A FINE TRIBUTE TO JUDGE SMITH

Times Dispatch Praises Our Congressman

Two measures sponsored by the Virginian furnished most of last week's fireworks in the House, in one of which he won an overwhelming victory. In the other, the outcome is yet to be determined.

The House, late Thursday, voted by an impressive majority to name a special five-man committee to investigate the National Labor Relations Board, as proposed by Smith, after several hours of bitter wrangling and debate.

The day before, the House fought most of the day over a bill by Smith for the suppression of subversive activities by aliens, but on adjournment had reached no conclusion except an agreement to take the bill up for consideration at some future time.

The vote for a special Committee to investigate the Labor Relations Board followed hours of acrimonious debate, in which opponents of the proposal scored the Smith resolution as a "reflection on the conscientious and hard-working legislative committee" on labor legislation which has been making its own study of proposed amendments to the labor relations act.

Representative Norton (D., N.J.), chairman of that committee, appealed to the House to defeat the resolution and support her committee, with the assertion that Smith was "the last man I would pick to pass on labor legislation."

In urging his resolution, Smith said "as you all know there has been tremendous pressure for a good many months for a resolution of this character. I introduced the resolution because I was of the opinion there would not be all this pressure from the country unless something was wrong and something that needed looking into."

"I know there is very bitter opposition to the resolution from some quarters, but may I say to the House that there is nothing bitter in my mind about it. The matter should be looked into calmly, from a judicial standpoint, so that a careful, impartial investigation may be made."

"When that is done, we ought to be able to bring to the House a report that will perhaps correct some of those things which are causing so much complaint."

"I voted against the creation of the National Labor Relations Board and I did so on the ground it was unconstitutional. I think it was palpably time has changed the Supreme Court and the Supreme Court has changed the Constitution."

"I am one of those who wants to adjust himself whether I agree with the Supreme Court or not, and I want to live under the Constitution as construed by the Supreme Court. So I approach this situation without bitterness and without feeling toward any one but with a very definite conviction that a good work can be done for labor, for industry and for the country if this matter is looked into a calm and dispassionate way by members of this House who may approach it from a little fresher standpoint than those who have dealt with it over the past five years, so that we might bring back to the House some suggestions and recommendations that will cure the evils, whatever the investigation may show them to be."

FIREMENS' CARNIVAL OPENS ON SATURDAY

GENERAL BERNARD E. BEE

By Col. J. Rion McKissick

Today's battle for the Confederacy was fought to Gen. Bernard Elliott Bee, a hero of the war, and how glorious was his life!

For that battle had been preparing since he was a West Point 20 years before.

Born in 1811 in Charleston, he was the son of a well-known South Carolina family and was the first Federal judge.

His mother, Ann Wragg Fayson, was of Huguenot descent.

General Bee's father, a signer of the South Carolina Ordinance of Nullification, moved to Texas in 1835, took a leading part in the establishment of the short-lived Republic of Texas, and was its first Secretary of State.

Graduating at West Point in 1845 with the rank of brevet second lieutenant of infantry, Bee served in the military occupation of Texas and in the War with Mexico.

For "gallant and meritorious conduct" in the battles of Cerro Gordo and Chapultepec he was successively brevetted first lieutenant and later captain, while the State of South Carolina presented him with a sword of honor for his "patriotic and meritorious conduct" in that war.

From the close of that conflict until he entered the service of the Confederacy Bee served in the United States Army as lieutenant, adjutant of the Third Infantry, captain of the Tenth Infantry and colonel of the Utah Volunteer Battalion mainly on frontier duty in the West.

Resigning in March, 1861, to enter the Confederate Army, Bee was commissioned a major of infantry.

Such was his reputation that President Davis in June, 1861, promoted him to be a brigadier general.

He was given command of the Third Brigade of the Army of the Shenandoah under Gen. Joseph E. Johnston who earlier in July had asked that Bee be assigned to him and who said that his army while in the Valley was "strengthened" by the accession of the South Carolinian.

After participating with the army in the maneuvers in the Valley against the Union forces, Bee accompanied General Johnston on the march to reinforce General Beauregard at Manassas.

North Carolina and Mississippi infantry, and Virginia artillery.

