

FARM RELIEF IS SOUGHT FOR VA.

Virginia Agricultural Advisory Board Opens Active Campaign.

G. F. HOLSINGER MADE EXECUTIVE SECRETARY

Organization Represents Every Large Farm Organization in State.

Richmond, Oct. 17.—The Virginia Agricultural Advisory Board has opened active campaign headquarters in Richmond, in its drive for immediate betterment of agricultural conditions in Virginia and announced the appointment of G. F. Holsinger, of McGeheysville, as executive secretary of the organization, which represents every large farm organization in Virginia, and approximately 50,000 farm members of these groups.

Mr. Holsinger will make his headquarters in Richmond for the next four months, and actively conduct the campaign of the agricultural interests for farm betterment. Mr. Holsinger is president of the Virginia State Farm Bureau, and a member of Governor Byrd's Agricultural Commission.

Harvey S. Clapp, of Accotink, president of the Agricultural Board, in making the announcement of Mr. Holsinger's appointment, stated that it was made at a conference of the Board in Richmond during the Virginia State Fair. At this time Colonel B. Morgan Shepherd, of Ashland, was added to the Board.

Education a Factor.

"The Virginia Agricultural Conference Board is not only working for present day farm relief," Mr. Clapp said today in explaining the objectives of the joint agricultural campaign now being waged by agricultural interests of Virginia through his Board, "but through education and the extension of the work of our colleges, and schools to place future generations of Virginians beyond the need of farm relief. The election of Mr. Holsinger will necessitate a great sacrifice on his part in time spent here, but the Board felt that it was essential that one of its most aggressive members be placed in active charge of the work in the capital, and he will direct the activities of the Board from Richmond."

Betterment of Rural Schools. Much of the work planned by the united agricultural interests of Virginia will center around betterment of its rural schools of the Old Dominion, and increasing the facilities of Virginia Polytechnic Institute to conduct extension and experimental and research work.

"Emphasis will be laid by agriculture this year on the expenditure of more money on rural education," Mr. Clapp said. "The justification of this policy is that the state will get back the money it expends in this way, because an educated people do more with their opportunities. Virginia's development can be fostered by educating its people as well as in any other way. Give Virginia rural sections an opportunity and Virginia will be well repaid."

THINGS OF THE SOIL

The Manassas Journal's Complete Agricultural Service

By DAN VAN GORDER

Questions of lawns, gardens and general farming are discussed in this department each week. Readers of The Manassas Journal are invited to use this new column for the answer to their question and the solution of their problems. Address all inquiries to The Manassas Journal Information Bureau, Van Gorder News Service, Manassas, Virginia.

LOOKING AHEAD TO SPRING.

New Year's Day, because of its prominent place on the calendar, is not the proper time to begin plans for the lawn, garden, orchard and other farm and home activities. The calendar does not indicate the scores of opportunities that present themselves before winter rings down his curtain on outdoor duties. During the few remaining weeks of pleasant weather there are myriads of small jobs to do if the early blooms are to greet the world in season, if the lawn is to survive the winter properly, if the fruit trees, the grape vines, the berry canes are to be sent into their winter rest in condition that will insure maximum health for the 1930 production period.

If hyacinths, tulips, narcissus, crocus or other early flowering bulbs are desired for indoor blooms during the winter months and early spring, they should be planted now and the pots stored in a cool, dark place to start rooting. As soon as the bulbs have become rooted they may be brought into the living room or other warm and properly ventilated place where they will be forced into early blooming. During the rooting period the potted bulbs may be kept in the vegetable storage cellar, the unused cold frames, or similar cool, darkened room where an even temperature not higher than 65 degrees is maintained. Many growers prefer a temperature down nearer 35 degrees. The blooming period of each bulb may be controlled by the time it is brought from storage.

Freesia, a delightful outdoor blooming favorite, makes an excellent plant for indoor flowers. All bulbs should be kept covered and protected from temperature changes during the rooting period. This is just another opportunity to transfer a bit of spring and summer atmosphere into the colorless winter months.

