ANNUAL SALE OF CHRISTMAS SEALS

PLANS COMPLETED BY STATE ORGANIZATION

Plans for the 37th annual Christmas Seal Sale Campaign were made at a meeting of the Prince William County Tuberculosis Association held at the Health Office on Monday afternoon. Ten members were present to meet the new field supervisor, Miss Eleanor Gayle Currin, who assisted with planning the program for the remainder of the year. The group included the Rev. John M. DeChant, chairman; Mrs. Marshall Haydon, secretary; Mrs. Frank Cox, seal sale chairman; Mrs. Holmes Robertson, Gainesville District chairman; Mrs. Fred Shepherd, Mrs. Wade Whetzel, Nokesville; Miss Sabina Neal, Miss Bernice Criddle, county nurses; Miss Sue Ayres, elementary supervisor; Miss Margaret Townes, Jeanes supervisor; and Mrs. Dorothy Hall, chairman of seal sales for the Negro Auxiliary.

The suggested quota of $1,375 was accepted for the 1943 campaign to raise funds for continuing the work of the organization, and supplies were issued to district chairmen present. This year's goal exceeds that of last year by only $150 and the Association anticipates another successful campaign. Seals will go on sale throughout the county on November 22nd, but they may be obtained for early mailing at the Health Office prior to the date. The financial report covering the period between April 1st and October 1st showed expenditures of $335.65 including the following items: X-rays, $158; $65.84, cod liver oil; $42.88, milk; $35.65, sanatorium care; $22.43; supplies; $11, miscellaneous. A balance of approximately $629 remains in the treasury to cover expenses for the rest of the year.

Among the suggestions offered by Miss Currin to supplement the work of the organization is an expanded educational program to be carried out by providing speakers at local civic club meetings. It was decided also to conduct a mass clinic for the diagnosis of tuberculosis among junior and senior high school students of the county. The last week in March was selected as the date for the clinic to be held in Manassas when around a thousand students will be given an opportunity to have chest x-rays at a nominal fee. The regular semi-annual clinic for the diagnosis of tuberculosis of white and colored adults and children of the county will be held on November 8th, 9th, and 10th in the local Health Office. The number of patients to be x-rayed will be limited to 125 and early appointments are advised.

Lieutenant Ray Amos Diehl. The Journal extends congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Daniel S. Diehl, of Nokesville on the commissioning of their son, Ray Amos Diehl, as Second Lieutenant at the Blytheville Air Field in Arkansas.

INTERESTING PROGRAM AT CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Fifty members and guests were present at the Chamber of Commerce luncheon held at the Prince William Hotel on Tuesday when guests speakers from out-of-town headed the program. Mr. Floyd M. Riddick of Prince William County, a representative of the United States Chamber of Commerce, Washington Headquarters, gave an informative talk on the relationship between Congress and the Administration, following which an open forum on present day legislative problems was conducted. Mr. Riddick, who was introduced by Mr. C. W. Alpaugh, chairman of the program committee, brought out the necessity for expression and cooperation of the people in order to secure the best form of Government.

Mr. Giles Miller, vice-chairman of the Northern Virginia War Fund Campaign, another guest speaker, was presented by Mr. E. R. Conner, member of the House of Delegates, and gave an interesting explanation of the purpose and need of funds for the drive.

Mr. Miller stressed the fact that contributions to the War Fund provide a means for citizens on the home front to contribute toward the National effort to support a combination of all War Relief Agencies excepting the Red Cross which solicits funds separately. The District vice-chairman also called upon members of the Chamber and residents of the county to give their full fledged support to the local drive, the chairmanship of which Mr. Conner has accepted at the request of Governor Darden. The county's quota has been set at $9,000. Efforts to meet the goal will be made through chairmen appointed in the various districts and through the organization of clubs. It is hoped that the late start made by Prince William in joining the drive will be offset by the ever-ready response of her citizens to aid a worthy cause.

ADVISED TO HOLD MILK CREAM AND BUTTER RECEIPTS

The War Food Administration has announced that the milk, butterfat and butter subsidy program will be handled through the County A A A Committee, but details of how and when payments will be made have not yet been received.

Producers are advised to keep complete records and receipts of whole milk, cream and butter sales beginning on October 1 and to hold these until notified through the columns of The Manassas Journal when and where they should be submitted.

According to the War Food Administration, subsidy payments will be made on milk, cream and butter produced and marketed between Oct. 1, 1943, and Dec. 31, 1943.

Announcement of the payment rates was made in last week's Manassas Journal.

