BRILLIANT HORSE SHOW WEEK

Waverley and President's Cups Won by Duster, Owned by Mitchell Harrison, and Dave Waller, Exhibited by E. L. Redmon of Middleburg.

With a large crowd in attendance, cool weather conditions and excellent horses, one of the most successful shows in the history of the Prince William Horse Show Company closed Thursday afternoon on the Prince William horse show grounds. The Waverley cup, offered by the show in memory of the late president, Col. N. T. DePauw, was won by Duster, exhibited in the Prince William hunter class by Mr. Mitchell Harrison, of Nokesville. Dave Waller, owned by Mr. E. L. Redmon, of Middleburg, won the silver cup offered by Mr. Melvin C. Hazen, president of the association.

The crowd was breathless for a moment when Mrs. Courtland Smith's mount plunged over the final hurdle and fell to the ground on its side. It was soon on its feet with its rider still in position. The horse was owned by Mr. Mitchell Harrison, of Nokesville.

Mrs. Allen Potts and her Happy Creek entries were warmly applauded. Dr. Churchman's Lord Blackstone was a center of attraction as he exhibited the training of his master in step, action and bow. Several ladies participated, including Miss Clara Free, of Nokesville, who rode Peg o' My Heart, exhibited by H. W. Herring & Son, and Miss Ethel Hiner, who drove Golden Sceptre, an entry of Dr. Churchman.

SOME P. O. CONJECTURES

The Journal Puts Two and Two Together and Lets Its Readers Have the Result.

Government officials are slow in apprising the local public of the site selected for the new postoffice building. So slow, in fact, that THE JOURNAL has decided to give its readers a little exhibition of "guess-work" on the outcome.

Several months ago, property owners filed their bids with Uncle Sam and postoffice officials visited the town to view the sites. Each time the gentlemen were silent on the matter and conjecture was inevitable. When last week it was announced that the Senate had included in the general deficiency bill an appropriation of $3,750 for the lot, the interested public was quick to inquire the price of the sites offered. Rumor says the only land offered at this figure is the Larkin lot at the intersection of West and Church streets, on which stands the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Larkin.

And so, it is natural to suppose that our new postoffice will be situated on the corner of West and Church streets, two blocks from the present building, three blocks from the Southern Railway station and two blocks from the court house.

We cannot venture an estimate upon the cost of the building. It is understood that the appropriation for a second class office may not exceed $50,000. The amount gives range for wide speculation, and we can but be assured that a handsome building will be ours. Uncle Sam is not anxious to be given another postoffice here in the near future, and for this reason he has acquainted himself with the growth of the town and will no doubt supply us with a building that in size, quality and convenience will be equal to the necessities of the greater Manassas predicted for this growing centre.

The next important question is the matter of time. When shall Postmaster Sinclair and his corps of assistants be quartered in the handsome new office? A report states that the government's lease of the present postoffice, which is owned by Judge C. E. Nicol, expires September 15, 1916, and that on that date the office must be moved. Dr. C. R. C. Johnson is then promised the lease that he may remove the partition, put in plate glass windows and extend the Prince William Pharmacy which now occupies the adjoining warehouse.

Will the Postoffice Department give itself the pleasure of looking up and equipping temporary quarters for occupancy during the erection of the new building? Hardly.

And so, we may have excellent grounds on which to base an assertion that our new postoffice will be numbered among the handsome buildings of Manassas on September 15, 1916.

Summer Meeting of the Farmers' Institute.

The summer meeting of the district farmers' institute will be held at Independent Hill on Saturday, August 22, 1914.

STATE-WIDE MASS MEETING

Eagle and McAllister—Alcohol a Poison and Destroys the Mind and the Home.

(Reported for THE JOURNAL by George C. Round)

The Anti-Saloon League sent to our county on Sunday last one of their ablest speakers, Rev. J. D. McAllister. He spoke in Botetourt county on Saturday and was announced to speak at Halifax Court House on Monday. This of itself shows that he is in dead earnest. If more proof is necessary to show his ability, physical as well as intellectual, his three addresses in Prince William furnished that evidence. In each case he took an appropriate text from the Scriptures and in each case preached a powerful sermon by which it was apparent he carried his audience with him. If additional proof was necessary, the size of the collections taken up by him for this work of the League was practical evidence.

The Manassas meeting was at 3 p. m. at the Baptist church, and was opened by the singing of "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name," and by a prayer by Rev. L. R. Markwood, of Nokesville. Rev. M. S. Eagle, of Haymarket, who presided, read some scathing words from Isaiah V, verses 11-23. Any reader of THE JOURNAL who thinks the Lord is on the side of the saloons in this fight might have their eyes opened by reading that chapter.

Mr. Eagle said in his introductory address that he regarded the present campaign as the most important contest ever fought on the soil of Virginia. At Manassas we naturally think of "Stonewall" Jackson. Those who honor him should honor his principles.

"Alcohol," said he, "is a poison. This is the opinion of the best scientific men of the world. There are other poisons in the pharmacopia, but none like alcohol. Mercury attacks the salivary glands, arsenic the coating of the stomach, strychnine the spinal cord, but alcohol attacks the brain, the home of the mind. It makes men insane, breaks down the moral fibre and ruins the soul. I should be shrinking my duty if I kept silent. I took vows at my ordination, vows to God and not to men, vows that compel me to speak and to speak plainly."

"The liquor traffic has killed more men in our country than have been killed in all the wars of our history. In addition, it is doing incalculable damage to society and the Church of God. As long as there is a saloon in Virginia or in the United States, my duty to myself, my church and my country is to fight it until it is destroyed. I would have to throw my vestments away if I advocated the cause of the liquor traffic."

Mr. Eagle then introduced Dr. McAllister as a man who had for years made the most careful study of this question and who was qualified to discuss it.

Dr. McAllister said there were two views to be taken—the view from the economic side and the other from the moral and religious side. He mentioned the fact that a wealthy and influential man, an agent for one of the largest steamship companies, went before the court in Norfolk and objected to three of the saloons in that city, located near the wharf. He presented to the court a careful calculation which showed that the liquor sold in those saloons destroyed the working ability of the men there employed at least 51 per cent. The judge closed the saloons on his testimony. But when asked to attend a temperance meeting and make the same statements, he said he was not a prohibitionist, that he belonged to a private club in the city and drank when he pleased. This man didn't care for those men's souls, for the misery that drink caused their wives and children and neighbors, but he did care for the dollars the Old Dominion company was losing from the saloon.