The battle began shortly after 6 in the morning when the Union forces "opened with musketry and artillery against the small brigade commanded by Col. N. G. Evans who held the Stone Bridge on the extreme left of the Confederate line.

An hour later the Shenandoah brigades, Bee's, Bartow's and Jackson's together with Bonham's were ordered up in support.

"The attack was feebly pressed, and Evans . . . became satisfied that the movement to his front was but a feint, and that a column of the enemy was meanwhile marching to turn his flank by way of Sudley Springs, about two miles northwest . . . He left four companies to hold the Bridge; and with six companies of riflemen, a battalion called the Louisiana Tigers, and two six-pound howitzers, he moved across Young's Branch, and took post on the Matthews Hill."

Half an hour later the leading Union brigade struck Evans' riflemen. The enemy were twice repulsed, but supports came crowding up, and Evans sent back for reinforcements. Lieut. Col. G. F. R. Henderson, the chief biographer of Jackson, whose account of the battle to this point I have quoted, adds:

"Again the situation was saved by the prompt initiative of a brigade commander."

"Bee had been ordered to support the troops at the Stone Bridge."

"Moving forward toward the Henry Hill, he had been informed by a mounted orderly that the whole Federal army seemed to be moving to the northwest."

"Bee waited for no further instruction."

"Ordering Bartow to follow, he climbed the Henry Hill."

"The wide and beautiful landscape lay spread before him; Evans' small command was nearly a mile distant, on the Matthews Hill; and on the ridges to the far northwest he saw the glitter of many bayonets."

"Rapidly placing his battery in position near the Henry house, Bee formed a line of battle on the crest above Young Branch; but very shortly afterward, acceding to an appeal for help from Evans, he hurried his troops forward to the Matthews Hill."

"His new position protected the rear of the companies which held the Stone Bridge; and so long as the Bridge was held, the two wings of the Federal army were unable to cooperate."

UNION SERVICE, JULY 30th

The fifth Sunday Union Evening service will be held in July 30, at 8:00 in the auditorium of Osborn High School. The special speaker on this occasion will be Inspector Louis B. Nichols, of the U. S. Bureau of Investigation. This service is sponsored by the Manassas Ministerial Association. His subject will be "The National Crime Situation Viewed from a Christian Standpoint."

The auditorium has been secured because it is believed that a large number of Prince William County people will want to hear this talk and more of them can be conveniently accommodated there. The offering taken at this service will be devoted to Weekday Religious Education. Come out and enjoy this interesting talk.

ALL DAY MEETING AT GAINESVILLE

Members of friends of Gainesville Methodist church, be sure to come to the all-day service on Sunday. The pastor, Rev. J. C. Schwartz, will preach at the morning service and Rev. C. F. Phillips has been invited to preach at 2:30. Bring your lunch and eat on the grounds, where you can see and talk to your friends.

YOUNG DEMOCRATIC PICNIC ON PARK GROUNDS

The Young Democrats will have a picnic on Tuesday, August 8, at 6:00 p.m. at the Chim House on the Bull Run Park grounds. Members of the club are asked to bring a basket lunch for their own party. Ice-cold watermelons will be furnished by the club.

BEE MONUMENT IS DEDICATED

Col. J. Rion McKissick Describes the Character and Public Services of Confederate Hero

Col. J. Rion McKissick, president of the University of South Carolina and member of the Governor's staff was the speaker of the day at the dedication Friday afternoon of a monument erected on the historic battlefield of First Manassas to the memory of General Bernard Elliott Bee, who was killed in that engagement, July 21, 1861, and who is known today throughout the world as author of the name "Stonewall" as applied to General Jackson, and who had rendered distinguished service to his native State of South Carolina as Federal Judge and later was secretary of State of the Republic of Texas.

The monument to General Bee was erected by the Mary Taliaferro Thompson Southern Memorial Association of Washington, D. C., which was organized by Mrs. Frank Morrison in 1905. The memorial was unveiled by Miss Anne Rives Evans, president of the Children of the Confederacy of the District of Columbia. The presentation was by Mrs. Norma Hardy Britton, president of the Association, and the acceptance was by State Senator John W. Rust, president of the Manassas Battlefield Association.

The invocation was delivered by Dr. Warren Stuart, a descendant of General J. E. B. Stuart, the famous Confederate Cavalry Commander.