NAVY RECRUITING CRUISER VISITS MANASSAS

NAVY RECRUITING CRUISER "ANCHORED" ON CENTIKE STREET

MR. PARRISH SAYS

In behalf of the Aircraft Warning Service, Mr. Edgar Parrish asks us to express his deep appreciation of the valuable work done by the volunteers in this important work, which is now reduced in this area, but which on a moment's notice should be kept ready to expand to its former 24 hour vigilance, if circumstances should make this necessary.

He also wants names of men in the armed services who have gone in without induction by the Selective Service. This is for the memorial which is about to be placed in the County carrying the names of all men in the service. There are quite a number known only to their own families who entered before the draft registration who may otherwise not receive recognition unless their friends and relatives cooperate.

NEED FOR CHAPLAINS SEEN IN WORLD TOUR

The Rev. Dr. William Barrow Pugh, of Philadelphia, touring world battlefronts as a representative of Protestant churches in the United States, cabled from New Delhi, India, Thursday, that "there is an insufficient number of chaplains in critical places."

"I find people everywhere looking to the American churches for inspiration to build the future world on principles of the gospel of brotherhood and good will," his cable said. "It is the greatest opportunity of history."

Many of our younger clergy might take this under advisement. The pulpits of many churches could be taken over by retired clergy with good effect.

REPRESENT KIWANIS CLUB AT ROANOKE CONVENTION

A report of the annual Capitol District Convention held on October 14 and 15 at Roanoke was made by Col. Robert A. Hutchison, and Mr. R. Worth Peters at last Friday evening meeting of the Manassas Kiwanis Club. The theme of the annual meeting was, "Up America American."

Next Friday's meeting will be devoted to a program on "Navy Day", which will be led by Father John Staunton. Nominations were made for 1944 club officers to be elected in late November.

NEXT TUESDAY'S ELECTION

(Editorial)

On Tuesday, November 2, the voters of Prince William County and of the State go to the polls essentially to ratify the results of the August Primary. Outsiders find it difficult to understand how Southern Democrats fight bitterly in the Primary Election, then close ranks over the fallen and march forward, as it were, to victory. But to the amazement of new residents from two-party States we do it year after year.

However, there are indications that as much as we enjoy this political phenomenon, we are actually becoming restive and not absolutely wedded to this ideal. We certainly very definitely turned aside in the Hoover-Al Smith election, and coming up very soon now will be another severe test of our devotion to "The Party." This will happen when the President runs for a fourth term, which few doubt will not occur.

Party disloyalty is the outgrowth of official ingratitude. In other words, when voters loyally go down the line on election day, year after year, only to find that when their turn comes for a little bite they are definitely spurned, then individuals in greater numbers scratch their ballots, probably with an inward prayer that no one will find them out, but nevertheless definitely in political rebellion.

It is in a rather sullen mood that the majority of Prince William's Democracy goes to the polls next Tuesday. They have a definite feeling that a machine which they have loyally supported through many hard fought campaigns, in some way let them down last August, denying them the first real chance the County has had of a State Senator in Fifty Years, and sacrificing a Delegate to the General Assembly whose able service was valued and wanted by the large majority of this County.

The result will be reflected in a lighter vote than the Party should register. This is unfortunate, but nevertheless true. And it is very unfair because the ones who will be hurt the most are not responsible. Some of our best County Officials, who were unopposed last August, come up next Tuesday. They were recognized as so firmly grounded in the esteem and affections of the County that opposition would have been futile. They deserve a big vote, but may not get what they merit, just on account of this very situation. The minority Party will be out in force and if too many of the majority Party sulk at home, unforeseen results can occur.

The pity of it all is that just around the corner are campaigns which will require the sturdy assistance of all good voters. There will be issues involving the fundamental liberty and safety of the Country. If there ever was a time when the old-time Southern variety of Democracy should stand firmly against the ever increasing invasion of State's Rights and Constitutional liberty, that time is rapidly approaching and we can not afford to neglect the power which we yield in the voting booth. We must not, therefore, because of temporary disgust get out of the habit of voting.

Every voter who is qualified should go to the polls next Tuesday. If he is too sore, or cannot stomach the whole ticket of his Party, at least he can ignore those portions of the ballot that cause particular pain and have the pleasure of voting for the few whom he does admire. The ballot is not thrown out because he fails to register a choice for every office, but is counted where he does properly place his "X" in the little squares.