In the West Virginia fight which resulted in 100,000 majority for prohibition, the Lumberman's Association gave $10,000 to the Anti-Saloon League because of the damage that liquor was to their business. The mine owners gave liberally because they found that it was not safe for a drunken miner to go into their mines. His carelessness might kill 200 men and destroy half a million dollars. The railroad companies and all the great corporations except those engaged in manufacturing something connected with the liquor business, felt the same way. To a certain extent, these were proper considerations but they were not the highest motives. On this Sunday afternoon he preferred not to trouble his audience with replies to Dr. McGuire, to Mr. Cabell and to the Methodist Steward, imported from Alabama, to curse the Anti-Saloon League, but he wanted to take a text from Phillipians II, verse 4, which reads, "Look not every man on his own things but every man also on the things of others."

Judge Richardson said recently in Richmond when applications for license came before him, "Nobody in Richmond can sell whiskey until Virginia sells him a license." This makes every voter in Virginia a partner in the liquor traffic. It is not the city of Richmond that licenses the saloon in Richmond. The license money is paid to the state and the aggregate of license money received is approximated at $550,000. This is a tremendous sum of money. Five hundred and fifty thousand dollars, about 25 cents for every man, woman and child in Virginia.

Now, today we are told on divine authority it is our duty to every man to look on the things of others. Every one of our fellow citizens gets 25 cents out of the saloon. This we must admit. But let us look on the other side of the ledger.

The speaker then gave the criminal expenses caused by the saloon, the cost of those who had been made insane, and the cost of the pauperism caused by drink. These items footed up one million and three thousand dollars. To be exact, the state had to appropriate $454,000 to pay these bills, in addition to the sums received from the 800 men who had paid us for the privilege.

But the money paid out annually to support the penitentiary, the jails, the insane asylums and the poor houses is the smallest part of the cost of the saloon to the people of Virginia. The degradation of our men, the shame brought on our women and the sufferings of innocent childhood must be considered. The speaker gave an instance from his own experience.

On a stormy day in the mountains he found by the roadside in a fence corner three small children driven out of their cabin home by a drunken brute of a father. This was only one of countless instances that have been continually thrust on our attention of the ruins that have been brought on our fellowmen by the curse of drink.

Mr. McAllister mentioned as an encouraging sign the attitude toward the traffic of European governments, Norway, Sweden, Prussia, Germany and even France. He recounted the recent change in the Southern states, and the drift toward Nation-Wide Prohibition. Of all the people of our land, the Southern people have no cause to love the Internal Revenue Tax. It was a war tax levied for the very purpose of whipping the South. Abraham Lincoln hesitated for six weeks before he reluctantly signed the bill. He said he foresaw that the next great contest would be to free the country from the evils of drink. The statesmen of the day promised to do away with the Internal Revenue System as soon as peace should come.

This is our chance in Virginia to free ourselves from the saloon. If we fail now, the opportunity may never come again in our time. We must not only have a majority, but a large majority. If we get 8,000 or 10,000, the liquor men will be encouraged to try it again. If they are buried under 50,000 majority, the verdict must be accepted as conclusive. Therefore, let every one work and pray and bring out the votes. Every one must vote for whiskey or against it.

In the course of his sermon, he referred to the stock argument, "Prohibition doesn't prohibit." He said that 4,000 years ago God proclaimed amid the thunders and lightnings of Mount Sinai, prohibitions against murder and theft and other crimes. None of these prohibitions have prohibited. Nevertheless, the laws of God and man have continued to say, and will continue to say, "Thou shalt not" until righteousness shall cover the land as the waters cover the sea.

Mr. Eagle closed the meeting by a short prayer and by asking every voter to get down on his knees before God and ask him how to vote September 22. Cast a vote for your own children and your neighbor's children, a vote you will not regret on your dying bed.

The audience then sang "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus" and went to their homes.

Dr. McAllister also spoke at Antioch church at 11 a. m., and at the Haymarket Parish House at 8 p. m. on Sunday.

Your Tax Burdens Will Be Made Heavier by State-Wide Prohibition

No voter should be deluded into the belief that State-wide prohibition can be adopted in Virginia without an increase of taxation, if the various departments of the State government are maintained as they are at present. It may be added that the people of Virginia will not permit any damage to the various State institutions, but that on the other hand, they will demand and expect of their public officials such improvements as a great and growing Commonwealth needs. Hence, if State-wide prohibition is voted on the people of the State, in a movement of hysteria, taxes must necessarily be increased to cover the amount of money that the licensed liquor traffic is now paying into the treasury. The adoption of State-wide prohibition will strip the treasury of every dollar that is now being paid into it by the licensed traffic. It will also take away from the licensed cities what they are now collecting from the same source.

We can very readily ascertain the amount of money that the licensed liquor traffic is paying into the treasury of Virginia. In round numbers it is $750,000 a year. If we get the total amount that the traffic is paying into the cities of the State, the records of all of them will have to be searched. That it is considerable is evidenced by the fact that a number of "wet" municipalities are already hunting around for places to increase taxation if the State-widers win in September.

Every time a State-wide prohibitionist is asked what is to be done about money to make up these deficits if his side of the contest wins, he replies that the amounts will be saved by a decrease in criminal costs. He argues that State-wide prohibition will decrease crime in Virginia and, therefore, reduce the sum that the State and cities pay for prosecuting criminals and policing their territory. And, he thinks, doubtless, that the people will believe him. He assumes, of course, that nobody is going to doubt his statement that State-wide prohibition decreases crime and lessens the item of criminal costs.

But the experience of sister States that have tried State-wide prohibition is fatal to his argument. North Carolina and Tennessee are giving State-wide prohibition a trial, and crime has increased in both States. Official records show this to be a fact. In North Carolina it has been necessary to establish a lot of new courts to try criminal cases that State-wide prohibition has created. Petty crime has steadily increased in that State under prohibition, and there has been a large increase, consequently, in the cost of prosecuting criminals. Failing to secure any reductions in this direction, North Carolina has been borrowing money and increasing taxes to make up the deficits. The next Legislature of that State will face a deficit in State revenues of more than $1,000,000.