Don't rake the leaves from the lawn. Although they may impart an unkempt appearance they are Nature's method of protecting the tender grass from freezing weather. Burning of leaves is also a wasteful practice, each pile of leaves containing valuable fertilizers that should be returned to the soil as mulch to cover flowers and other plants, and rich materials to spade or plow under for vegetable and other crops.

Many flower and vegetable enemies receive accommodations for wintering over in the weeds and dead stalks that remain. Asters, for example, are often seriously damaged by a borer that is protected through the winter in the dead stalk. Sanitation of the flower and vegetable garden is greatly augmented by burning the dead refuse of the season's crop. This is especially true of cabbage and tomatoes. Weeds also furnish an excellent hibernating refuge for many destructive pests.

Almost four million dollars worth of tomatoes are lost annually in the United States from leaf spot or blight. The fungus of this disease winters over in such common weeds as jimson, horse nettle and similar growths, also on dead vines of potatoes, eggplant and other garden refuse.

Grape vines respond freely to clean-up practices. By this time of the year all leaves have dropped from the vines. These, with broken vines, dried and rotted fruits, weeds and other accumulations of the vineyard should be burned or plowed under. This will result in marked reduction of insect losses in next year's crop and also tend to produce a higher quality grape. Such materials afford a wintering protection for many serious grape enemies.

Shade trees should receive their inspection for untreated wounds, rotting limbs and other defects. All places likely to serve as an entrance for decay should be cleaned and given a heavy coat of white lead paint to seal it against the gain and inclement weather of winter. The absence of heavy foliage will permit discovery of broken limbs and stubs left too long by faulty spring pruning. While leaves remain the dead branches can be found and removed and the trees fortified for winter and started toward their next season's growth in fit health.

There are many perennial flowers that may be grown from fall seeding for blooming next spring and summer. Among these are alyssum, balsam, calendula, calliopis, Cleome, cosmos, California poppy, gaillardia, Nigella, petunia, pinks, snapdragon and zinnia. Good drainage should be provided for the beds and mulch protection added to assist the seed through the winter.

It is not too late to install electric lights in the poultry house if the poultryman has not yet tried this method of increasing egg production. The cost of equipment and labor involved in operation are well repaid in the rapid boost of egg totals and the general health of the flock.

A national poultry association official predicts that the United States will be turkeyless before 1940 if the present decrease in production is maintained. The last ten years has seen the turkey population reduced from ten million in 1919 to three million this year. This condition might serve as the basis for profitable speculation to the poultryman who is situated to add this profit-producing sideline to the flock.

MANASSAS HIGH SCHOOL WINS FIRST SOCCER GAME

(By Kicksem.)

The M. H. S. Soccer Team opened the season on Friday with a victory over College Heights at Fredericksburg. The final score was 6 to 0.

The local team showed a strong offense and defense. The College Heights team succeeded only once in getting the ball through the locals' defense. There were no outstanding players, but the whole team played a bang-up game. Most of the play was centered around the veterans of the team although the new material proved very valuable.

The locals play Occoquan on the Manassas field tomorrow, Friday, October 18, at 3:15. Everybody turn out to see the game. We will appreciate it.

MR. ILLINGWORTH PLANS EXTENSIVE LECTURE COURSE

In accord with the policy adopted last year, Mr. Illingworth, headmaster at Swavely School, has arranged another series of lectures and entertainments for the Fall and Winter months. The program will consist of at least ten evenings of entertainment; this will include both educational and amusing material presented by some of the better known lyceum artists. It is hoped that the first number will be the program by a member of the Theater Guild of New York. The first week of November has been chosen for the beginning of the series, but Mr. Illingworth reserves definite word concerning the matter until all arrangements have been completed.