Once upon a time all good Democrats were schooled in the theory that "the worst Democrat that ever breathed is better than the best Republican that ever lived." More recently, however, there has arisen a slight suspicion that once in a while—very rarely of course, but certainly sometimes—a mighty dirty Democrat could exist. Of course we have never seen such a "critter," but should we ever find one on the ballot and know nothing good or bad about his opponent, we will certainly find ourselves flirting with the idea of not voting so far as that portion of the ballot is concerned, but we will be there early on the morning of election day to vote for the men we do esteem.

MORE MEN CALLED BY THE SELECTIVE SERVICE BOARD

The following men have been ordered to report for induction into the service at Richmond, Va. on November 5, 1943:

Willie White, Manassas, Va.; Warren Christian Williams, Dumfries, Va.; Wilmer Leon Fields, Manassas, Va.; Bladen Oswald Robinson, Manassas, Va.

Get Ready to Help the War Fund.

Despite the constant downpour of rain which was prevalent while the Navy Recruiting Cruiser was in Manassas, Chief Petty Officer E. Sterling Chambers, Skipper of the Cruiser, said that he was well pleased with the results obtained during its stay.

A special Navy patriotic program embodying the various branches of the nautical service was given in the local high school auditorium on Monday night, a movie showing our Navy in action were the highlighting features of the meeting.

Principal R. W. Peters of the school directed the meeting and introduced first C. Lacy Compton, trial justice judge of Manassas, who spoke briefly about the Navy of old in comparison with our modern fighting men and ships of the first line. Mr. Compton used the sea classic, "Mutiny On The Bounty" to illustrate his point of difference in the recruitment of men of the modern Navy in comparison to the "press gangs" of the early navies.

Chief Petty Officer Chambers was next introduced to the audience and greeted by Principal Peters.

Chambers spoke about the Navy and its many opportunities for both young men and young women. He said that the Navy was urgently in need of 17 year olds for immediate duty and that these men were making the finest blue jackets in the fleet. "They can take it, and they can truly dish it out," said the Chief in his praise of the 17 year old seamen. Men entering the Navy, said the Chief, who are 17 years old are able to serve twenty years if they wish and retire from the naval service at the age of 37 and receive 50 per cent of their Navy pay the rest of their lives. At present trade school training is greater than ever before in the Navy. Many new fields of training have opened since the start of the war, and the 17 year old learning a navy trade now will not only be able to use it during his military career, but will be able to put his training to use at the conclusion of the present conflict.

Chief Chambers urged parents of 17 year olds who were desirous of entering the Navy to let them do so, since when the 17 year old reaches his 18th birthday he will be eligible for selective service. In expressing the Navy's needs the chief further urged young women between 20 and 36 to do a part in helping their country win this war by serving the navy in the WAVES. These young women are doing their country a great service at many naval establishments throughout the country, and relieving fighting men for duty at sea. They are serving as clerical workers, storekeepers, parachute inspectors, radio operators and in many other fields where the naval man has been stationed in the past.

In concluding his remarks, before the movie program, Chief Chambers stated that skilled construction men are still able to volunteer for duty in the "fighting-builders," the SEABEES. Skilled tradesmen must act now though, said the chief, for all ratings in the SEABEES are subject to withdrawal without notice. In the Chief's words, "there's no time to lose, if you want to choose." The movie program consisted of "Sports of Sailormen," 1500 Tons Under The Sea, "Eyes of The Navy" and "I Am An American Bluejacket." Besides the movie program at the high school, a special Navy trailer was shown at the local Pitts' Theatre.

AMERICAN HEROES

"As our guns groped blindly for vital enemy targets in Tunisia, Sergeant Donald V. Peterson of South Minneapolis crept beyond our lines. Snipers and machine guns raked the ground, but he pushed on, snaked forward into view of our targets. Sheltered from withering fire by one small bush, he radioed fire commands and our guns battered the enemy. His country recognized Peterson's bravery with the Silver Star. You can recognize it with another War Bond.

BONDS OR BONDAGE, WHICH?

"Naturally, I don't know when the war will end..."

"The sooner the better, is all I can say. But I know that until it ends, you and I have a duty to your car that gets more important every day..."

"EVERY CAR that still runs is an essential cog in the country's whole transportation scheme. As the older cars quit, the ones still left get more and more essential.

"I'm not making scare-talk when I say that even standing in a garage most of the time, your car gets run down. Metals corrode. Oil gets dirty and sludgy. Grease dries out. The battery runs down. Spark plugs get fouled up. Radiator hose connections go bad. Tires get soft, so the sidewalls bend and crack.

"In these times, it's a crime to let this happen. Because you don't have to! Almost anyone's car can see him through, if he'll give it a chance.

