

THE BOYS' FARM CLUBS

County Clerks Must Sign Writ

Extension of Corn Club Idea Teaches Crop Rotation and Feeding of Live Stock.

(From U. S. Department of Agriculture)

The success of boys' corn clubs and pig clubs in the South has led those in charge of the work in this section to plan for the extension of the movement through the formation of boys' farm clubs. In these clubs the boys who have already learned in the former organizations how to produce large yields of corn and the value of live stock will be taught the elementary principles of crop rotation, the economical feeding of live stock, and the upbuilding of the soil.

Without some system of rotation members of the corn clubs who have obtained large yields on their acre one year can not repeat their performances the following season. The farm clubs, therefore, are designed to teach the boys how best to use this acre the year after they have grown their corn. Each one of the members should own, or have the care of, at least one farm animal which should be carried on the acre, returning a profit to its owner and fertilizing the soil. The third year the acre is to be sown to corn again.

In this way the boys' clubs now provide a practical three years' course in the principles of sound agriculture. The importance of the movement is shown by the fact that nearly 75,000 boys are now enrolled in the corn clubs of the South, and several thousand more in pig clubs, not only teaching themselves, but furnishing an invaluable object lesson to the grown farmers around them.

The exact rotation that is followed in these farm clubs is, of course, determined by individual conditions. In some sections the acre should be sown to a cover crop for grazing and turning under in the spring. After this treatment, cowpeas, soy beans, or peanuts may be sown and prizes given for the greatest yield. Elsewhere such crops as rye and crimson clover, rye and bur clover, or vetch and oats may be sown together. Excellent results have already been obtained by many boys with crimson clover, one reason being that they take more pains with inoculation than the average farmer.

For the smaller boys in the first years of their membership in the clubs one acre is probably enough to handle. The corn they require to feed their live stock may be obtained in exchange for small grain, hay, cowpeas, clover seed, or some of the other products of their acre, or else the average boy, by helping his father on a farm, may receive sufficient feed of corn in return for his labor. Older boys may, of course, find two acres not too much, putting one acre in corn and the other in small grain and legumes.

In order to stimulate interest, the authorities in charge of this demonstration work are recommending that prizes be offered for legumes and for the small grain grown by the club members as well as for corn. If a boy uses his grain crop for grazing or turning under, he can compete for prizes on such crops as peanuts, beans, peas and lespedeza. It is also an excellent opportunity for valuable demonstration in the best methods of harvesting the seed of the clovers, vetch, etc.

After a year of this work, preparation should be made to plant the acre to corn again. The boy will then know much more about corn production and farming in general than when he first entered the club. At the end of the third year most of the club members will probably be compelled, for one reason or another, to leave the club. It is recommended that certificates signed by the best authorities of the various states should be given to every boy after three years' work of the character outlined.

Judge Frank P. Christian, of Lynchburg, sitting for Judge A. A. Campbell, in Wytheville County Circuit Court, decided last week the case of the Farmers' Bank of Wytheville against J. C. and J. R. McGavock, involving nearly $12,000. The bank secured a judgment against the McGavocks for $5,500 in February, 1896. The original writ was signed by the deputy clerk of the court, while the Constitution of Virginia requires that the writ must be attested by the clerk. Upon this point Judge Christian decided the case in favor of the defendants. An appeal was noted. The point is a new one and if sustained by the supreme court, it will make void many judgments obtained in the courts in Virginia. Alexandria Gazette.

THE "COUNTRY FAIR" IN RETROSPECT

We join the faculty and students of Manassas High School in extending sincere thanks to the people of Manassas and vicinity who so liberally patronized the "country fair" of Monday evening. No matter how creditable a performance is given, no matter how much preparatory work has been done and no matter how the various features are handled, no entertainment, bazaar, fair, etc., is said to be a success unless it is well patronized. Judged on this basis the local high school entertainment of Monday evening was wonderfully successful.