These programs will be presented on the Swavely campus in Baker Gymnasium, and it is anticipated that an appreciative group of townspeople will patronize the affair this year.

DESPITE SHORT PEACH CROP SOUTHERN MOVED 5,081 CARS

Alexandria, Oct. 16—Peaches filling 5,081 cars were handled from the South by the Southern Railway System during the 1929 season, despite a very short yield in Georgia, the chief producing state. The numbers of cars handled from the different states was as follows: Georgia 3,255, Tennessee 938, North Carolina 450, Virginia 200, South Carolina 159, Alabama 55, and Mississippi 24.

At Inman Yards, the Southern's Atlanta terminal, 2,822 cars were received and assembled into trains for dispatch to distant markets: 1,721 to the East through Potomac Yards; 1,061 to the Middle West through Cincinnati and Louisville, and 40 to the West and Southwest.

For the movement, 130 special trains were run to Potomac Yards, 119 from Atlanta and 11 from Toccoa, Ga.; 91 were run to Cincinnati, 65 from Atlanta and 26 from Chattanooga.

In comparison with the 3,298 cars handled from Georgia by Southern in 1929, figures for previous years are given, as follows: 1923, 5,700 cars; 1924, 6,014 cars; 1925, 7,674 cars; 1926, 10,870 cars; 1927, 6,828 cars; and 1928, 9,305 cars.

GRAFT ON THE AIR.

The Better Business Bureau is to investigate and fight "get-rich-quick" schemes promulgated by means of the radio.

The absence of laws prohibiting the broadcasting of matter that would be barred by post office authorities if sent through the mails, and the wide range of audience, makes the radio a perfect mode of expression for the dishonest promoter.

The management of broadcasting stations has the power to curb fraud of this sort, and the better class stations are co-operating to guard against misuse of their facilities. However, it is probable that the stock grafter will always be able to hire a station to broadcast his message to prospective "suckers".

The mails, the telegraph and the telephone have all played a part in the selling wiles of the promoter. It is but logical that the radio should come next. And the public is almost entirely without protection.

A solution is in the hands of the stock-purchasing public. Before buying any stock one should make it a point to discuss its merits with a responsible broker or banker. If everyone followed this plan, the day of the dishonest stock salesman, whether he operated over the radio or through the mails, would be over.

REASON ENOUGH.

Perhaps no other incident of the failure of the flexible tariff as administered by the President furnished such a clear and convincing reason for taking that power away from the executive, restoring the status of the Tariff Commission as a fact-finding body, as the sugar investigation upon which a report was made to the President in 1924.

The history of that failure is set out in a statement by the United States Sugar Association and inserted in the Congressional Record by Senator Walsh of Massachusetts. The main facts therein are as follows: "The Tariff Commission spent two and one-half years on its investigation. It recommended to the President that he reduce the rate from 1.76 cents to 1.23 cents a pound. A minority report recommended a rate of 1.50 cents. These figures were sustained by the Bureau of Economics, whose report states that a rate between 1.25 and 1.50 cents per pound would be a just rate.

"The Tariff Commission stated in its report that the cost to the country of retaining the rate of 1.76 per pound as against the establishment of a rate of 1.23 cents per pound is approximately $75,000,000.

"Now tariff experts have demonstrated that the rate on sugar in the Hawley bill will increase the burden on the American pocketbook some $150,000,000 per annum."

The statement also says: "Unfortunately the recommendation of the Tariff Commission came during a political campaign, and the President, it is said, thought it inexpedient to adopt it and put it into effect."

In other words, the President's failure or refusal, for purposes of political expediency, to accept the findings of the Tariff Commission, whose members he appoints, corroborated by the Bureau of Economics, has cost the American people in the last five years an excess tariff tax on sugar alone of $375,000,000, or approximately $3.75 cents for every man, woman, and child in the United States. The Hawley bill proposes to double this amount in the next five years.

TOO SOON FOR ECONOMY.