Other features of the program included a recitation by Mrs. Edward Campbell Shield, president of the Stonewall Jackson Chapter, U. D. C., of Washington, D. C., and musical selections by the Elks' Boys' band.

On the program of arrangements were Mrs. Henry Gordon Clay, chairman, Mrs. Frank Morrison, Mrs. Walter Phares and Mrs. Wallace Street.

An honor guest at the unveiling was Mr. C. C. Cushing, our beloved and last surviving confederate of Prince William County and a participant in the Battle of First Manassas, July 21, 1861. Another veteran, Mr. Peter B. Smith, of Arlington County was also present.

BOYS STATE IS DISCUSSED AT KIWANIS MEETING

Rev. John M. DeChant, as representative of the local Legion Post, introduced Junior Lonas and Warren Landis as guest speakers on Friday evening.

Both young gentlemen gave their respective view points of the Old Dominion Boys State which they attended in June. This affair was a week's outing, with training in civics, sponsored by the American Legion in Virginia.

The talks were really delightful. Both were entirely extemporaneous and the speakers orated at ease.

Attending also was Rev. W. B. Everett, commandant of the Sons of Confederate Veterans in Northern Virginia. He gave some funny reminiscences.

The meeting at Mr. Alpaugh's was postponed until a date in August. It was tentatively decided also to go the beach some Friday in August.

YOUNG DEMOCRATS TO MEET NEXT THURSDAY

The Young Democratic Club of Prince William County will hold its regular monthly meeting at the Court House on Thursday night, August 3, at 8 o'clock. The State Convention, to be held in Roanoke on August 25th and 26th, will be discussed and plans made for representation of the local club at the convention.

Fun Provided for Everybody

PRIZES TO BE GIVEN AWAY

Election Returns at Carnival Grounds Tuesday Night

The annual carnival of the Manassas Volunteer Fire Department will open Saturday night on the grounds adjacent to the Manassas High School Gymnasium and will continue through the week, closing Saturday night, August 5.

The Committee in charge of arrangements this year is composed of Messrs. Tom Howard, chairman, John T. Broadus, Warren Coleman, A. MacMillan and John Roseberry, and they have spared no effort to make this the most enjoyable event the fire-fighters have ever sponsored.

Substantial prizes will be given away, including a Westinghouse refrigerator, R. C. A. radio and a cash prize. Tickets may be secured from any of the merchants, at Cocks' Pharmacy, from a number of young ladies who are assisting, and, of course, will be available on the grounds.

Amusements provide entertainment for everybody and special facilities are being provided next Tuesday night for the election returns, which will be posted upon a large bulletin board as rapidly as secured.

The Manassas Volunteer Fire Department ranks very high in the State and is a great asset to our community. As often stated, "The boys come when you call, now you come when they call." They need the financial aid secured annually through these carnivals and it is hoped that all citizens of the community, young and old, will patronize this outstanding community event.

CONFEDERATE FLAG DISCUSSED

Junior Lonas Tells of Seeing It at World's Fair

After the usual opening exercises, flag salutes and singing of "Dixie," the leader, Mrs. Hutchison, called the roll. A representative number responded. The election of officers immediately followed, the result being for president, Fanelle Pickeral; vice-president, Joe Lonas; rec'd secretary, Bettie Parrish; treasurer, Frank Browning, Jr.; historian, Nancy Parrish; custodian, June Pickeral.

The historical subject outlined for July was the study of flags. A description of the Confederate flag and the State flag was given by members of the group and Leonard Lonas told of seeing the Confederate flag on display at the New York World's Fair. Mrs. Hutchison gave the history of the United States flag. The "Conquered Banner" by Father Ryan was read by Joe Lonas and Fanelle Pickeral read "All Along the Potomac Tonight" from the back of an old calendar, once the property of the late Mrs. Belle J. Holden. Bettie Lee Jenkins related a recent delightful sight seeing trip to the Lee Mansion at Arlington describing in particular the nursery. Bettie Lee presided at the piano in the closing number, "America," sung by the children.

The decorations were lovely cut flowers from the Hutchison garden and the color scheme was carried out in Confederate colors, red and white.

HAVE ANNUAL REUNION IN BATTLEFIELD PARK

INVITATION TO SOLDIERS

The Ministerial Association will be happy to have the visiting soldiers attend services in any of the churches during their stay here. Hours of service appear on page 7 of this paper.