Three factors in the main made for the big success of the "country fair." 1. Under the most able management of Miss Myrtle Grenels, faculty member of the high school, both teachers and students spared no pains in working up a good crowd and in making every detail of the fair "up to the scratch." 2. The fact that it was given in the M. I. C. Building, in the heart of the town, made more for the large attendance than any other one factor. Repeatedly, excellent entertainments have been given at the Ruffner Building but a large attendance has rarely been recorded. Somehow distance in these instances has failed to lend enchantment. 3. The liberal patronage of the people of the town and nearby country, as mentioned above, was responsible for the financial success of the evening.

The people of Manassas, yes and of all Prince William, can well be proud of our focal high school. Ranking with the best of the state, having an excellent faculty and a large number of pupils who are awake to the great advantages they enjoy, the Manassas High School makes no unwarranted plea for the support of local people. The interest and encouragement shown in the support of the "country fair" will go a long way towards fostering a closer understanding between pupils of the high school and taxpayers of the community. When pupils feel that taxpayers are really interested in their work and play they are going to work and play better. The benefit derived from the "country fair" is a mutual one and will undoubtedly be lasting in character.

TOWN DOGS AS TAXABLE PROPERTY

Everyone in Manassas is doubtless aware that there is an ordinance which requires that a corporation tax be paid on every dog within the town limits every year. This tax is intended to serve as a source of revenue to the town and at the same time to hold down the great number of worthless curs that are found wherever there is laxity in the enforcement of the dog tax law. The tax on a dog is no more than a just one and should be paid willingly by every owner of a dog who thinks enough of his canine to feed it through the year. Any owner of a dog who does not pay the tax on his dog is a tax dodger just as much as the man who refuses to pay his capitation tax. Now it behooves the town of Manassas to collect the tax on every dog within the corporate limits. Every dog that is allowed to go untaxed means just that much less money in the town's coffers. Come to think of it, it would not take the tax of many of these "overlooked" dogs to pay for an occasional "clean-up" which the town feels unable to afford its citizens now. But a stronger argument for having the taxes on every dog collected is that the citizens of the town would not have to put up with so much barking, fighting and other disturbances among the local canine tribe, if this tribe were cut down and limited to the "four hundred." If a dog's owner cannot pay his license, the dog should be forced to change his address. Why is it anyway that our ordinance dealing with the taxation of dogs is not better enforced?

BE CAREFUL WHEN YOU HUNT

The hunting season opened Monday with many men in the field. The amount of game already bagged is considerable and the season, from present indications, promises to be a good one. From the view point of recreation hunting is highly beneficial and enjoyable, if game can be found to be shot at. If no game can be found the sport becomes tiresome to most men. A complaint often made, and a just one, is that unless the active, busy men get an opportunity to go hunting at the first of the season they will find little to shoot at later on. This is because the "professional" hunter, the fellow who goes day after day and scours the fields of nearly every rabbit and bird, is found in great numbers in every community. Men who own land where game is in abundance should watch closely for this type of fellow. He should not be allowed to ply his "trade" unless he has gained the consent of the land owner. Even then it seems wrong to encourage such shiftlessness at the expense of lovers of hunting for sport's sake.

The hunting season is always one of uneasiness to the women of the household. When husband and son go hunting the wife and mother feel uneasy until the gunners return, for at its best the sport is fraught with considerable danger. To prove that hunting is dangerous we need only cite several instances where men have been shot this season. On Monday two men were shot, one at Nokesville and the other at Catlett, neither, it is thought, seriously. And while hunting out from Manassas the first of the week two more men were slightly wounded. These accidents should make our men and boys more careful than ever in the handling of guns. Whenever the whereabouts of your companion is uncertain do not shoot, unless you first positively prove that he is not in the line of fire. It is better to lose a rabbit or a few birds than to wound or possibly kill your friend. Eternal vigilance is the price of the other fellow's safety when you are out hunting.

BAD ROADS GIVE A BAD NAME

We are very much impressed with an item in our local columns this week. There you will see that the Reverend Alfred Kelley, pastor of Manassas Presbyterian Church, when recently in Maryland was asked where he was from. His answer, "Manassas, Va.," brought forth the remark again and again that Manassas was shunned on account of the horrible roads of the county. With all our improvements, our fine schools, our numerous churches, and the historical interest centered here, we are surrounded as completely by bad roads as the Philippine Islands are by water.

