> With the final showing at Haymarket last night, the Mirth and Melody Minstrels of 1941 closed an illustrious season. The audience showed its preference for old blackface comedy and mountain music in no uncertain measure.

Prior to the show, Commander Edgar G. The Ennis Brothers with their string and vocal duets received a heavy round of applause. The Show Boat with Mose (Carroll Maness) put through its quota of musical hits in good style, while Ten Nights in a Bar Reom and an Ermy skit received good attention.

The colorful Easter Parade was only too short, and the Twigg family were again very much in evidence. The orchestra and accompanist deserve their share of praise for the general success of the whole affair. And last but certainly not least, come the property men, scenic artists, electricians and the whole "army" of helpers all of whom did their respective parts.

It was a clean, enjoyable show. Certainly it reflects great credit on Professor Jakeman, his faculty and the youth under their charge. It was a handsome gesture toward community affiliation which will reflect it-