SMITH WINS OUT IN LABOR DEBATE

Resolution Calls for Thorough Investigation

The House voted an extensive inquiry into the National Labor Relations Board, approving over the protests of a powerful Democratic bloc the creation of a five-man investigating committee with full subpoena powers to study the whole NLRB set-up and make any recommendations for legislation.

Representative Flannagan voted against the resolution. All other Virginians voted for it.

Mrs. Norton denounced the resolution of Representative Smith as one which would "usurp" the powers of her committee.

The sponsor, however, declared as the bitter debate opened on the floor that "something is wrong that needs looking into," and that unless something had been amiss there would not have been the "tremendous pressure" for an inquiry.

Under the resolution, Speaker Bankhead is to name a committee whose duty will be to:

Find out whether the board has been fair in its interpretation of the law and its decisions.

Find out whether the board has "attempted to write into the act" purposes not justified by its language.

Suggest amendments, if any, and determine whether Congress should further define interstate commerce.

The committee will make recommendations, also, concerning the personnel of the board. It will have the power to hold hearings anywhere, anytime and can call witnesses and documents. While the resolution made no provision for funds, it was expected that the members, when named, would apply to the accounts committee for an appropriation.

Almost the entire Republican membership and a sizable bloc of Democrats pushed the resolution across over the protests of Chairman Norton, Representative Ramspeck and other members of the Labor Committee.

Replying to contentions of Smith that "good work can be done for labor, industry and the Government if the matter is looked into calmly by men of this House," Chairman Norton rose to declare that the matter should not be taken out of the jurisdiction of her committee.

ADDRESS BY COL. McKEISSICK

"But on the Matthews Hill, the enemy's strength, especially in artillery, was overwhelming; and the Confederates were soon compelled to fall back to the Henry Hill. Sherman's brigade of this division, passing the stream by a ford, threatened the flanks of Bee and Evans as they retreated across Young Branch."

So heavy and terrific was the fire of the Union artillery that Bee's troops were fleeing in great disorder. The day seemed lost.

Henry Hill, "the commanding height, the key of the battleground," was abandoned to the enemy.

General Beauregard thus describes the scene:

"We found the commanders resolutely stemming the farther flight of the routed forces, but vainly endeavoring to restore order, and our own efforts were as futile."

"Every segment of line we succeeded in forming was again dissolved while another was being formed; more than two thousand men were shouting each some suggestion to his neighbor, their voices mingling with the noise of the shells hurtling through the trees overhead, and all word of command drowned in the confusion and uproar."

Col. Thomas L. Preston, a member of Gen. Johnston's staff, says:

"General Bee rode up, and as he faced General Johnston, he dropped the reins of his horse, and in a voice tremulous with emotion and tears rolling down his cheeks he said, 'General, my command is scattered and I am alone.'"

"General Johnston replied, 'I know it was not your fault, General Bee. But don't despair; the day is not lost yet.'"

Thomas Marshall Spaulding in the new Dictionary of American Biography observes that Bee's Brigade "was one of those that bore the brunt of the first attack—it suffered heavily, and finally broke up, but it had held back Union advance long enough for the defense to be organized in the rear."

"But help was at hand. Jackson, like Bee and Bartow, had been ordered to the Stone Bridge."

"Hearing the heavy fire to his left increasing in intensity, he had turned the head of his column toward the most pressing danger, and had sent a messenger to Bee to announce his coming."

"At this moment, about 11:30 a. m., Bee rode up at full gallop and met Jackson face to face."

"Jackson was cool, composed. Bee, covered with dust and sweat, sword in hand, his horse foaming, said:

"General, they are beating us back!"

"Jackson answered: 'Then, Sir, we will give them the bayonet!'"

"Jackson's determined bearing inspired Bee with renewed confidence. He turned his horse and galloped back to the ravine where his officers were attempting to re-form broken companies."

It was at this moment that Bee, as Mrs. Jackson put it, "christened his companion-in-arms, in the baptism of fire, with the name he was henceforth to bear, not only in the Southern army, but in history, of Stonewall Jackson."

"There is Jackson standing like a stone wall."

"Rally behind the Virginians!"

"Let us determine to die here, and we will conquer!"

"Follow me!"