We, who stay at home the larger part of the year and when we take a trip usually make it by rail and then to a city, seldom have the matter put to us as it was put to Reverend Kelley while in Maryland. If every citizen of the county could individually have the matter presented to him as it was presented to Reverend Kelly we would have good roads in short order. What the county needs more than anything else is an awakening along this line. Even to-day there are too many of us who are content to drag along with bad roads just because our fathers put up with them. Goodness only knows they put up with them only from necessity; during their time there was no way out.

Remember, Mr. Farmer and Mr. Business Man, you lose alike by the bad roads of our county. Whether you see it or not you are paying for Prince William's neglect just as you could, by agreeing to bond the districts, be paying for and getting good roads. Logically, the best way to go about road improvement in Prince William is for the voters of each district to bond that district sufficiently to insure a number of miles of good roads. Specifically, Manassas District needs more road improvement and gets less than any other—at least no district has worse roads. While it is true that the roads within the corporate limits of the town of Manassas are separate from the roads outside the town, the leaders of road improvement who live in Manassas could not do better than work up interest in the promotion of good roads for Manassas District.

WOMAN suffrage was defeated in three more states on Tuesday. Confidence in winning these states to the cause seems to have been very poorly placed by several suffrage leaders.

Lipscomb: About three million dollars out of the five million alleged omitted taxes on stocks, bonds and other intangible property discovered by W. N. Lipscomb, examiner of records for the sixteenth judicial circuit, has been stricken off by the local board of review in the work before it. Rev. Alford Kelley last week attended the quarterly convention of the Montgomery County (Md.) Anti-Saloon League, held at Darnestown, Md., where he delivered an address on the work which is generally being accomplished by the Anti-Saloon League. Rev. Kelley, when asked where he was now located, told his inquirers, "Manassas, Va." Time and again he was told how the tourists of Maryland and other states make it a point to avoid coming through Manassas on account of the bad roads. In nearly every case Rev. Kelley says that tourists bound southward go to Richmond and other points in the lower end of the state by way of the Shenandoah valley rather than go over the bad direct route through Prince William. Isn't it time we were waking up?

On the 19th of November, the same day the farmers hold their corn exhibit in the M. I. C. Building, the Bethlehem Good Housekeepers' Club and the Fairview Good Housekeepers' Club will have their exhibit. Housekeepers not belonging to these clubs are invited to exhibit at this time, and a special table or booth, will be arranged for their accommodation. All exhibits are free. Ribbons will be awarded, but no prizes given. All kinds of canned fruits and vegetables, preserves, pickles, etc., breads of all kinds, butter, plain sewing and all kinds of fancy work of past and present, old lace, etc., may be exhibited. CHLOE E. LAY HODGE, Secretary Bethlehem Good Housekeepers' Club.

COLD AIR NOT PURE

Never make the mistake of thinking that cold air is pure air, if you sleep in a room without heat. A tightly-closed cold room will rob your blood of oxygen the same as a tightly-closed warm one. Often persons whose bedrooms are small do not open their windows because they do not want to sleep in an icy wind. That, of course, would not be pleasant nor is it necessary. A blanket thrown over the backs of two chairs and put near the window will serve as a windbreak; or tack some lightweight cloth over a screen and put it in the window and you will have plenty of pure air circulating in the room without blowing directly on the bed Exchange.

"Money Talks"

but it won't say much for you unless it's your money. You'll be surprised to see how a few dollars in a good bank like this will coax other dollars in, how soon you'll have a nice little sum laid away without missing it, how eloquently it will talk for you when the chance comes to put it at work digging up dividends on a good investment. It's safe here, too. Yes, and as "ready" as cash in your pocket, without offering the same temptation to spend it. Come in and talk it over. Come in to-day. Our slogan is, "It is a pleasure to serve."

Two Hundred And Fifty Stories

And every story a good one. They are entertaining, but that is not all you can say about them. You know there is hardly a periodical published that is not full of time-wasting stories, but not a single story in The Youth's Companion is a time-waster. Take the stories of C. A. Stephens. It would be hard to pick out one from which you cannot learn something useful and yet entertaining.