The cost of prosecutions in Tennessee has steadily increased under State-wide prohibition. In 1907, the last year of license in Tennessee, the State paid out $145,973.73 on account of criminal costs. In 1913 it cost Tennessee about $175,000 to prosecute her criminals. Here is an increase of about $30,000. The amount has shown an increase every year under State-wide prohibition. Alabama had the same experience during her brief trial of prohibition, and took the wise course at once to repeal the law.

Virginia cannot hope to have any other experience if State-wide prohibition is adopted. Instead of reducing the cost of criminal prosecutions, the proposed change will increase it. The only recourse left, in the event the State-widers are successful, is an increase of the tax rate or the valuation of landed property. It matters nothing as to which course the State may pursue—the result is the same. An increase of the tax burden! Assessors will go out among the farmers of the State and increase the valuations of farms. City property will also be increased in the same way. In many of the North Carolina cities both the assessed value of property and the tax rate have been increased, thereby doubling the tax burden. All of the money the State will lose by State-wide prohibition is absolutely necessary to defray the cost of government. Virginia is not a wasteful, extravagant State. Expenses of government cannot be reduced to any considerable extent, and the prohibition leaders know it. Yet they would have the people vote upon themselves this additional burden for no other purpose than the gratification of the fanatical desires of the State-widers.

These so-called reformers know also that no prohibition State has shown a decrease in crime, in criminal costs, but at the same time they go upon the hustings with that stupid falsehood on their lips—that all the money lost to the public treasuries by State-wide prohibition will be made up in the criminal cost item. No State has had that experience. However, the State-widers are trying to delude the people into the belief that their brand of prohibition saves criminal costs.

The people of Virginia may as well make up their minds now for a heavy increase of taxation if by chance State-wide prohibition is adopted. Nothing could possibly be more certain in human affairs than more taxes. The land owner will bear the burden, and it is for him to decide if he wants it.—ADVERTISEMENT.

A LARGE AND BEAUTIFUL OLIVE BRANCH

Mr. Roosevelt is playing "smart" politics in New York, but isn't his game just a little to obviously smart? His willingness to offer up the progressive party on the altar of non-partisan government in New York is calculated to arouse suspicion in the minds of the cynical. Asked whether he would support a progressive of high character, if such a candidate came forward in the primaries, or Senator Hinman, the republican, Mr. Roosevelt said he would vote for Mr. Hinman. Why this sudden attitude of the noble Roman father sacrificing his favorite child to save his state from political despotism? Is the new crusade against Barnes and Murphy more important than the crusade against democratic and republican wickedness in the high places of the nation? Has a small part become greater than the whole? Is Armageddon to be postponed while Mr. Roosevelt dislodges such minor bandits as the machine leaders in New York? Or is this simply a skillful way of encouraging amalgamation of the progressive and republican forces, and preparing for the restoration of national harmony in the G. O. P. before the presidential election of 1916? This is a cruelly suspicious world, and there will be people who will not hesitate to accuse Mr. Roosevelt of being more interested in getting the republicans behind Boss Teddy in 1916 than in overthrowing Boss Barnes and Boss Murphy in 1914. — Baltimore Sun.

OUR MILITARY AIRPLANES

Last Tuesday the anniversary of the fall of the Bastille was celebrated in Paris with elaborate ceremonies, a great military review and general public festivities. One of the features of the program was the flight of twenty military airplanes over the Longchamps race course, the machines flying in columns of four. Other military airplanes, to the estimated number of 400, were in flight in various parts of France during the day.

If all the army and navy airplanes of the United States had been assembled at Washington the 4th of July to give a spectacular demonstration of the progress of this country in the field of military aviation, it would have been possible to produce just twenty-seven, which would have made a rather impressive flight. But there would have been none others for flights elsewhere. There are now on hand twelve naval machines, with four to be delivered. The army has fifteen machines now on hand, with four to be delivered, while an additional fifteen have been authorized. Thus when all the machines have been obtained the naval fleet will consist of sixteen and the army fleet of thirty-four, or fifty in all. France has 500 military airplanes and 500 additional civilian machines subject to call, twenty times as many as this country.

The United States is lamentably deficient in this respect. It was the scene of the first successful heavier-than-air flights. Americans were the pioneer developers of the airplane. It is unfortunate that with this record of pre-eminence in the field of aviation America should be virtually at the end of the procession in the practical application of the airplane for both commercial and military purposes. Recent opinions have been expressed by military and naval experts to the effect that the airplane and the submarine are certain to be the dominating factors in future warfare. In respect to the former, at least, this country is lagging seriously behind the procession. It may be possible in a hurry to build airplanes for military purposes, but it is not possible to train the men necessary to pilot them with equal speed. In order to develop a trustworthy, expert corps of aviators, the army and the navy must have large fleets of machines. — Washington Star.

NAVAL DESERTERS

The Secretary of the Navy, who has in the last sixteen months effected more changes in the naval organization than any of his predecessors in twice that length of time, has now issued an order which will change the fundamental practice of naval discipline of more than a century. Hereafter the only penalty for desertion will be the writing against the deserter's name of a "dishonorable discharge." He will not be pursued, or, if caught accidentally, will not be imprisoned. If so caught, or if he returns voluntarily, he can re-enlist on probation if he has a record of only one desertion, but if he deserts a second time he will be permanently enrolled as discharged without honor. The theory is that with the possibility of imprisonment removed men will not be so anxious to desert as they are now. As a further incentive to keep the men in the service, they are to be permitted, if dissatisfied, to buy their discharge.

The practical working of this new system will be watched with interest. As to the buying of discharges, there can be no question on the score of fairness and effectiveness in maintaining a desirable spirit of satisfaction. But to abolish all penalties for desertion means practically to put a premium on the taking of "French leave." There is practically nothing in the new system to hold a man to his ship. In effect, this latest order means that the vessels of the United States Navy will be manned only by men who are in every respect content, an ideal condition unmistakably, but one that in practice will be very difficult to attain. — Washington Star.

THE PANAMA CANAL AND VIRGINIA

The most interesting part of the report of Collector of Customs Hamilton is not that showing a million and a half dollars collected in customs duties; nor that showing the increase in the exports and imports through the port of Norfolk; nor yet that showing the large amount of customs duties collected by the Richmond office. It is the belief expressed by the collector that a "revival of the export business all along the line" is imminent, and that "the opening of the Panama Canal will increase greater than ever the volume of exports and imports" through Virginia ports. Collector Hamilton's estimate of collections of $2,000,000 in duties during the next year is a conservative one, as $1,500,000 was collected during the fiscal year ending June, 1914, and an additional $500,000 is almost certain with the Panama Canal in operation during the closing months of the current fiscal year. What the opening of that canal means to Virginia is yet to be seen, but that it means a great deal to the cities of Tidewater Virginia and incidentally to the whole State cannot be questioned. That coming boom of which President Wilson and many big business men have spoken will not leave Virginia off its itinerary. — Times-Dispatch.