Mrs. Jackson records that Bee said:

"Look at Jackson, there he stands like a stone wall! Rally behind the Virginians!"

General Beauregard asserted that Bee said:

"Look at Jackson's brigade! It stands there like a stone wall!"

Gen. E. P. Alexander, who was in the battle, put it:

Jackson, with characteristic modesty, always insisted that Bee had referred to his brigade and not to himself personally.

Gen. Johnston in his narrative adds this curious note that just when Bee christened Jackson such of the latter's men as were "in sight of Bee's troops were lying down by Jackson's order to avoid the enemy's artillery."

Gen. E. P. Alexander observed:

"It is a coincidence that the same comparison was made the same afternoon by Gen. Joseph E. Johnston."

"I was acting as his guide late in the evening, and, in speaking of the fighting, he instanced the Fourth Virginia Regiment of Jackson's brigade, under Col. James F. Preston, and said, so impressively that I always remembered it, 'Preston's regiment stood there like a stone wall.'"

While I was preparing to come here today, a South Carolina woman of the elder generation sent me this message:

"Be sure you don't quote General Bee as saying to his men, 'Rally behind the Virginians!' because you know no South Carolinian would ever tell his men to do that."

However, recalling numerous expressions of admiration and affection for the people of the Old Dominion uttered by South Carolina Confederate veterans and 6 of our women of war times, I am certain that our soldiers would have rather rallied behind the Virginians than anywhere else.

Jack's own account of this phase of the battle is characteristically terse and laconic.

He says: "Ascertaining that General Bee, who was on the left of our line, was hardpressed, I marched to his assistance, notifying him at the same time that I was advancing to his support; but, before arriving within cannon range of the enemy, I met General Bee's forces falling back."

"I continued to advance with the understanding that he would form in my rear. . . ."

Whatever it was that Bee exclaimed, "the men took up the cry; and the happy augury of the expression, applied at a time when defeat seemed imminent and hearts were failing, was remembered when the danger had passed away."

After the retreat had been halted, General Beauregard resolved to take the offensive and ordered a charge for the purpose of recovering the plateau.

"The movement, made with alacrity and force by the commands of Bee, Bartow, Evans, and Hampton, thrilled the entire line," Beauregard declared.

The enemy was swept from the Henry plateau, but they re-formed and pressed the Confederates back.

Beauregard determined to make another effort to recover the plateau, and ordered a charge of the entire line of battle which, as he said, "broke the Federal fortunes of the day at severe cost."

"To hold the raw and undisciplined troops up to their work required desperate exertion and reckless exposure on the part of the officers."

In the second charge of the whole gray line Bee was mortally wounded a few yards back of the Henry house "near the very spot whence in the morning he first looked forth upon Evans' struggle with the enemy."

When he fell, Bee was grasping the sword of honor which the State of South Carolina had presented to him 17 years before.

President Davis noted in his book: "When riding to the front, I met an ambulance bearing Gen. Barnard Bee from the field, where he had been mortally wounded, after his patriotism had been illustrated by conspicuous exhibitions of skill, daring and fortitude."

He died the following morning, July 22, in the little cabin on the field where he had made his headquarters—he and General Bartow having been the first Confederate generals to give their lives for their country."

His body and those of General Bartow and Lieutenant Colonel Johnston of South Carolina were sent to Charleston on a special train.

Bartow's corpse was later carried on to Savannah.

Charleston did the utmost honor to the slain South Carolinians and to General Bartow.

A great number of citizens and the local military companies met the train and escorted the bodies to the City Hall which had been draped in mourning. The bells of the churches tolled, flags flew at half-mast, the stores closed, and between 4000 and 5000 people viewed the bodies laid out in state.

The body of General Bee was carried across the State to Pendleton, historic village to which his family had moved.

When he fell mortally wounded, his thoughts were of that home, for he called out, "Where are the Pendleton boys? Let them take me off the field!"—and some of them did.

In the Episcopal churchyard, not far from the home of John C. Calhoun and in sight of the sentinel ranges of the Blue Ridge, General Bee sleeps beside his brother-in-law, another Confederate brigadier general, Clement H. Stevens, his volunteer aide who was seriously wounded at the same time Bee was mortally shot at Manassas, who invented the Confederate armored floating battery,

Their is a common monument.