"We're still here with everything it takes to help protect your car, whatever make it is. You find us short-handed sometimes, but we're long on experience and good equipment and reliable Esso products.

"However little you drive, you need winter oil and a winter grease job. Your battery fit and strong.

Your radiator tight and ready with anti-freeze. Your tires checked over, maybe switched around to get the most out of them. This is mighty important right now—to keep your car in service for the duration. Come on in. Right this week. Winter's getting close!"

SAFE WATER

"The fact that the majority of cases of typhoid fever in Virginia occur in rural sections indicates that the attack against the disease to a large extent now rests with those who obtain their drinking water from a well or spring. Apparently there are many users of water from such sources who still are neglectful of the fundamental safeguards," states Dr. I. C. Riggan, State Health Commissioner.

"The water from a well may look good, taste good, and smell good, but bacteriological tests may show the presence of pollution from human or animal sources. While pollution can be determined by laboratory tests, it is impossible to tell by such tests whether typhoid fever or other disease germs are present in a given sample. Fortunately, this is not necessary, as the presence of pollution in itself is sufficient proof that such water is unfit and may be dangerous for human consumption.

"On the other hand, in many instances, merely an inspection of the well or spring and surroundings is all that is necessary to condemn the supply. For example, if the cover of the well is loose, dirt and filth scraped from the teeth of those who use the supply may be washed into it by rain and by drippings from the pump.

"Again, the location of the well or spring may be such that underground contamination by way of seepage from a cesspool or barnyard can readily enter the supply. When such a condition exists, no matter how effective the mechanical safeguards against surface pollution may be, a typhoid fever hazard definitely exists.

"It follows that before drilling a well or using a spring, advice on this most important matter should be obtained from the local health department. A request to the local health authorities for advice will result in a visit by a sanitarian who will give the required information."

"It should be emphasized, however, that by far the majority of typhoid and other water-borne diseases can be traced to individual water supplies, which have been in service for a long time. The fault with most of these supplies, though by no means all of them, is in the householder's neglect to keep his supply properly protected from surface drainage.

"Bulletins on this important subject may be obtained from either the local health department or direct from the State Department of Health. If repairs are indicated, these should be made without delay. If the location of the source suggests the possibility of underground contamination, the need for a check-up by a public health official is imperative.

"If the above advice were heeded by all users of individual water supplies, the typhoid fever problem in Virginia almost automatically would diminish. A more general co-operation of the rural dweller remains the weak link in an otherwise strong chain."

DO WHAT YOU CAN FOR GREEK WAR RELIEF

While we are helping the various war relief projects, this newspaper especially invites attention to the needs of Greek sufferers.

All civilized people know of the tragic fate of Greece and of the desperate plight of the heroic people of that unfortunate country.

Their countrymen here are only modestly asking for donations of clothing, and we urge our friends to help.

The local Greek War Relief Committee is making the following appeal:

"The Greek War Relief Association is asking for donations of clothing of all kinds, particularly coats, shoes, and underwear, for suffering Greek population.

"The storeroom at No. 515 C. St., in the rear of the Quantico Railroad Station will be open from 11 A. M. to 5 P. M. Please leave donations there, as the local Committee has no means of calling for your gifts.

OF COURSE we all know there's a war on—but in a way the war makes it even more important that we give the children a chance to observe Halloween in a fitting manner. It seems to me the youngsters definitely feel, even if they aren't aware of it, the tension and excitement of war-time living. And it's a lot wiser to have them celebrate the Witches' Eve right in the home than to let them roam around the streets where there's always a possibility of their getting into trouble on Halloween.

Why not suggest the theme of a special party to them.

For instance, a Pirates' Party! Let the invitations be written in blood-red ink... decorate with skull and bones... warn of spooks... insist that every guest wear some part of a pirate costume...

... costume details could include: fierce false mustaches... bandanas tied on the head pirate-style... cardboard rings in ears... black patch on eye...

... house decorations may involve: paper skulls... skeletons... bones... red lights or candles...

... entertainment can be as varied as imagination allows, for example, a darkened "cave of the winds," where a vacuum cleaner moans and each guest shakes hands with a chicken's claw... blindfolded guests "kiss the binnacle" three times, twice kissing a tin pan but the third time dipping the face into a bowl of flour...

... the plank is held just free of the floor while the young guest, blindfolded, climbs onto it; the plank is rocked while the guest is told to walk forward on it, over deep water; then the guest is made to jump and finds he was still only three inches over the floor!...

... the "treasure," of course is exciting Halloween refreshment!