DAY OF RECKONING GENERALLY COMES

Serbia shows so much willingness to meet all of Austria's demands, except on one point, that it seems incredible that the latter should insist on war, unless she is determined to utilize the occasion to seize additional territory and to break down the growth of a power which she regards as a menace to her ascendancy. If this is the motive behind her ultimatum, it will be clearly developed in a very short time. It is possible that Europe may permit her to wage an unjustifiable war against a smaller power and to enlarge her boundaries at its expense, as she did unrebuked with regard to Bosnia and Herzegovina. Such a way will do her any good in the end. A day of reckoning comes for all such acts of spoliation, and it may come sooner in Austria's case than sometimes happens. — Baltimore Evening Sun.

A BIG MISTAKE

"The prettiest girl in the world has just landed in New York," says the New York World. Reading this and feeling hurt that she should leave Richmond without telling us good-bye, we called up her house and found that she was still in town. Somebody imposed on the World. — Times-Dispatch.

You are both mistaken, for she has been in Kenbridge all summer. — Free State News.

DEEDS, NOT WORDS

Manassas People Have Absolute Proof of Deeds at Home.

It's not words but deeds that prove true merit. The deeds of Doan's Kidney Pills, for Manassas kidney sufferers, have made their local reputation. Proof lies in the testimony of Manassas people.

Mrs. S. W. Cookley, Center St., Manassas, Va., says: "I was in poor health, brought about by chills and fevers. The trouble seemed to affect my kidneys. Not a day passed without a severe attack of backache and pain across my hips. I was often unfit for work. My kidneys were acted irregularly and I had other symptoms of kidney complaint. I used two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and they removed the trouble. It has never returned."

The above statement must carry conviction to the mind of every reader. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mrs. Cookley had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores. BRICKS FROM OCCOQUAN

Teams Began Hauling from Wharf to Clifton Street Site Wednesday.

For convenience in handling the great quantities of bricks that are being brought to Washington from the Occoquan workhouse kilns and unloaded at the 10th street storage wharf of the District, the wharf has recently been equipped with a conveyor by which the bricks are moved on a series of rollers from the wharf to the storage yard a distance of about 200 feet, without having to be handled.

Monday there were stored on the wharf 750,000 bricks, but this is less than a quarter of the total number that the District brickmaking plant will turn out for the new school building.

It is stated that the quality of the bricks made at the workhouse is good, but only rough brief for interior walls are now being turned out.—Washington Star.

YOU CAN SHARE IN THE GREAT SAVING ON Commercial Fertilizers By The Use Of CRIMSON CLOVER. A bushel of Crimson Clover Seed sown on four acres of ground will increase the succeeding yield of Corn or Cotton about the same amount as would a ton of complete fertilizer applied at the rate of 200 lbs. per acre. A good stand of Crimson Clover turned under will ordinarily double the yield of the crops which follow. The physical condition of the soil is thereby materially benefited. The quality of the soil is increased in Humus and Nitrogen Content. The soil heavy clay soils are rendered more open and friable. Crimson Clover makes an excellent grazing crop, hay, ensilage and pasture for all classes of live stock. Much cows make considerably more milk when pastured on Crimson Clover. It is also valuable as a honey plant, furnishing an abundant supply of nectar in the spring. It is especially valuable in Orchards where it is generally plowed under as a green manure crop. The plants retain for the use of the trees the winter season much of the plant food which would otherwise leach out of the ground during the winter and early spring. A good stand of Crimson Clover not only reduces the erosion and the gullying of the fields, but on sandy soils the blowing of the soil by the wind is greatly lessened. The plants also serve to hold the snow to a great extent during the winter, thus insulating the soil. More and more each year farmers are realizing the importance and great value of Crimson Clover. THE KITCHEN CABINET

THE merit of originality is not novelty; it is sincerity. The believing man is the original man; he believes for himself, not for another.

—Carlyle.

GOOD, HOMELY, MEAT DISHES.

Buy a piece of round from the under half, as it is a bit cheaper and not so tender. For one pound of the steak chopped fine, add a teaspoon and a half of salt, a quarter of a teaspoon of pepper, one small onion chopped; mix well and make into flat cakes. Place on a wooden wire broiler and cook over red coals, turning every eight counts until well seared over. Then cook more slowly until sufficiently cooked for the family taste.

Scotch Stew—Take four pounds of mutton from the fore quarter, one onion, one turnip, one carrot, one-half cup of barley, two stalks of celery, one tablespoonful of flour, salt and pepper to taste. Soak the barley overnight, cut the meat into small pieces, put into a kettle with the barley, add two cups of boiling water, reduce the heat and simmer until the meat is tender. Chop the vegetables, and cook five minutes in a little fat; add to the meat and cook until tender.

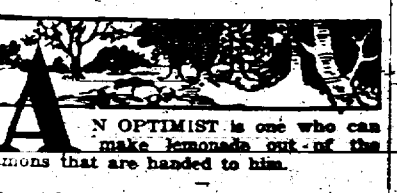

Stuffed Heart Baked—One calf's heart, one bay leaf, two stalks of celery, one-half a small red pepper and one cup of seasoned bread crumbs for stuffing. Trim the heart, soak in salted water for a few minutes to draw out any blood. Place in a sauce pan and add the vegetables and seasonings. Then add boiling water to barely cover. Bring to the boiling point and simmer at very low temperature until the heart is tender. Remove the heart, and when cool enough fill with the stuffing. Place in a kettle and add one cup of stock from the kettle; which well heated through, just with flour and brown in the oven. Serve with a mound of rice or mashed potatoes.

Beef Goulash—Take two pounds of lean beef cut into inch squares. Three large onions sliced, two tablespoonfuls of fat, one cup of chopped cabbage, eight small potatoes, two teaspoonfuls of salt, one-half teaspoon of paprika, one cup of boiling water and half a cup of milk. When the meat is brown in the hot fat, remove from the fat and add the vegetables; fry for five minutes, then add the water and seasonings. The potatoes are best added later, as they cook sooner than the cabbage. When all are tender, add the milk. Roll up and serve at once.

