowing around the town, without asking the citizens to drink it.

Press Comment

That New Tank.

Minneapolis Tribune—Strange and wondrous, according to reports, is the new Army tank. It can gallop across the field at 42 miles an hour, it can do 60 on a paved highway. It rides as easily as an old-fashioned car. The manufacturers declare they will soon be turning out a tank which can do 50 miles an hour in the open country and 90 miles on the road. Had Britain had enough of these tanks in 1916, and had the secret been perfectly kept, it would have won the war with a single, well-planned and well-executed surprise attack. The description of the new Army tank which we now hear is so rosy that we almost wonder whether people will not abandon automobiles altogether and go in for tanks. Certainly that would be one way of getting away from congested highways. We could get into our tanks and go roaming across fields, up and down river banks and through forests. No border patrolmen could decide we were bootleggers and shoot us down at will, and owners of property, if they didn't like what we were doing to their grounds and trees, would be afraid to scold us for fear we might run over them. Surely the spectacle of a tank going 50 miles an hour across an open field would be enough to terrify anybody.

O. K. When Informed.

Waynesboro Valley Virginian—The result of the Democratic primary clearly augurs the full vote in the November election, which, of course, means that Democrats are united and will march to polls in full strength to meet a contingency of dire consequence to the state of Virginia, whose traditions are held sacred by the rank and file of the real Democrats; it

The International Sunday School Lesson for September 1 is, "Ezra's Return to Jerusalem", Ezra 7:6-10; 8:21-23, 31, 32.

This morning's mail brought me a copy of The Bagdad Times—printed half in English and half in Arabic—containing a report of the Commencement of the American School for Boys in Bagdad. On the first page I noticed a display advertisement:—

"Nairn, the Safe Way. Trans-Desert Service, with Six-Wheel Pullman Cars. Convoys Leave Every Monday and Thursday from Bagdad for Syria, Connecting with steamers at Beirut and Port Said."

That advertisement carried me into the heart of this Sunday School Lesson. I know those big Philadelphia-made omnibuses, which are the most comfortable form of transport across the terrible desert; for I rode in the first of them that made the Bagdad-Beirut trip. They are now escorted by armored cars, and accompanied by a convoy of tourist cars. Every round-the-world tourist who adventures this journey counts it his most interesting experience.

If the traveller has imagination, he will have as companions on the way the immense companies of Israelites, under Zerubbabel and Ezra, who spent four months in traversing the distance that the automobile covers in twenty-four hours of running time, and the mood, to muse upon the significance of this highway in human history. By way of the modern American automobile, with its comforts and its unique power (I had never before seen a car with a "low-low" gear), one may be carried into an appreciation of the hand of God in the affairs of men. Present-day lessons of patriotism, of religious zeal and of obedience to law, are plainly written for all who contemplate this trans-desert way, with its memories.

A Tomb on the Tigris.

A new character, one of the most potent, enters Jewish history at the period of the present Lesson. He is Ezra, the scribe and law-enforcer. Things had got lax in the homeland, after the first return from the exile, even though the temple had been rebuilt. There was intermarriage with the gentiles, and a general disregard of the law of Moses. When Ezra led his great band of pilgrims across the desert it was to reestablish worship and righteousness.

Something of a local light upon the significance of Ezra is shed by the popularity of his tomb, a great edifice, standing on the western bank of the Tigris River, a short distance below Bagdad. This is more than a sight for tourists; it is a shrine for the myriads of Jews of the region. In the old land of the Exile, Ezra is still held in high honor.

With reason. He was passionately a patriot. And no man is worth remembering who is not, in heart and in conduct, a loyal servant of his own country. We are hearing a deal nowadays about a vague "internationalism"; but it is the old, quenchless fire of patriotism that is going to solve our problems. Love of one's own country, with good will and co-operation for all others, is the master political sentiment of mankind. The physicians of public ills who are prescribing the bread pills of "internationalism" need to read in this old book of the strong medicine of pulsing, passionate, purposeful patriotism. If Ezra had not been first of all an means the overwhelming defeat of any such opposing force, which, because of the disunited Democracy in the presidential election last fall, shocked and shook these sacred traditions which every true Democrat cherishes and for which he will fight to the last ditch when properly informed of the menace.

A Good Plan.

Atlanta Constitution—The New York man who advertised for ideas to spend $10,000,000, has just sailed for Europe. Wonder who suggested the plan?

A Corner on Corners.

Louisville Courier-Journal—Of course, the saloon will never return. How could it expect to wrest the corners back from the chain drug stores and filling stations?

Caravan Calisthenics.

Rochester Democrat and Chronicle—There's a use for everything if you only can find it. A woman explorer says that riding in a rumble seat is expert training for riding a camel.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

FOR SEPTEMBER 1, 1929.

ardent Jew, he would have meant nothing to history.

The Man Who Could Write.

Millions of persons will study this Lesson: would that they all might ponder the significance of the fact that its central character was Ezra the scribe, the man who could write. For our times are tragically short of scribes of the Ezra type. Sophisticated scribblers we have a plenty; but of wise, strong, dedicated men, with an overmastering moral purpose, who can interpret the needs of the day in the light of the will of God, there are few.