BOARDING HOMES FOR CHILDREN

The acts of the General Assembly of 1922 in Virginia prescribed certain rules and regulations, some of which have been amended which relate specifically to the licensing of Children's Homes. In Virginia, maternity homes, hospitals and summer camps are now licensed by the Virginia Department of Health.

The acts of 1942 as amended, states that every person who after January 1, 1943, operates or maintains a child placing agency, children's home or day nursery, other than a children's home operated or maintained under the supervision of the State Board of Public Welfare or of a licensed child placing agency or of a local Department of Public Welfare shall obtain a license through the office of the Commissioner of Public Welfare, Richmond, Va. Each license and renewal shall expire at the end of one year from its date of issuance, and that this shall apply to any home which cares for one or more children separated from its parents, with some exceptions which are specifically stated in the act. Further information may be obtained at the local Department of Public Welfare office at the Court House.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Powder Monkey

On board ship and in the artillery their buddies call them "powder monkeys." Not disrespectful, just a personal, intimate term between friends. Civilians call them gun crews. During a battle the crews of "powder monkeys" must work like trojans bringing the ammunition to the guns.

The gun may fire an anti aircraft .50 calibre shell or a broadside from the 16 inch guns of a great battleship, but in either event the "powder monkey" must pass millions of dollars' worth of ammunition to make the gun effective, and your savings in War Bonds are necessary to supply the financial ammunition that provides the shells.

Chicken for the Shelf
An old hen makes better canned chicken than a young, tender bird, say home economists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture to homemakers putting up chicken this fall. The ideal chicken to can is a plump two-year-old hen, not profitable to keep through the winter for laying. Older birds have more flavor and better texture after canning than young fryers and broilers.

A simple and speedy as well as safe method is suggested for wartime canning. For safety, can chicken under pressure and pack in jars no larger than quart size. Also for safety, remove most of the fat from the meat. Too much fat in the jar may cook out on the rubber ring during processing, causing the ring to slip and spoil the seal. In filling the jars take care that no grease or bits of meat are left around the top edge. To prevent darkening of the meat, put up chicken in glass rather than tin, and use no copper or iron utensils in preparation.

For canning, dress the birds and cut into the usual pieces as for cooking. Separate pieces into three piles: meaty parts like breast, thighs and legs to pack in jars; bony parts like wings, backs and necks for broth to fill the jars; and giblets for canning separately in pint jars.

Put the bony pieces in a kettle, cover with lightly salted water, and simmer until the meat falls from the bones. Strain the broth, skim the fat and reheat ready to fill into the jars boiling hot.

Trim fat from the meaty pieces, leaving only enough for flavor, and precook the meat by covering with boiling water, then simmering about 10 minutes until most of the raw color of the fish disappears. Chicken may be canned with or without bones, but boned chicken takes longer to prepared and to process. Bones help the meat heat through quickly and gives added flavor.

Pack the hot chicken in hot jars to within an inch of the top and pour in hot broth to a half inch of the top. As each jar is filled, adjust the lid, place jar in the pressure canner to keep hot while the others are filled. Process pint jars of chicken with bone for 65 minutes, quart jars 75 minutes, at 15 pound pressure.

Sidelights for Food Shoppers
Minicmeat Makings: Home-made minicmeat, fruit cake and plum pudding for the holidays are again possibilities, now that part of the dried raisins and prunes which have been held for Government use, are coming on the market. The War Food Administration recently authorized the release of from 55,000 to 65,000 tons of raisins and from 65,000 to 75,000 tons of prunes for sale to civilians through regular commercial trade, with more to come later. A previous order set aside the entire 1943 pack of dried raisins, prunes, apples, apricots, peaches, pears and currants for military and other Government use with the provision that after Government needs were met, half of these dried fruits would be freed for civilians. Raisins and prunes are rationed at 4 points a pound.

The goal of the Second War Loan drive is 13 billion dollars. That is just about one fifth of the estimated increase of the Public Debt for the fiscal year of 1943.

A. T. & T. President Discusses Vital Part Telephone Plays In Nation's Defense

Activity In Military, Manufacturing Establishments Results In Heavy Demands Generally For Telephone Service And Equipment

Emphasizing the important part played by the Bell telephone system in the nation's defense program, Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, recently declared in a statement to stockholders that "we of the Bell System are concentrating on doing well our part in our country's defense program, which in size and speed is undoubtedly the biggest job undertaken by any company."

Mr. Gifford pointed out that even under normal conditions every effort is made to work out and adhere to schedules for construction and installation to meet the requirements laid down by defense agencies. In order to cooperate quickly and fully with the various government departments, the A. T. & T. Co. has maintained an office in Washington for some years.