Occasionally a man doesn't show bad taste in dressing because he can't afford it.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

AN OPTIMIST is one who can make lemonade out of the lemons that are handed to him.

The richest man, whatever his lot, is he whose contentment makes him rich.

COLLECTION OF DONT'S.

Don't lay a greasy spoon or fork on the stove or table; it makes a mark and a small tray or plate will hold a number of things and save the table or stove.

Don't pour boiling water over china or glass; it may not crack at the time, but it will drop off when least expected.

Don't blot a stain while hot or don't blot it at all. Simply wipe it off with a damp and slightly greasy cloth and it will look and keep much better.

Don't put damp clothes in the hamper or clothes chute. They will mildew very quickly in warm weather or in a heated house.

Don't use a good knife or spoon about the stove for cooking, for a ten-cent one will answer every purpose.

Don't pour boiling water on grease spots. Mop up the spots well first with cold water and a bit of soda. Dish towels which are greasy should be treated in this way to keep them clean.

Don't allow soap to remain in tub, pail or dish pan of hot water to waste. Don't put soiled materials on a hot stove to dry. Don't put tin dishes into greasy water. It spoils their brightness.

Don't put linen soiled with fruit stains into hot soap suds. It fixes the stain. Put all stains in cold water first. If obstinate use a little oxalic acid and see that they are well rinsed afterwards.

Don't salt meat before cooking. Walk until it is well seared over so that the flavor will be retained.

Don't use steel knives or forks on fish, as the steel gives an unpleasant flavor to fish.

Jack of Diamonds

At Times the Hand Is Quicker Than the Eye

By MARVIN DANA

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

It happened more than a score of years ago. The golden spike had just been driven at Portland, Ore.—that last spike of the Northern Pacific railroad by which the continent was spanned.

Helena, Mont., was in the heyday of its gayety, and the young men of the town were in the habit of playing cards in the back room of the completed railroad. The crowd thickened in its streets. All had money; all were anxious to spend it. The ugly main street was two lines of saloons, dance halls, gambling halls, all open, all crowded from dawn to dusk.

Of the several busy ministers of fortune then and there present, Railroad Jim was the best. He ran a little game of three card monte in a back room of the Montana Parlor, by which name was glorified one of the smallest and worst saloons in the town.

He was busy indeed, for custom was brisk, and he had no assistant. An assistant, to have been anything but a costly luxury, must have had fingers as agile as Jim's own, in their peculiar way. Such a one was not to be had very readily. The last had been shot by an indignant victim. In Railroad Jim's opinion, the man had deserved his fate, for he had been culpably careless, almost awkward, and had thus invited his doom.

So now, perforce, Jim toiled indelibly. When he slept was a mystery beyond any man's solving. His meals were sandwiches, swallowed during the progress of the game. His sole drink was coffee.

Of course such labor deserved a reward, and equally of course Railroad Jim had it. A steady stream of men strolled from the saloon into the back room and anon slouched out again, much poorer and not a whit the wiser for their experience.

But there were no complaints—except against the goddess of fortune, who, in truth, was most ingenuously and vigorously cursed. For, while the losers reviled their own bad judgment or ill luck, they candidly admired Jim for the dexterity with which he deflected them. For he won honestly—he ran a "square game," trusting to the artfulness of his ten fingers for his livelihood.

All who gambled there knew that Jim was honest, because he held the game down to a limit. Any one can see that had he cheated, the limit would have been a palpable absurdity. No man would refuse to take all he could get on a certainty.

But Jim, aware that a sufficiently acute observer might sometimes pick the right card, refused to accept any single bet of more than $200. To be sure, no one had as yet offered to bet so large an amount on one throw of the cards, but that fact had no influence on public opinion.

Jim was a large man, with a large nose, a large chin, a lofty bald skull and bulging, glassy eyes. He was not at all pretty, but very imposing. He had big hands, too—hands that were like brooding wings over the three cards with which he toyed so coolly and steadily.

It was really an edifying spectacle to behold those hands as they manipulated the three cards—the ten of spades, the ten of clubs, the jack of diamonds. The cards seemed never quite to disappear from view. Moreover, the movement was rather slow than hurried.

The faces of the cards were first exhibited, two in the right hand, one in the left. Then they were held back up and deposited softly, one by one, on the table. All one need do was to keep an eye persistently on the jack of diamonds—to watch it unwinkingly till it was at last put down. Then it only remained to place the bet and finally to turn over the card selected.

Unfortunately for the crowd, this card was rarely the jack. The unhappy losers shook their heads and ruefully admitted that Railroad Jim was "a cunning slick as with th' pasteboards."

Among many others, Old Ike was one who had been in Helena just a week, and already he was a familiar figure in the various resorts. He was a man of about sixty, short, thin, clean-shaven, bright eyed, taciturn.

He drank a moderate amount of whisky without going on the rampage and he gambled here and there, always in moderation. Every night he dropped in at the Montana Parlor and regularly made two fifty-dollar bets with Railroad Jim. In his fourteen efforts he had lost precisely $700.

However, he took his losses calmly and remarked each night that he guessed he could afford it, whereby all his hearers knew him to be a man of wealth.

On the eighth night of his stay in Helena Old Ike got drunk. He visited every bar in the place and drank at each with democratic impartiality. Anon he varied this pursuit by a mild effort to beat a faro game, in which he failed ignominiously.

It was near midnight when he staggered into the Montana Parlor and inhaled every man there present to the bar. Having drunk, Old Ike announced to all and sundry that he purposed "buckin' ag'in" Railroad Jim's monte game.

In the back room the crowd made way for him, and he stationed himself directly opposite the manipulator of the cards. With garrulous comments he made his usual two bets and lost. Every moment the effects of drink showed more plainly in his flushed cheeks and thickened speech.

Then suddenly, just after the big hands with the agile fingers had swept in the second $50, Old Ike became foolish.

"Is th' limit off?" he demanded and stared at Railroad Jim with bloodshot eyes.

Jim's orbs returned the old man's gaze without apparent emotion.

"Tain't reglar," he replied lifelessly.

Old Ike banged his hand victoriously on the table.

"Th' limit's off," he demanded and stared at Railroad Jim with bloodshot eyes.

Railroad Jim ran a wary eye over the company before he answered, then: "All right, unless any gent objects," he declared coldly.