"That passeth by this grave, man, 'There moulders here a gallant heart 'For this was a brave man."

Bee earned the high opinion of his superior officers at Manassas.

Gen. Joseph E. Johnston said:

He added that the victory at Manassas was "due, under Almighty God, to the skill and resolution of General Beauregard, the admirable conduct of Generals Bee, E. K. Smith, and Jackson, and of colonels commanding brigades (Evans, Cocke, Early and Elzey), and the courage and unyielding firmness of patriotic volunteers."

In his official report General Beauregard said:

"In the death of Gen. Barnard E. Bee the Confederacy has sustained an irreparable loss, for, with great personal bravery and coolness, he possessed the qualities of an accomplished soldier, and an able, reliable commander."

Beauregard also styled him "the brave Bee" and "the heroic Bee," and declared that he fell "to the great misfortune of his country, but after deeds of deliberate and ever memorable courage."

Gen. E. P. Alexander, referring to Bee and Bartow at Manassas, asserts that "the victory could never have been won without them," while Robert M. Hughes, biographer of Gen. Joseph E. Johnston, asks, "What have been the story of Manassas without Bee, Bartow and Jackson to illumine its page?"

The sentiment of Bee's native State was voiced by its leading newspaper of the time, The Charleston Mercury, which said:

"South Carolina . . . mourns his loss, for he was a true representative of his race—mild, modest, amiable of deportment, open, generous, bold and dashing in achievement, nice of honor and punctilious of fame, winning friends by sterling conduct, as fearless of foes as sensitive of regard, he was all that his State could ask of a gentleman, a soldier and a patriot."

"South Carolina will ever bend in honor over the tomb of such a son." Thomas Marshall Spaulding says in the Dictionary of American Biography:

"He is chiefly remembered now as the man who gave Stonewall Jackson the name by which he is known in history."

"He showed a capacity for command that was not usual in the early days of the war, and it is fair to suppose that he would have risen high if he had lived."

The old Palmetto State is and always will be deeply grateful for the high honor done here and now to a son who loved her and whom she loves forevermore.

South Carolina has proclaimed to the world for all time to come her judgment of her sons and of all others who wore the gray in this inscription upon a white shaft before her State House which "perpetuates the memory of those who: 'True to the instincts of their birth, Faithful to the teaching of their fathers

Constant in their love for the State, Died in the performance of their duty; who

Have glorified a fallen cause By the simple manhood of their lives, The patient endurance of suffering And the heroism of death; and who

In the dark hours of imprisonment, In the hopelessness of the hospital, In the short sharp agony of the field, Found support and consolation

Those for whom they died

INSCRIBE—

The solemn record of their sacrifice The perpetual gratitude of the State they served.

Their names recall to their children and kinsmen

How worthily they lived How nobly they died; And in what tender reverence their memory survives.

These were men Whom power could not corrupt, Whom death could not terrify, Whom defeat could not dishonor; And let their virtues plead for just judgment

Of the Cause in which they perished; let the South Carolinian Of another generation

REMEMBER That the State taught them How to live and how to die And that from her broken fortunes She has preserved

The priceless treasure of their memory Teaching all who may claim the same birthright

That truth, courage and patriotism endure forever."

BIBLE THOUGHT AND PRAYER

If parents will have their children memorize the daily Bible selections, it will prove a priceless heritage to them in their lives.

And the Lord turned the captivity of Job, when he prayed for his friends: also the Lord gave Job twice as much as he had before.—Job 42:10.

COUNTRY EDITOR (Christian Science Monitor)

Those who are appreciatively aware of the major part he has played in the development of a nation realize, following a vacation visit to the "old home town," that the country editor is belatedly coming into his own. A new, conservatively gray suit has replaced the shiny serge of yesteryear; a modest car is parked before his recently painted home or office, and he exudes a general air of well-being more convincing than the boldest bold-faced type—these are evidences of a security which he has modestly refrained from mentioning in his paper on the theory that it would be "news."