"As soon as a decision has been made," he said, "to build or enlarge a military or naval establishment or a defense plant, word reaches our representatives there, and is quickly passed on to the operating companies in whose territory the project is to take shape; to the Western Electric distributing house serving that company and to Western's headquarters; and to the A. T. & T. staff in New York. The operating company begins at once to survey the kind and amount of work it will have to do and the plant which will be needed, and Western Electric schedules tentatively the probable order for the private branch exchange, distribution cable, and other items which the project will require."

A. T. & T.'s president stated that the Bell System's part in the nation's defense activities is not confined to service already provided or to be provided to government establishments. Many thousands of privately owned industries are making military materials of all sorts totaling billions of dollars under direct contracts with the government. The great activity in all of these military and manufacturing establishments is reflected today throughout the whole industrial and social structure of the country and is to a great degree the cause of the heavy demands generally for telephone service and equipment.

"In reality, therefore," Mr. Gifford said, "a very large part of all of our current telephone plant expansion is directly associated with the nation's defense activity and is vital to it."

In concluding his statement, Mr. Gifford declared that the speed and vastness of the country's defense program and the importance of the telephone to its success constituted a challenge to every man and woman in the Bell System—a challenge which is being met with spirit and competence by the entire personnel.

NEW PERSONALITY SEEN IN "BRITANNY" FILM

Thrills and suspense highlight an action-packed romance that introduces a striking new screen personality to America in M-G-M's "Assignment in Brittany," coming November 3-4 to Pitts Theatre. It is the first American film appearance for Pierre Aumont, French star who at the beginning of the war figured in many battles and won the Croix de Guerre for bravery before the Nazis overran his country. Amid amazing adventures he escaped and made his way to this country.

Aumont plays a secret agent who ferrets out the location of a hidden Nazi submarine base, which the Commandos destroy. Playing opposite him is Susan Peters, who recently clicked in "Random Harvest" and "Tish." Another newcomer is the beautiful Signe Hasso, Swedish actress. Richard Whorf, Margaret Wyckoff, Reginald Owen, Miles Mander, Sara Padden, Darryl Hickman and Juanita Quigley are other principals.

BIG CROP OF BEANS

Bumper Beans: The old American custom of baked beans for Saturday night will continue this winter, if the size of the crop is any indication. This year's crop of dried beans was twice the size of the average crop—nearly 23 million 100-pound bags. Dried beans, however, still require points to buy (2 points a pound) because they are in such demand for both civilian and military use. The only dried legumes "off rations" are dried peas and lentils.

FDR says:

Curtail spending. Put your savings into war bonds every payday.

Fertilizer Economies Save Farmers More Than $200,000,000 A Year

Survey Shows $3.60 For Each Dollar Spent For Fertilizer.

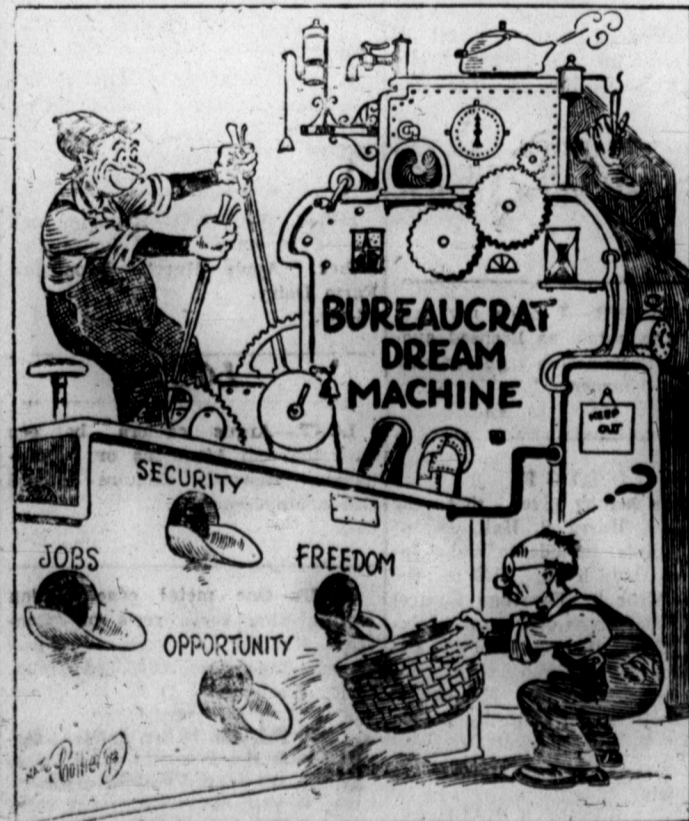

Washington, D. C.—Lower prices for fertilizers due to industry economies have saved farmers $200,000,000 a year, according to government analysis made by A. L. Mehring of the U. S. Department of Agriculture who shows that the sharp downward trend of fertilizer prices since 1880 was interrupted only during the period of the last war; when, due to our country's dependence at that time on foreign supplies, prices rose sharply. After that they again resumed their downward trend. At the same time the industry made the nation self-sufficient and no longer largely dependent upon foreign sources of supply.