Virginia, and this of course includes the nearby counties, is far behind in the matter of schools. One of the reasons is that school teachers in Virginia are paid much less than in most states. Teachers in many states get more than twice as much as is paid in Virginia.

The last place for any community to begin to economize is in the schools.

Shorter school years are favored by a few people because this will allow the children more time to help in the work at home. But that is just what the children should not be doing. People are not supposed to raise children for young slaves, and a child is entitled to be supported by its parents, and educated. The latter is done by the state and it is so important that compulsory education is provided for all over the country.

Any kind of economy is preferable to that which lowers the efficiency of the schools, for which more money should be appropriated whenever it is feasible until the very highest possible standard is reached.—Free Lance Star.

A LESSON FROM AUSTRALIA

According to Joseph Mayton, of the University of Pennsylvania, Australia at the present time is facing a crisis caused by debt and high taxes. The per capita debt is $850—said to be the highest in the world.

This debt has been caused principally by the program of state ownership and operation of commercial and industrial enterprises. In almost every instance, notably in the case of the state railways and utilities, government ownership has resulted in tremendous deficits. Since 1920 the Federal and State governments have borrowed over $1,000,000,000 in order that the country may be saved from bankruptcy.

Australia is but one outstanding example among many foreign countries whose experiments in the field of industry have led only to debt and an exorbitant tax rate which discourages industry and kills enterprise.

It is a tribute to the intelligence of the American people that they have definitely and steadily used the power of the ballot to oppose the entry of government into business in competition with private citizens for there can really be no competition with government—the private citizen or business is simply wiped out.

UP AND AT 'EM!

It is high time for some women's organization to get behind a clean-up plan. The streets of Manassas, over which tourists pass and visitors must traverse, look bad enough on week days, but on Sunday they resemble a lot which has just been vacated by a carnival company. What about it, ladies?

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

FOR OCTOBER 20, 1929.

The International Sunday School Lesson for October 20 is, "Some Social Teachings of the Bible: Useful Work a Christian Duty"—Genesis 2:15; Exodus 20:9; Nehemiah John 5:17; Acts 20:33-35; II Thessalonians 3:6-12; Ephesians 4:28.

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

White collars are a real peril to national robustness. Too many young men want positions—not jobs; but positions—that will not soil their hands or their clothes. One reason why such a tremendous tide has turned toward the colleges since the war, say educators, is that youth has come to consider this an easy and pleasant route to prosperity without manual labor. An alarming proportion of college graduates become bond salesmen. Multitudes of boys choose these white-collar positions, at poor pay and with scant future, because of a sort of snobbishness which looks down upon overall jobs.

Our nation was not built by such. In new and growing countries, idleness is deemed a disgrace. Just as workers are the backbone of the social structure, so loafers are a recognized peril. The glory and dignity of honest labor are beliefs ingrained in the very structure of our New World. And the duty of work is an essential part of the Christian ideal in which the country is established. The Bible singularly stresses and exalts the duty of toil. One reason for this doubtless is the recognized truth that an inevitable by-product of work is character. The sturdy virtues wait on industry.

When The Indians Grumbled.

While the Bible offers no hard-and-fast social system, and while the various radical movements which have usually sought Scriptural warrant for their teachings would have difficulty in citing chapter and verse, it is clear that, from first to last, the Book does insist upon work.

When John Eliot, "the apostle to the Indians," was teaching the Decalogue to the Algonquians he began to expound the Sabbath Day as a rest day. "Ugh! That's easy—Indian doesn't work any day," commented one of his hearers. Whereupon the wise preacher began to stress the first part of the Commandment, "Six days shalt thou labor." That teaching was not so popular.

What I Found In Nazareth.

Of course, the whole ideal of the Divine will upon this point is wrapped up in the example of the Saviour. Jesus was a working man. We cannot escape the vast implications of the truth that the world's Redeemer was a callous-handed carpenter. My memories of Nazareth all center in a "rest I undertook, upon my first visit, many years ago, to find a carpenter shop of the ancient sort.