Some of The Companion stories refresh your knowledge of geography, some tell you the mysteries of chemistry, some reveal the secrets of forestry and of general farming. They cover a wide range. They are chosen with an eye to the possible likings of every member of a Companion family—stories of vigorous action and stirring adventure for boys, stories of college life and domestic vicissitudes for girls, stories that range all the way from sheer drollery to deep seriousness for men and women. There are no stories quite like those in The Companion.

If you are not familiar with The Companion as it is to-day, let us send you sample copies and the Forecast for 1916.

New subscribers who send $2.00 for 1916 will receive free a copy of The Companion Home Calendar for 1916, in addition to all the remaining 1915 issues from the time the subscription is received.

Farming As A Business.

Farming a risk? Of course, it is, but so everything else. Are you ever sure of a position anywhere? No one should go into it, surely, who means only to dabble in a little of everything for a while. You've got to pick your specialty, and stick to it, even if it seems to be a failure. And you've also got to make up your mind that you have to get up early and work late and ache like anything when you first begin. Also, you need capital, for farming is usually a loss, before it's a business. But it does pay, if you go about it in the right way. Unless you produce the very best, you stand absolutely no chance on the market. — Exchange.

HIBBS & GIDDINGS
GENTS' OUTFITTERS
MANASSAS, VIRGINIA

early next morning, a great knocking resounded through the house. Hearing loud voices in altercation, I ran down to the hall where I saw half dozen Federal soldiers, and Colonel Jones with his back firmly planted against a door leading to the basement (pretending he had something there to conceal). They kicked like mules on the panels of the door; scars are there to-day. I hastened outside, pulled a big ladder from against the house, making a tremendous commotion, which the Yankees ran out to investigate. I slipped up stairs and gave the alarm. "We must do the quick exit," said Von Tomdorff, the Austrian, buttoning his coat with the blue morocco case in it. With a tight grip of my hand and a low "God bless you," he started down stairs with the others (fought their way out, sir). Yankees gave full chase across the fields; I knew the boys were safe when they reached the heavily timbered woods.

"Some of the servants carried information to the Yankee camp, I'm afraid," said Colonel Jones. I thought to myself 'twas much more probable that the meddlesome old bird, with her blamed old conscience, 'Miss Fortune that was, the widow Slimkins as is,' had been the carrier pigeon, or gray goose that squeaked.

"Was anyone killed, Cap'n?" was asked. "No, my lad, but the conceit was taken out of one Yankee, a German who was slightly wounded in the shoulder. He was flat on his back, scared out of his wits and yelling like murder, 'Mien Gott! Ach Gott! I'm kilt!' 'Wait 'till you get into battle' said I, 'you will soon be at Davie Jones' Locker,' dead as a last year's butterfly; a minnie ball in your back, instead of a load of grape-shot in your belly. And no back talk to me."

"Yankees were now crossing the lawn, so I set out for the landing. The Polly Ann was gone! I never laid eyes on her again. Well, I started up the country—was frustrated in every attempt I made to get a letter across the line; was so worried about my wife I could neither eat nor sleep. Next week I'll tell you how I disguised myself and got across the lines—had a series of thrilling adventures wending my way homeward. My frail wife met me with a smile, though her lips were quivering. I wish every man had as good a wife. I wish every country had a man like President Wilson at its head; there would now be no devastating wars, and broken-hearts over it in far-away homes.

"Mr. Corbin went through the war without a scratch, though he fought well in five battles. The Austrian was killed in the front ranks at the frightful battle of the Wilderness. I wish I could have told his sweetheart that her high-souled, heroic lover died for a 'cause' that was just. 'Greater love hath no man than this, that he gave his life for his friends.'

"Though the ranks are melting,
And the Stars and Bars are furled,
Yet their deeds will live forever
In the glory of the world."

"I still have the little Confederate flag; my wife hung it between the pictures of Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson. Around no flag that floats to-day cluster so many sentiments as cling to this beautiful emblem."

THE END