It is amazing, and almost incredible, how many clergymen there are who cannot write; or, at least, who do not write. Contemporary religious literature is in a perilous state, as revealed by the plight of the church press. Again and again newspaper editors have appealed to me for the names of possible religious editors. It may be soberly written down that one of the basic religious needs of the United States and Canada is for Christians who can write—Christians with brains and consecration and skill in popular presentation of the profoundest truths, and in readable interpretation of life's realities. Our theological seminaries seem to ignore this situation entirely. We need modern Ezras and Lukes as truly as we need modern Isaiahs and Pauls.

Neither Church nor State can thrive without the support of strong, keen pens. One of the scantily-appreciated forces for wholeness in our national life is the integrity and courage and clear moral vision of the editorial writers of the land. Yet who ever heard a preacher pray for editors? And Ezra was as definitely an editor as he was an author.

The Return to Religion

Scant mention is made, even in professedly religious periodicals, of modern religious migrations—such as that of Mennonites to South America. And only by occasional and scant allusion does the average reader learn of the nature and extent of the evangelical revival in Russia or of the powerful movement in Germany toward conservative Christianity. The recent world convention of Lutherans in Copenhagen was a tonic to simple faith. Some headlines would lead us to believe that China has repudiated Christianity; yet the true story of the fidelity and progress of the native Church in China during these recent years of turmoil is one of the romances of religion. Ezra's leadership of his people into a deeper religious loyalty has its counterparts today.

So has the zeal of the people. This host of Jews who made the terrible desert trip, under Ezra's leadership, has its own message for us. They, like their chief, were spiritually inspired. They put faith ahead of force, and trusted to the hand of Jehovah to protect them, rather than to an escort of Persian soldiery. And for the glory of God they forsook all their possessions and material prospects, and faced the rigors of more than five hundred miles of waste that they must cross afoot. Break up their four months of travel into day-by-day experiences, and it becomes a more understandable ordeal. Let imagination contemplate the full meaning of the record: "The hand of our God was upon us, and He delivered us from the hand of the enemy, and of such as lay in wait by the way". While praising the leaders, let us not forget the heroic followers.

A Champion of Law.

This Lesson is opportune as a study in law-observance. There was no separation between religion and righteousness in Ezra's thinking. He was leading his people back to a full observance of religion, which meant also to social righteousness and to national loyalty. As a passage in the story declares, "Ezra prepared his heart to seek the law of the Lord, and to do it".

In all our quickened discussion of law observance, there is a strange silence concerning the place of religion. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he". The faith which renews and purifies hearts is the first and finest agency for law observance. Good Christians do not violate civil laws. Sunday school folk are no problem for the State.

The shortest, surest, cheapest and most comprehensive method of creating a spirit of good citizenship—which implies obedience to law—is to increase the number of boys and girls, men and women, who are loyal to God. Ezra's great pilgrimage back to Zion and to godliness is a prototype of what our day needs in the realm of human relations. When the law of Jehovah is written in the people's hearts there is no problem concerning the laws of the land.

A CHUCKLE OR TWO

Try And Beat It.

While fishermen have a reputation for occasionally stretching the truth when it comes to stories concerning their favorite piscatorial sport, editors are known for their absolute veracity. However, when a man is both an editor and a fisherman and tells a story such as the following, we can only repeat it as given and let every reader make his own deductions.

H. U. Hartzell is editor and publisher of the Courier at Orangeville, Ill. Last week Mr. Hartzell turned the key of his shop over to the "devil" and with his wife and family drove to Lake Waubesa, Wis., to enjoy a few days' fishing and outing. In a letter to the editor of The Auxiliary, Mr. Hartzell writes:

"Two years ago we accidentally dropped a $5.00 gold piece into the lake and the first fish we caught this year had the coin in his stomach. Suppose some sorehead will wonder where an editor got a $5.00 gold piece."

We have no reason to doubt the truth of this statement, and if any of our readers can beat it, we will be glad to hear from them.

Explaining The Sounds.

The Dinner Guest—Aha! I suppose your table is groaning with good things to eat.

Little Bobbie—That ain't the table you hear groaning. It's dad. He's been counting up what it cost to feed you.

And Ain't Nobody Home.

A mountain school teacher corrected a boy who said, "I ain't gwine thar."

"That's no way to talk. Listen, I am not going there; thou are not going there; he is not going there; we are not going there; you are not going there; they are not going there. Do you get the idea?"

"Yessur. They ain't nobody gwine!"

One Kind of Advice.

A farmer once asked the editor of a country paper for advice as follows: "I have a horse that at times appears normal, but at other times is lame to an alarming degree. What shall I do?"

The reply came, "The next time that your horse appears normal sell him."

MONEY

I Your Best Friend

IF YOU get into trouble, it will pay you out. If you get sick, it will pay the doctor's and druggist's bills. If you want to take a trip, it will pay your way. If you want to develop your business or take advantage of some good investment, you can do it at a moment's notice. But the man without money can do none of these. Instead, whenever opportunity is offered or adversity befalls him, he is forcibly embarrassed.