"Any ornery cuss as wants ter object 'd better say so ter me," the old man spluttered, glaring about. And to Jim: "Th' limit's off, huh? Be I right?"

"Th' limit's off," Railroad Jim agreed.

Old Ike drew forth a battered pocketbook and laid it before him on the table, one hand still clutching it.

"Throw yer keerds," he commanded.

Railroad Jim obediently displayed the three cards to the company and to the old man. All could see them distinctly, the ten of spades, the ten of clubs, the jack of diamonds. The thrower passed them back and forth gently, slowly, then dropped them delicately one by one on the table.

"I'll bet my dila I pick th' jack," Old Ike declared.

"How much?" Railroad Jim asked.

His voice was colorless still, but a fleck of red burnt in either cheek.

"Just a plum, $4,000!"

Ike opened the pocketbook and displayed a thick roll of bills. Twice he counted them. There were tens, twenties, fifties, hundreds. The total was an even $4,000. He laid the money in a neat pile on the table midway between himself and the three cards.

"Match it," he commanded tersely.

Railroad Jim produced his pocketbook in turn and counted out an equal sum in bills of large denomination, fresh from the bank, his profits of two weeks. This money lay on his side of the table. Between the two heaps of bills the three cards waited silently, arbiters of fortune.

Suddenly something happened—a swift movement, a flash, a thud. A bowie knife stood quivering in the table, its polished steel a shaking flame. The bowie's point was buried deep in the table top, and it pierced and held fast in its place the center card of the three.

Old Ike's spectacular deed wrought stood back a little and laughed aloud. The tension of the startled crowd relaxed somewhat. They had expected a robbery, a murder. They leaned forward in breathless attention.

"That's my keerd," the old man cried triumphantly. His right hand was at his hip; his left pushed his stack of bills up against the center card. "That's my keerd," he repeated defiantly. "My $4,000 is bet on jest that same particular keerd. And it's there—win!"

Railroad Jim had neither moved nor spoken. Now the eyes of the two men met and locked for a long half minute, and neither finched in his stare.

But at last Old Ike sprang forth his left hand, and now he turned over the card on the right. It was the ten of spades.

"A moment more of pause, then he turned over the card on the left. It was the ten of clubs. The third card remained face downward pinned to the table by the bowie's blade.

Once more Old Ike raised his eyes to those of Railroad Jim.

"De I win?" he asked triumphantly. And again he laughed.

The monte dealer thrust his pile of banknotes toward the old man. He displayed no emotion, but the fleck of color in his cheeks burned brighter than before.

"Excuse me a minute, gent," he remarked in his cold tones. "I must get some more money 'n go on with." With that he left the room by a back door.

Old Ike put away the $4,000 without undue haste, chuckling softly. This done, he pulled the bowie knife from the table. As the blade left the wood the card was loosened and fell on the table face up. It was the ten of clubs.

A gasp of amazement went up from the crowd. The three cards now lay plainly revealed to all—the ten of spades, the ten of clubs, the jack of diamonds.

A chorus of exclamations broke forth. The old man looked at the excited crowd and, raised his head for a moment.

"Where's th' jack o' diamonds?" he repeated conspicuously in answer to the burden of the cries. "Why, Railroad Jim stole th' jack reglar. He never let it on to th' table when they was any money with white. Kep't that other ten o' clubs out o' sight he hid it when he showed th' keerds then flipped the jack into his sleeve with them long fingers o' his'n."

"But I got over th' little game. An he didn't dot let me turn up that other ten o' clubs. He'd rather pay. He knew well yew'd string him up in stunner. He—"

But Old Ike's voice was lost among the shouts and curses.

The crowd rushed forth to wreak vengeance on the man who had so deftly deceived them. They were to learn, Helena knew Railroad Jim as more.

He followed the crowd, sober.

SECOND. All water will be furnished by meter measurement, at the rate hereinafter scheduled, and all water passing through any meter shall be paid for according to meter reading at the rate specified whether used or wasted.

THIRD. That each meter is the property of the Town and at all times subject to its control and inspection, and where any meter is located on or within any private property, building or premises, the Town shall have the right to enter the same at all reasonable hours for the purpose of examining, repairing, replacing, or removing said meter or to take meter readings.

FOURTH. That any meter injured from hot water backing from heaters, or from cause directly, or indirectly, attributable to the owner or occupants, will be renewed or repaired by the Town at the expense of the said owner or occupant.

FIFTH. That where water is supplied to more than one owner, family or occupant, through a single service pipe on which there is a meter, the Town will not undertake to apportion the charges for such water among the several owners, occupants or families, but the bill for such use of water shall be a charge against the owner through whose premises said service pipe first passed, and in such case each separate owner, occupant or family shall be subject to the minimum charge hereinafter specified.

SIXTH. That if at any time a meter shall be found to have been tampered with, or for any reason shall fail to register, or shall be found defective in registering since the last previous reading, the water consumption for such period may be estimated by an average of previous readings through the same, or from future readings, or from similar connections.

SEVENTH. All bills for the use of water shall be a charge against the owner or owners of the property served with water, whether occupied by such owner or not.

EIGHTH. No rebate or discount shall be allowed upon any bill by reason of property becoming vacant, unless the occupant of said property shall give written notice thereof to the Superintendent ten (10) days previous to same becoming vacant.

NINTH. Minimum charge to house-holder, $6.00 a year. Entitles consumer to use 6,000 gallons per quarter. Charge of twenty-five (25) cents per 1,000 gallons thereon up to 25,000 gallons per quarter. Next 25,000 per quarter shall be paid for at rate of twenty (20) cents. Next 25,000 at rate of fifteen (15) cents. Quarterly accounts will be due on January 1st, April 1st, July 1st and October 1st.

TENTH. Bills shall be paid quarterly at the office of the Town Treasurer, on or before the 10th day of the month following the service. A failure to pay to the Treasurer the water service, and Town, by its agent, will turn off the water, detach its connection, or, at its option, enforce payment with an additional charge of fifty (50) cents upon the amount of the bill so delinquent. An extra charge of fifty (50) cents will be made for turning water on after it has been turned off for cause. The minimum charge shall be paid in advance.

Fifteen (15) days before the water rent shall be payable, the Superintendent shall furnish the Treasurer of the Town with a correct list of all persons to whom water is supplied, and the sum payable by each for water rent; and he shall file with the Clerk of the Council a receipt of the Treasurer, showing the aggregate of said water rents. The Treasurer shall keep an account thereof in his office, and shall have bills made out for the same, showing the amount due and the amount which will be due.