"Prices dropped sharply during the depression and have never recovered to the extent that other commodities have. As a result of this fact, fertilizer prices today give the farmer real parity for his dollar," says Charles J. Brand, Executive Secretary and Treasurer of The National Fertilizer Association. "Prices received by farmers for their products today would have to go up 21 per cent to reach parity with what farmers pay for all commodities which they buy. But, so far as fertilizer is concerned, the picture is different. The present price of fertilizer is so low that it gives the farmer, instead of a 21 per cent handicap, a 5 per cent advantage on every dollar he spends for fertilizer."

Returns from a recent survey of 32,000 farmers show that an investment in low-priced fertilizers yields high returns. An average of $3.60 returned for each $1.00 which they spent for fertilizer.

Old Confederate Fort Being Demolished

"ARTILLERY HILL" (Contributed)

October 18, 1943—This morning a Caterpillar tractor and shovel began leveling the old Confederate fort on "Artillery Hill," at Centerville. Bad news travels fast and though early in the afternoon I was on the ground, already the modern juggernaut had clawed down fully fifty per cent of the ancient ramparts and filled up half of the ditches with the raw, yellow clay which the shovels of hundreds of Confederate soldiers had laboriously piled up in a long-ago summer eighty-two years ago, the summer of 1861.

It was a windy, cool October day as I scrambled over the heaps of freshly-torn earth and the still standing remains of the old breastworks, blackened with the ashes of fires which a few weeks before had been set to burn off the weeds, brush and trees that for decades had more or less mantled the fort. With the grinding vibrations of the tractor clattering in my ears I snapped a few pictures of the destruction in progress, of the mutilated fragments of earthworks still standing, and of the wide, wind-swept and cloud-flecked landscape rolling away on every side in billows of autumnal splendor from the houses of Centerville at my feet to the Bull Run Mountains sixteen miles away.

The gentlemanly young man operating the tractor seemed to sense the situation, though he could in no way remedy it; he simply had his job to do and was doing it. But in the pit of my stomach there developed a sickly, sinking sensation. It was mingled of such regret as one feels at the bedside of a dying friend, for the octogenarian fort which was being swept from earth in one day after all these years of quiet contemplation of the historic landscape around it. In it, too, was resentment at the obliteration, in the name of enterprise, of something so significant in our national past, and in it was a pang almost of homesickness, stirred from the very well-springs of childhood. For even then, in my distant native land, I had known this old fort in the photographs of Matthew Brady, with its quaint wooden "Quaker" guns once mounted there to deceive Union scouts.

Even more intimately remembered were days of August, 1939, when in this hilltop earthwork many parties of visitors gathered and, by the aid of stationary maps and the broad fields along Bull Run spread below them, learned of the opening phases of the 1861 and 1862 Manassas campaigns. In those parties were scores of soldiers engaged in the Third Corps maneuvers of that year who are now scattered far and wide fighting the nation's battles in American armies beyond the seas. At that time the fort and the property around it belonged to a man who was anxious to donate the little historic tract of "Artillery Hill" to the national government as a part of the new battlefield park then being created. To his honor be it said that but for the niggardly opposition of one individual with an influence upon the situation, his intention would have been carried out.

But that opportunity has gone. Never again can that site have the significance it has had in the past, even if sometime in the future the government should acquire it as an advance information station for visitors coming from Washington to tour the Manassas battlefields. More than half the meaning and spirit of "Artillery Hill" was in the old fort itself. Doubtless the site will be put to good practical use by the erection of stores, houses, or what not. But the true charm of the spot, the place it has had until now in the pageant of the past, is dead.

Only two of the thousands who have known it have been there today to bid farewell to the old fort. But I think that with us today have been a throng of invisible witnesses.

I think that General Joe Johnston and General Beauregard stood on those ramparts again, erect and soldierly, as on that October day almost exactly eighty-two years ago when, surrounded by their staffs, they looked over the massed array of the Confederate army terraced in review down the westward slopes.