Although it has chronicled assiduously the doings of Podunkville, the comings and goings of its residents, its marriages, the repainting of its homes or the building of new ones, the rural newspaper has omitted an all-important item—the gradual change in the status of its editor. In an earlier day he was frequently a "one-man newspaper," since he not only gathered news items and solicited advertisements, but, this phase of journalistic activity completed, set them into type, made up the forms and, with a robust assistant, ran off the meager edition and carried it to the postoffice for mailing. His writings invariably radiated an optimism he must sometimes have been far from feeling, since he would interrupt an editorial advocating a four-figure expenditure for a waterworks system to accept an offering of farm pro-

But this condition is now seemingly at an end. During the so-called "recession years" the country editor has paradoxically prospered. Those who have followed his course during the devious years like to think that in rallying to his support, in recognizing his true value through giving him a hand in the shaping of civic affairs instead of permitting him to merely chronicle them, the community is paying a long-deferred debt.

KLINE-HUGHES

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Hughes of Matthews, Va., was the scene of a pretty wedding, July 15 at 6:00 p.m., when their pretty youthful daughter, Alma Lee, became the bride of Claron Emmett, son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Kline of Manassas, Virginia.

The ceremony was performed by the pastor of the bride, Rev. Gary B. Baldwin, assisted by Rev. Jno. M. Kline, father of the groom.

The home was beautifully decorated with cut flowers and ferns. Miss Mildred Jones sang and played, "At Dawning," and "I Love You Truly."

Mr. Kline was reared at Manassas, and attended the elementary and high school, graduating in the class of 1930, receiving one year scholarship to Bridgewater college after which he went to V.P.L., graduating in agricultural economics in 1934. Since graduating he has taught agriculture at Richmond, Oceania and Matthews, Va., where he became acquainted with his bride.

Miss Hughes was born and reared at Matthews, Va., where she attended the elementary and high school, graduating in 1938.

There were many friends of the couple present to witness the ceremony. Those from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Jno. M. Kline, parents of the groom, and Mr. Everett Kline, brother of the groom. After the ceremony a rich repast of refreshments was served.

After July 30 they will be at home at Matthews, Va., where Mr. Kline will resume his work as agricultural instructor.

Claron has many friends in Prince William County, who join in wishing the young couple a long and happy life.

WALLACE T. SECORD

Wallace T. Secord, aged 54, died on Saturday morning, July 15th, in the Northern Westchester hospital, Mt. Kisco, New York, from injuries sustained Friday evening when he fell from the roof of his home which he was painting. Neighbors heard him fall and he was rushed to the hospital, after a hasty medical examination, where it was found that all the ribs on his right side had been broken and had punctured his lung.

Mr. Secord was born March 18, 1885, at Secord's Corners, New York, and was a son of the late Benjamin and Adeline Hopkins Secord. He attended the local schools and then in 1922 became sheriff of Putnam County. He served as sheriff for another three-year term beginning in 1927. He was very active in political affairs for a number of years and was a staunch Democrat. During the World War he served as food administrator of his native county.

In 1933 he purchased a farm near Manassas, where he and his family lived until the fall of last year when they returned to their home in Raymond Hill Park, Mt. Kisco, N.Y. Since returning to New York Mr. Secord had been employed by the county highway department.

He was an active church member, belonging to Mt. Carmel Baptist Church, in New York, at the time of his death. He was an active member of several Granges, including the New York State Grange, belonged to several Fraternal orders and was active in the local fire department.

In 1905 he married Miss Clara Benjamin of Mahopac, N. Y., who survives him. Also surviving him are two sons, Milford and Irvin, and one sister, Mrs. Charles P. Cole of Carmel, N. Y.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon, July 17, at Mt. Carmel Baptist church, Rev. H. P. Simpson, pastor of the church, officiating. Masonic services were conducted at the grave. Interment was in the Raymond Hill cemetery.

The pallbearers were four nephews, Raymond, Homer, Ward and Grant Cole, and Paul Cole and Azor Hopkins.

Editor, Manassas Journal: Next Tuesday, August 1st, you the voters of Prince William County, will select by your votes the nominees for various county offices. What you will be doing will, in effect, be employing a Sheriff, a Commonwealth Attorney, or other officer, to perform the duties of the office to which he is elected and for which you will pay him out of the taxes collected from you. As you are going to pay him out of the taxes collected from you, as you are going to pay the salary of the man elected you should consider his qualifications for the office for which he is a candidate. If he is now an office holder and has filled the office in an efficient, honest, fair and acceptable manner, his experience should justify your re-electing him. If you have a man working for you on your farm, or elsewhere, who does a satisfactory job, who knows what you want done and how you want it done, you would not consider firing him and giving the job to a green hand at the same wages. So, why should you consider changing your county work who are doing your county work who know from experience what is to be done and how best to do it, and electing some one who is unfamiliar with the work.