When I discovered one it proved to be a picture of the labors of the Lord. On the floor sat the carpenter, using both hands and feet as he wielded his few primitive tools. His products were simply the immemorial ones of plows and wooden yokes. The Teacher who said "My yoke is easy" had fashioned skillfully many a smooth yoke as He sat from dawn to sunset amidst the fragrant chips on the floor of His carpenter shop.

"This is the Gospel of Labor:—Ring it, ye bells of the kirk—The Lord of Love Come down from above To dwell with the men who work."

No effeminate, stained-glass Figure was the Son of Man, but a robust, hard-muscled, sweating fellow of the toiling masses. The modern mood of white-collar snobbery would feel itself superior to the world's Supreme Figure were it to see Him as He was in Nazareth and Capernaum, or trudging lustily the dusty roads of Galilee and Judea. The "leisure classes" may not understand Jesus; but Jesus understands the working people; and there is fullness of fellowship in His cry, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Washington Gladden's familiar verses as apropos:—

"O Master, let me walk with Thee In lowly paths of service free; Tell me Thy secret; help me bear The strain of toil, the fret of care.

"Teach me Thy patience! still with Thee

In closer, dearer company: In work that keeps faith sweet and strong;

In trust that triumphs over wrong; In hope that sends a shining ray

Far down the future's broadening way;

In peace that only Thou canst give, With Thee, O Master, let me live."

A Lesson From France.

Often, during the war, as I listened to officers and men discussing the new conditions they would find, or make, when they returned home, I heard the view expressed that manual labor would return to its old dignity. "All of us have learned how to dig and toil; and we have learned to like it. Our bodies and our minds are better for the experience. Why should we go back to office jobs, with poor pay and scant future, when the country needs real workers?" So ran the argument. And today the skilled artisan is better paid than many professional men. In the most democratic parts of the land, no social disadvantage attaches to physical labor.

We are giving the present generation of youth unprecedented privileges and opportunities; but too often they are missing the priceless discipline of real work. Many families of moderate means hire men to mow their lawns, remove their ashes and do odd jobs about their homes; while husky sons get their exercise on tennis courts, baseball diamonds and football fields. We are in real danger of losing sight of the sound educational value of hard work. One wise writer has said, "Thank God every morning when you arise that you have work to do that day which must be done, whether you like it or not." An old proverb declares that "The devil may tempt a busy man; but an idle man tempts the devil."

Our best thinking today is united in a resolution to prevent wholesale unemployment; for the spiritual and moral deterioration of the man who has no work to do is a worse evil than the economic hardships which he and his family undergo. As to the deliberately idle, whose soul-fibre has disintegrated, the Apostle Paul's stern words were, "If any would not work, neither should he eat."

The Artisan-Philosopher.

Greatest of all human brains that have ever fertilized the thinking of mankind was the Apostle Paul. His gigantic intellect soared to heights hitherto unattained. A philosopher, a seer, a mystic, Paul nevertheless labored with his own hands. He was the greatest exponent of "plain living and high thinking." Work was to him a badge of honor; his trade saved him from even the slightest appearance of parasitism. Lustily, he cries out in his writings that he worked for his own self-respect; that he worked in order to be able to give and to help others, and that he worked as an example to his friends. So ringing are the great apostle's exhortations to Christians to achieve the safety and independence which follow industry that he has impressed Bible-reading Christians throughout the ages.

"It is a perilous hour in any young man's life," said Henry Ward Beecher, "when he sits down to consider how he may get money without working for it." "Easy money" is hard on the character. It distorts all sense of proportionate values. And it sets money above manhood. Sound thinking and righteous living seem strangely related to honest industry.

One great glory of work is that it is service: the worker is producing something that meets the world's needs. Jesus expressed the central principle of His life in the words that He had come "not to be ministered unto, but to minister." Maltbie D. Babcock amplified the thought in the memorable lines:—

"O Lord, I pray That for this day I may not swerve By foot or hand From Thy command, Not to be served, but to serve.