I think that there, also, was the crowd of Richmond belles and matrons in fluttering ribbons, poke bonnets and crinolines, and beaux in tall silk hats and doekin trousers, which pressed around them with cheers and waving handkerchiefs as the Confederate flags made by the "three beautiful Cary sisters" were formally presented to Generals Johnston, Beauregard and Earl Van Dorn. I think that young W. M. Owen, who so zestfully described that colorful incident in "The Washington Artillery in Camp and Battle," came back again, too, from the Elysian fields with many another younger who wore the gray in the crowded camps around Centerville, and stood with us on the crumbling earthworks, drawn back by memories strong enough to entice them momentarily even from the pursuits of eternity.

Nor lacking from that multitude were many of the boys in blue who from time to time through the war years manned the walls of the fort, camped beyond its edges, and looked over the wide sweep of the Virginia landscape on every hand. They, too, had their memories of it, long since lost to us, the living, in the mists of the past.

And now the old fort itself is but a memory, soon to be forgotten by those who still live around the spot. But the land remains, and history remains and far against the western horizon the blue Bull Run still stretches long shadows across the farm lands as the sun sinks slowly behind them at evening. It is well that the mountains are too big, too nearly eternal, to be obliterated by a bull dozer. From their summits history can still brood upon a land whose romance is so deeply rooted that no plowshare can ever tear it completely away.

On Top of the World!

YES, she's on top of the world... her fairyland world of fun and play and rides on Daddy's shoulder.

It's a world of glorious new adventures by day... of song and love and laughter... of peace and pleasant dreams at night... a world that knows no hate or hunger, no fear of sudden death, no terror of families torn apart.

It's the kind of a world that the 42,000 men and women of the Southern Railway System are fighting for... repairing cars and locomotives in record-breaking time... finding new and better ways to "railroad"... always managing, somehow, to do "the impossible."

For they know... these men and women of the Southern Railway... that, by doing these things, they are helping to win the war.

They know, too, that they are learning how better to serve the Greater South that will emerge with Victory... the Southland in which the little children will truly be "on top of the world"... laughing and playing without fear... and growing up in a veritable fairyland of exciting new opportunities for all.

FLYER SAVES PLANE AND COMPANIONS—Sergt. Maynard H. Smith of Cairo, Ill., had a busy half-hour over St. Nazaire recently. A crew member of a Flying Fortress on bombing mission, he is officially credited with saving the lives of crew-mates and the ship itself. As other men bailed out of the ship, which had been set afire by ack-ack, Maynard gave first aid to one of the crew members, pulled another from where he was stuck to a doorway, brought him aft to another hatch and helped him to bail out. He then fought off attacking German planes, first using one machine gun, then another. By this time ammunition on the Fortress was being detonated by heat, but he put out the fire using little more than his bare hands, enabling the pilot, Lieut. Louis P. Johnson, to bring the plane safely back to its home base.

ON RATIONING AND WAR ACTIVITIES

FIRST there was just wilderness. Then some men came and cleared away the trees and the underbrush. Pretty soon they started to build a factory—way out to nowhere and gone.

The reason was simple—the land was cheap. Also, they knew they could depend on the railroad's laying a spur line over which they could bring in people and raw materials and ship out to market their finished product.

It wasn't long before a little cluster of houses sprang up for the workers. Roads appeared. An enterprising merchant arrived and opened a general store.

Soon a doctor came and a dentist. A garage went up. Then a drug store, a barber shop, a movie house.

And so the town grew. Nobody planned it that way. American initiative made it that way.

The town grew as opportunity grew. It grew like a tree—slowly, steadily, surely. And the trunk of the tree—the trunk through which the lifeline flowed—was the railroad.

Every man who made his living in that town made it from goods that came in by the railroad, or that went out over its bright rails to markets beyond.

The men who built that town in the wilderness believe with all their hearts in free enterprise. But some of them may not appreciate the extent to which their continued economic freedom depends on freedom of the railroads.

The sirens of regimentation may lull us with the theory that it is all very well for private businesses to remain free, but that public carriers should be owned by the government.

But what would this mean in practical terms to every business man in the community we have described? It would mean that his dealings with the railroads would now be on a political instead of a business basis.

And would railroad service be improved? With bureaucrats in charge, and no more competition between lines? You can read the answer in any country in the world where railroads are government-controlled.

Before you listen to those who would "regiment" our railroads, consider whether our business structure could long remain half slave and half free.

And whether, if the axe is laid at the trunk, the whole tree would not suffer.