Do not turn down a good public servant from prejudice or dislike and elect some one in his place who may not be as good and who has to learn, while you are paying him, the duties of the office.

—Voter.

CARROLL, MacMURRAY, IN COMEDY ROMANCE

Madeleine Carroll, first in the hearts of beauty-appraisers everywhere, returns to the screen for a fling at romance with handsome Fred MacMurray, her new leading man, in Paramount's "Cafe Society," which will have its local premiere next week at Pitts' Theatre. Shirley Ross, as chief runner-up for MacMurray's affections, completes the starring trio.

Miss Carroll, who has climbed to screen fame via "The Case Against Mrs. Ames," "The General Died at Dawn," "Lloyds of London," "Prisoner of Zenda" and "Blockade," gets ample opportunity to show off the devastating blonde beauty which prompted one famous artist to call her "lovelier than Romney's Lady Hamilton"—his highest tribute. Cast as a millionairess of New York's smartest set, she wears more than twenty striking new costumes especially designed for her by Edith Head. Running the gamut from yachting costumes to glamorous evening gowns, the clothes represent the perfect wardrobe for the member of "Cafe Society."

The romance of Miss Carroll and MacMurray, who plays a young newspaperman, is one of the highest-gearred to reach the screen in many a month. It goes into action when, assigned over her arrival on the "Queen Mary," he treats her so contemptuously that she waits her time to get even with him. It comes when she succeeds in getting him to fall in love with her and marries him simply to crash the gossip columns.

For the past fifteen months I have served you as Commonwealth Attorney. FOR COMMONWEALTH'S ATTORNEY To the Voters of Prince William County:

For the past fifteen months I have served you as Commonwealth Attorney. When I was appointed by the Judge of the Circuit Court from the membership of the local bar to fill this position I felt personally gratified and have endeavored at all times since assuming this post to perform the duties incumbent upon the occupant without fear or favor, in the manner as dictated by my conscience.

At the very first I found the duties much more difficult than I anticipated but have become acquainted with them since my appointment. My aim has at all times been to serve the people of my county honestly and to the best of my ability.

I am sorry that I will not be able to visit every voter in person before the August Primary, but have been and will be prevented, owing to the fact that I have been and am engaged daily in performing the duties devolving upon the office.

If my record, while serving you, has met with your approval then I would greatly appreciate your support in the coming Primary. You know my capabilities in so far as this office is concerned from my record and I assure you, if elected, I shall continue to perform my duties in the manner that I have done while serving you as Commonwealth's Attorney. Sincerely, W. Hill Brown, Jr. 8-te-c

To the Voters of Gainesville District: I wish to take this opportunity to state to the voters of my District that I have been a resident of Gainesville Magisterial District, Prince William County, Virginia, all of my life, having been born and reared there, and have always been a member of the Democratic party.

I have been a member of Sudley Church for about 25 years, having served on the Board of Stewards and Trustees and have been Treasurer of that Church for 20 years. I, also, am a member of the Masonic Lodge of Haymarket.

I am a farmer and have been all of my life. I have raised a large family, all of whom have gone, or are going through high school.

It is my thought that when a man can make a success of his own business, and I feel that I have since I have a debt-free home and farm, then it seems to me that would qualify one to administer the affairs of his District in a satisfactory manner.

If elected I shall strive to give to the taxpayer the most of his tax-dollar and I shall use the same interest and effort in county affairs as I have in my own business.

Hoping that you may see fit to support me in the coming Primary, I remain Your friend, L. J. Pattie. 12-1-c

Mrs. Sallie Butler at the age of 91 years, departed this life Thursday evening, July 6, 1939 in the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Jackson of Manassas.

She was born February 14, 1848 in Stafford county where she spent the first twenty eight years of her life.

In 1876 she moved to Warrenton, Fauquier county with her mother. There in 1879, she was married to Mr. Daniel Butler also from Stafford county. In 1916, after the death of her husband, she left Fauquier county and came to Prince William county to make her home with her children. From that time on she was active in her life and work and soon became well known by the elders of Prince William county.