"This, too, I pray, That for this day No love of ease Nor pride prevent My good intent, Not to be pleased, but to please.

"And if I may, I'd have this day Strength from above To set my heart In heavenly art, Not to be loved, but to love."

The Washington Post—Lord Robert Cecil has never been an astute politician, so his speeches are apt to be interesting, says the Boston Post. He is not afraid to speak out. He performed a useful service at Geneva by reminding an audience that the United States is not the only nation with professional patriots and armament paid propagandists. If he had said that Europe has a good many more of them than this country, he would presumably have been speaking the truth, although these gentlemen who are patriots for profits are so secretive and so clever that it is only by chance that we discover where their money comes from.

Coalition speakers for the past two weeks have been stating that Bishop Cannon's return to Virginia would be followed by a speaking tour in the

IN MEMORIAM.

A tribute of love to the memory of our darling baby, Estelle Marie Breeden, who left us so suddenly six months today, April 19, 1929.

Just as the light of dawn came,
And the darkness of night faded away;
God sent a guardian angel,
And took my darling away.

No baby arms reaching for mamma,
No bright baby face with a smile,
But a shining little star in heaven,
Making our pathway brighter and lighter all the while.

By her mother, Mrs. Harvey Breeden, and sister, Ruth. 22-1*

IN MEMORIAM.

In sad but loving remembrance of Belle McCuen, who departed this life eleven years ago, October 22.

A dear face no more we shall see,
But oh, she is free from pain and care,
And let us cease weeping for loved ones, in Jesus' care.

Her work on earth is done,
And she is now a shining star
In the home of fadeless beauty.
But your memory I can never forget.

Above the vaulted blue I know you are waiting for me,
Where there is no parting.
By her mother,
22-1* MRS. LACY McCUEN.

IN MEMORIAM.

In sad but loving remembrance of our darling brother, Charles Edward Love, who fell asleep in Jesus 11 years ago October 18, 1918.

God was lonely without you, dear brother,
In his home of gold and blue;
So he gathered you tenderly in his arms
And flew to heaven with you.

But He knew just how we'd miss you,
And so from our hearts He drew,
A tiny speck of your golden love,
And sprinkled it with dew.

And then He hung it in the heavens,
A guiding star at night,
And brother, dear, we see it there
And love to watch its light.

Gone, but never shall be forgotten,
For as long as life and memory lasts
We will always think of thee.

His loving sisters,
ALICE and MILDRED LOVE.

BAPTIST DIVINE TRUSTS POLLARD

Editor of Religious Herald Says Prohibition Safe In Hands Of Pollard.

"Prohibition is safe in the hands of John Garland Pollard," according to the Rev. R. H. Pitt, Baptist minister, editor of the Religious Herald, and one of the most prominent prohibition leaders in Virginia.

Asked by a Richmond News Leader correspondent if he, as a Virginian, interested in prohibition as a paramount issue, believed that Democratic party leaders would betray prohibition, state or national, Dr. Pitt replied:

"Absolutely not."

"I voted against Governor Smith last fall because I considered prohibition a paramount issue and because Governor Smith was not a prohibitionist," Dr. Pitt said. "When Governor Smith was defeated, I considered the movement within the Democratic party to defeat him had accomplished its purpose. I still think so."

"I think it is bad policy for Virginia Democrats to continue this contest in a state campaign after the victory was won. I think it is bad policy for dry Democrats in this state election to vote against the only party that ever did anything for the prohibition cause in Virginia."

"Assertions that Garland Pollard, of all men, would allow personal ambition to cause him to betray prohibition are of course foolish. I voted against Pollard in 1917, although he was one of my best friends. I would have voted for Taylor Ellyson no matter who was running in that fight. But as a citizen and as one of those Virginians who consider prohibition a paramount issue, I know that prohibition is safe in the hands of Garland Pollard."