When water is cut off for non-payment a fee of fifty (50) cents shall be paid to the Town Treasurer before a supply is turned on again.

Anyone who shall turn Town water into and upon any premises or tenement, without authority of the Superintendent, shall be liable to a fine of not less than five ($5.00) dollars nor more than ten ($10.00) dollars.

ELECTRIC LIGHT ORDINANCES

SECTION 1. When formal permit has been granted a property owner for connection to and use of the Electric Lighting System, then the Superintendent shall make, or cause to be made, by an experienced electrician, all necessary connections and wiring, at the expense of the Town, as follows:

All house connections are to be made from the secondary taps of pole transformers, or from secondary circuit wires strung along the street.

The secondary circuits are designed not to carry over 220 volts and all house connections to be covered with triple braided water-proof insulation.

All connections and house wiring must be of ample size for the service to be rendered, using for connections not less than No. 10 insulated copper wire.

All wiring, both outside and inside the house, shall fully meet, in material and workmanship, all the requirements of South-Eastern Tariff Association, indicated in the Underwriters Regulations for Electric Wiring.

The connecting wires are to be extended from the street pole across the premises of the applicant to a meter placed preferably on the outside of the building where it can be conveniently read each month.

The meter is furnished by and is to remain the property of the Town, and the Superintendent, or his authorized assistants, must be accorded the right to enter the premises of the consumer at all reasonable hours for the purpose of reading, repairing or replacing said meter, or to cut off the current for any cause.

Whether the meter is located on the outside or inside of the building, it shall always be accessible to the Superintendent.

The meter is to be provided with one two-pole, single throw, cut off switch, by which the entire current may be cut off from the building.

The owner will also be required to place a fuse box where the wires enter the building and also provide one two-pole, single throw switch, so that the current may be cut off without disturbing the meter and box which is the property of the Town.

SEC. 2. All payments for use or consumption of electric current are to be made in accordance with the regulations of the meters as read and reported by the Superintendent of Public Works regardless of the fact that the current may be used or wasted after passing the Town's meter.

SEC. 3. Bills for the use or consumption of electric current are payable at the office of the Town Treasurer on the first of each month and according to the following table of rates: Any consumer failing to pay said bill promptly and remaining delinquent for ten (10) days shall be subject to a penalty of fifty (50) cents and having the electric current cut off until said penalty, in addition to the bill rendered, is paid to the Town Treasurer.

ELECTRIC METER RATES

SECTION 1. A minimum charge of one ($1.00) dollar per month will be made for all parties connected with the Electric Lighting System whether the current is actually used or not.

SEC. 2. The charge for the use, or consumption of electric current will be at the rate of ten (10) cents per Kilowatt hour, as registered by the Town's meter; said rate to be for current consumed up to 60,000 K. W. per year.

SEC. 3. Where the use or consumption of electric current amounts to more than 60,000 K. W. per year, the rate charged shall be eight (8) cents per Kilowatt hour, as registered by the Town's meters.

SEC. 4. A rebate shall be allowed to all consumers who have used more than 60,000 K. W. per year, the dues being then calculated upon a basis of eight (8) cents instead of ten (10) cents per Kilowatt hour.

Fatty's Touchdown

Being a Truthful Chronicle of a College Football Game

By JACK BRANT

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Every now and then you hear a would be sport telling you that such and such a college has been showing up pretty well in football has a "one man team."

In a literal sense this is not. You can't have a one man football team any more than you can have a one man crew or a one girl chorus.

Now and then you go to a football game and find one man doing all the kicking and most of the ground gaining and jolting the teeth out of everything that comes his way, and you get of late sight of the less spectacular efforts of the other ten.

Now, right here, as a humble member of the "other ten," I want to point out what a mistake you are apt to make.

I remember when Fatty got off the train. Tom Burns and I had gone to the station to inspect the incoming carloads of freshmen, hoping to find some big men for the team.

And we found one! Light out of the car in front of us wedged the very thing we were praying for—one of those human beings who ought to have been built in sections for convenience in moving into small houses with narrow doors and stairways.

When he stepped off the car you could feel it rock back into place.

Fatty's father followed Fatty, a genial old gentleman built on the same generous plan.

They talked one of our ancient and time honored books, and father got in first, and son followed.

Then that ancient hack did, burst asunder, and father followed son through to the ground.

Arrived at the ground the father sat there patiently waiting for help. He was older than the son and more accustomed to these accidents.

The son remained there not at all. He bounced up with surprising suddenness, and his hand sought the region of his hip-pocket.

The board that he had sat down on had a nail in it.

In due time we called on Fatty. Thomas Anderson Little was his name, with the perversity of names.

We found him surveying the wreck of a new armchair from the security of the concrete window seat.

"Fatty," said Tom by way of beginning, "it's 3:10 isn't it?"

"Three hundred and fourteen," mourned Fatty, still looking at the ruins of his chair. "That's the third that's broke, and I'm on an allowance." We stayed half an hour and sowed the seeds of a mighty ambition. And the next afternoon Fatty rolled down to practice.

We analyzed the situation and decided to give him a suit. It was hopeless. So we had to give it up, and got two tailors to come down and take his measurements and laid him off for ten days while his suit was being built.

When at last he was able to appear on the field before mixed company he turned out to be everything in the football line that we could have hoped.

He wasn't what you might call speedy, but after he got started he was like one of those old ferryboats with side paddles, the kind that plow along through almost any thickness of water, and the only way to keep them from breaking down the whole river bank is to reverse the engines.

He played all through the game the next Saturday and all through every game that followed, which was something no one else on the team was allowed to do. He never got crippled.

on the defense. It was like rolling up a heavy work and carelessly throwing it behind him.

A tandem formation coming through guard had about as much chance of pushing him out of the way or getting over him as if they'd jumped up against Bunker Hill monument. The only thing to do was to try to go round.

He was equally valuable on the offense when he was fresh.

We used to give him the ball on a guard back play and start him through the line with half the team pushing from behind, being careful to push high, so that he wouldn't come toppling back on to us.

That's where most of the other teams made a mistake. They would tackle low, and, not having arms long enough to get hold of both legs at once, Fatty could drag 'em if we behind kept the momentum of his upper weight going. And when at last he would go down he was always fell forward, which not only gained a couple of yards, but was apt to flatten out one or two of the opposing team.