"Pollard's attitude in the presidential campaign last year has been distorted, of course. Why it has been actually said that he criticized a number of preachers—a very ironic accusation in view of the fact that Garland Pollard's father was a Baptist preacher, his brother a Baptist preacher, three uncles were preachers and many of his cousins also were in the ministry."

"It is known now that out of 500 Baptist preachers in the state not more than five engaged in pulpit politics last fall and that out of 2,500 evangelical ministers only about twenty-five took any active part as preachers. The whole campaign was distorted in the public mind with all those statements in the papers about bigotry."

"But that is all history now. Many Democrats opposed Governor Smith who considered the matter ended when the national nominee was defeated. I do not know how many Democrats took this attitude. I have no way to find out. But as a citizen, that is my attitude."

GAS TAX IS DISCUSSED BY VIRGINIA TOWN LEAGUE

Alexandria, Oct. 15.—One of the most important matters presented to the twenty-fourth annual session of the Virginia League of Virginia Municipalities was the report of the committee on distribution of State gasoline taxes between cities and counties instead of all to the counties. R. W. B. Hart, chairman, of Roanoke, recommended that a special committee be named to gather additional data to be presented to the legislature.

On motion of Mayor Charles D. Fox, of Roanoke, the report was amended to provide that before final adoption it be referred to the committee on distribution.

STATE APPLE REPORT SHOWS SEPTEMBER DECLINE

Virginia commercial apple prospects declined during September as a result of the dry, hot weather, and the October forecast of the Federal State Crop Reporting Service was 2,760,000 barrels, compared with 3,700,000 barrels last year, and 2,252,000 barrels, the average for the previous five years.

Growers report that on October 1st practically 60 per cent of the crop had been harvested, while last year only 34 per cent had been harvested to the same date. The crop is not packing out as well as growers had expected, largely due to the poor quality. In all except the northern section the size is as large as usual, but injury from scab, scale and hail has caused a larger percentage of the crop than usual not to be packed. Growers estimate that approximately 39 per cent of the crop will pack U. S. grade No. 1 or better, while last year 55 per cent packed this grade.

Carlot shipments to October 5 were 5,787 cars. Allowing the usual percentage of 10 per cent for late reports, this would indicate the total shipments to be 6,300 cars, compared with 6,798 cars shipped to the same date last year.

Country Shows Drop

The indicated commercial production of apples for the United States on October 1 was 28,500,000 barrels, which was 3 per cent lower than the September forecast. Small sizes and poor quality are causing apples to pack out below expectations. The crop improved slightly in New England, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio and Maryland, but declined in all other important commercial sections. In New York apples are smaller than usual, and the quality is poor, although the fruit is coloring well.

In Washington, early varieties packed out below the growers' estimates because of small size and worm damage. The total crop in the western boxed apple states is now estimated to be 13,222,000 barrels, compared with 16,811,000 barrels last year and 13,932,000 barrels the average production for the five years, 1923-1927.

HIGH DEATH RATE AMONG CIVIL WAR VETERANS

Washington, Oct. 17—Civil War veterans on the Federal pension rolls are dying at the rate of over 5,000 per month, Lt. Col. W. L. Hazard, of the Federal Bureau of Pensions, stated recently, in explanation of the latest report just issued. Although this list, which was compiled Sept. 30, shows 57,483 Civil War veterans now drawing pensions, in fact over 2,000 more have died since it was prepared.

Col. Hazard added. It was predicted in the Bureau of Pensions that within a year the number of pensioners in this class will be reduced to insignificance, since most of the survivors are eighty-five years of age and older.

In sharp contrast to the Civil War veterans drawing pensions are the widows who number 178,659. The Government is also paying pensions to 714 widows of veterans of the Mexican war and 10 widows of those of the War of 1812. The last survivor of the Mexican war on the pension list died in September.