We had a pretty successful season, beating all the colleges that were anywhere near our size and handing surprises to some of the biggest, and we were looking forward to a walkover in our final game with Kenyon, which is the main rival of Buckeye, when we got a surprise.

News came through one of our scouts that Kenyon had a guard as big, if not bigger, than Fatty. And, although he had just entered college, he was in good standing and intended to stay longer than through the football season, which facts we took the trouble to prove. The betting dropped from 5 to 3 on us to even money.

Here I've got to admit that since last season, when a certain co-ed had helped us put Billy Gordon into shape for the final game and married him afterward, I'd got to know a Miss Daisy Wood of the girls' dormitory and had formed the habit of calling on her at irregular intervals.

And the evening that we heard the alarming news from the Kenyon camp it occurred to me that a call on Miss Wood would be the most cheering thing I could do. So I called.

She was mighty interested in football, and as I wasn't thinking much else about that time it was football we talked about. And Fatty being more on my mind than any other feature of the game, we talked about Fatty.

"That's where Miss Wood can't be beat. If there's anything you want to talk about she not only gives you a chance, but lends you 'em to bring it out."

I told her how we'd met Fatty at the station and how he and his pa had broken the back and the way Fatty jumped when he sat on the nail. And I told her what the scout had told me about the big fellow at Kenyon, who had just about the same kind of build as Fatty, and played just the same kind of football.

"The chances are," said I, "that those two prize babies will neutralize each other, which leaves us about even, with perhaps a shade of advantage for Kenyon. We've been depending on our fat boy so long that we'll sort of be lost without him."

"Don't you think that Fatty, with his experience, will put it all over the other fellow?" she asked.

"I doubt it," said I. "You see, Fatty is too slow. If he could get the jump on this other wonder there might be a chance. But there doesn't seem to be any jump in Fatty."

"It's a pity," said Miss Wood, gazing dreamily at the ceiling, "after what happened when the back broke that some one couldn't be behind Fatty at the right moment with a board with a nail in it."

For a moment I couldn't say anything for thinking of the possibility that this remark opened. Then I shook Miss Wood's hand in a manner that I had to apologize for later on.

"Daisy," said I, "you are a peach! You've got more brains than all the faculty put together. You ought to come out to the field every afternoon and give Tom Burns points on coaching. And if the game with Kenyon is going to be as close as I think you may be able to say that you were the one that won it."

And when I went home I wondered why I hadn't thought of her idea myself.

I've got a roommate named Spud Coker who is nice and responsible in most things, but who has a curious hankering for antiques.

Consequently the walls of our room are hung with tapestry and ancient weapons and bits of armor and plumes and things you can hardly see the paper. And in among them I found a spur that was just the thing I was looking for.

The spur was very old and had a worn it when he crossed the channel, or some other fence-gate had allowed it with his royal hoof. But, more important, it had a wheel with spikes nearly an inch long—the kind a man would want if he was going to ride an elephant.

I took it to pieces, leaving only the wheel and a short handle, and sharpened the spikes with a file and a gas-strop. And when I went out on the field for the final game with Kenyon I had it fastened in my belt, carefully wound in cotton so that it wouldn't bite me by mistake.

It didn't take long after the game had started for us to see that the two teams were about equally matched, just as I had prophesied. We would move up the field as slowly and steadily as the tide and then, like the tide, be forced slowly and steadily back again.

The fat boy from Kenyon proved all we had heard, and more, and the game would have progressed just the same if the two giants had gone over in a carner by themselves and fought it out. The first half ended with neither side having been within striking distance of the goal.

The beginning of the second half both teams came on the field with the determination to put the ball over the line, or die in the attempt. We received the kickoff and rushed the ball to Kenyon's forty yard line before we were forced to punt.

They came back steadily and kicked us in from the middle of the field. Bobby, our fullback, caught it and ran it back twenty yards before he was downed and his arm broken just below the elbow. This lost us one of our best men, and forced us to put in Ford, who was just getting over a sprained ankle.

It looked as if we could hope but for a tie at most, and we played carefully for time. Down the field we went, one and two and three yards at a time, Fatty fairly meeting with honest, sturdy endeavor. But again on their forty yard line we had to punt, and Barker kicked a high spiral into the goal line.

Our tackles and ends got off neatly, and the man who caught the ball went down on his ten yard line. Sperry made the tackle that got him, and the joint knocked the ball from his arms, and you, our right end, fell on it eight yards from the goal line.

I WAS BEHIND FATTY, AND I DUG IN THE SPUR.

Eight yards to go, and we had just rushed thirty. But that was in the middle of the field, and there's a difference.

The tackles had been the best taken, and we tried them again, first the right and then the left—scoring to run the ball in front of the punter, where we might perhaps have kicked a goal.

We gained two yards!

One down left, and three yards to go! I looked at Fatty and saw him grit his teeth with determination. And suddenly, I remembered—the spur in my belt and whispered to Hosford, the quarterback.

Sharp came the signal for the old guardback formation! Quick the positions were taken and the ball snapped! I was right behind Fatty, and as his fingers pulled in the ball I dug in the old historic spur—a little harder than I would have done if I hadn't been excited.

Bang!

Touching the fuse of a cannon could not have been more effective. Fatty shot right out and ahead, struck the half risen form of his big opponent and knocked him clean over for the first time that day.

Through the hole thus opened we poured after Fatty, pushing high, the old time side wheeler again in action.

Three yards—four yards—five yards. They were swarming around his feet now, but still he was moving.

SIX YARDS—AND HE TEL!

But he fell forward!

And when the referee came up the ball was a good six inches over the line!

But Fatty wasn't thinking of the touchdown then. He knew I had been behind him, and when he got up he was mad, and mad clear through.

I gave him one look and turned to run.

But my breath was all gone from laughing and cheering, and he caught me inside of ten steps, and for a few minutes it looked as if it might have been a good deal healthier for me if they went wild.

You see, I was covered with dirt and blood, and they thought Fatty had picked out one of the opposite team, some one who had probably tried to sting him on the quiet, and was beating him to death.

Half were cheering for him to go on, and the other half were pulling the spur.

Fatty was removed from the game and strung up on the nearest telephone pole.

After they had got us separated the referee had to explain through the megaphone that we were on the same team and that that was only Fatty's way of celebrating to keep them from mobbing the field and stopping the game.
