ORCHESTRA PLAYED WELL

Program Given at Eastern College Last Friday Featured Original Comedy Skit.

Those who were fortunate enough to be in attendance upon the recital of Eastern College Orchestra given at the college auditorium last Friday evening came away with the impression that they have listened to the best all-round musical treat that has been afforded Manassas people for a long time. The program made no claim to being a pretentious one but it was so thoroughly natural and spontaneous that every number was greatly enjoyed. The recital was given for the benefit of the tennis association.

The orchestra played in a finished manner several good selections, Mrs. Roop sang, Miss Margaret Roop played two piano solos, Mr. Mosher played excellently on the violin and Mr. Kramm delighted his hearers by his monochord solos. To lighten up the evening an original comedy skit was given.

"The Orchestra Conductor's Nightmare" was a laugh from beginning to end. After the conductor, Mr. Kramm, had fallen asleep, other members of the orchestra came in costumed to represent Chinese people. They were assembled by the conductor, who was in a trance, and they played music such as a "spook" orchestra might indulge in. The orchestra in the next scene was seen in their natural attire and were lead off in regular fashion by the conductor upon his awakening. This feature, which was entirely original with Mr. Kramm, made a big hit. It proved to be the best received number of the program, with each of the others running it a close second.

Members of the orchestra are Messrs. Kramm, Mosher, Whaley, Galleher, Florence and Miss Ernestine Moser.

MRS. HODGE HONORED

Given A Surprise on Her Birthday by Members of Bethlehem G. H. Club.

(Contributed by a Club Member)
Some one has said that the business of The Bethlehem Good Housekeepers' Club is its pleasure and the pleasure of the club is its business and a characterizing feature its spirit of harmony and gracious thoughtfulness of each and others.

On the afternoon of March 21, a company of these elect ladies were seen wending their way in the direction of Roblay Cottage, on Main street, with quite an air of mystery and many an interesting-looking bag, basket and box. On their way they encountered the little mistress of the cottage and at once made capture by affectionate force of arms. Reaching their destination they fully took possession, as they had long ago taken possession of the heart of its mistress, the honored and beloved secretary of the club, Mrs. B. T. H. Hodge.

When the purpose of the invasion was made known in a felicitous speech by the club president words were scarcely adequate to express the pleasure of the honoree in her appreciation of the really and truly birthday "surprise party." But, with her usual ready individual charm, she thanked the ladies for the crowning joy of this and other days.

After a brief business session of the club, in which the "rest room" was definitely discussed and the dainty white-and-gold year books (the skillful product of the committee, Miss Roberts, Mrs. Snow and Miss S. E. Johnson, and the publishers, THE MANASSAS JOURNAL) were distributed, the happy company was invited to the dining-room where deft hands had prepared a veritable "spread" of loveliness and good things to eat.

The club colors and the club flower were in loyal evidence. But most significant and unique was the white birthday cake with its yellow tapers, representing each club member—regular, associate and honorary—and the tiny daisies with their individual greetings of love and good wishes. Prof. Hodge, the one man of the occasion, was not at all lonely or alone, and gave a delightful touch as impromptu "toastmaster" in his exceedingly gracious acknowledgment of the ladies' courtesy to his wife and home.

And thus, with radiant candle-glow, friendly converse, kindly messages and gifts of love, and the enthusiastic singing of the club song, "Auld Lang Syne," the end of a perfect birthday celebration came, leaving pleasant memories with each cherished friend.

SHOWS BENEFIT OF COUNTY AGENT

F. S. Farrer, U. S. District Agent, Makes Fine Talk on "Demonstration Work" at Farmers' Institute Last Friday—Wood Speaks on "Corn" and Hays on "Hog Cholera"—Next Institute April 28th.

(By B. K. Watson, Secretary N. V. F. I.)

The regular March meeting of the Northern Virginia Farmers' Institute was held at the courthouse in Manassas Friday, March 17, 1916. The meeting was called to order by President Westwood Hutchison, the minutes of the preceding meeting were read and adopted, and, on the motion of Mr. Heuser, the Secretary was extended a vote of thanks for the manner in which he reported the last meeting. The committee on organization brought in its report, which was along very much the same lines as the old constitution. Mr. Steere, a member of this committee, read the newly-drawn constitution.

T. G. Wood Gives Address on "Corn"

After the general business of the institute was dispensed with the regular program was taken up. The first speaker was T. Gilbert Wood, agricultural agent of the Southern Railway who addressed the institute on corn, selecting seed, etc. Mr. Wood spoke in part as follows:

If the population of the United States continues to increase as it has for the past ten years, the population of the country in 1920 will be one hundred, seventeen million; in 1940, one hundred, seventy-one million; in 1950, two hundred, four million.

In 1950 the land area of the United States will be the same as today and if we are to feed the country then we must increase our yield per acre. There may be more land under cultivation thirty-five years from now than there is today, due to the reclaiming of swamps and deserts, but the land area of the country will be the same and we have got to depend on the increased yield of crops for our sustenance.

There is nothing perhaps that has more to do with the yield of a crop than the kind of seed planted and the best and cheapest, as well as the simplest way of increasing yields is by means of improved seed. This is true of all crops, but corn is one of the easiest crops to improve by means of seed selection.

Also, we should return to our soil, in the forms of manure and humus, at least as much plant food as is removed by the various crops grown. It is always better to sell our crops through live stock than to sell them directly from the farm. A ton of butter removes from the farm plant food worth about 75 cents; a ton of milk removes about $2.00 worth of plant food; a ton of corn $1.75 worth of plant food, and the plant food removed by a ton of alfalfa hay is worth $6.50.

Points in Selecting Seed Corn

In selecting seed corn it is always advisable to select the seed in the field before the corn is harvested. By so doing we are always able to determine how many ears grew on the stalk, just how high it grew on the stalk, the kind of stalk it grew on and many other things that it is impossible to determine after the corn has been harvested and put into the bin. The corn should be selected as early as possible to avoid frosted corn. Frosted corn will produce about 60 to 80 per cent barren stalks. It is very important that seed corn should be properly stored. It should have plenty of air and be protected from rain, rats, mice, etc.

One good ear of corn when planted produces eight to twelve bushels. If we plant frosted corn we will get from one frosted ear only about twenty to twenty-five per cent fertile stalks, the remaining seventy-five to eighty per cent being barren stalks. Thus we see that if we plant frosted corn we will obtain from one ear only about one and a half bushels to two and a half bushels whereas if we plant corn that is not frosted we should get six to ten bushels from one ear.

GROVETON PATRONS MET

Miss Emily Johnson Talked on "Poultry Raising" at Groveton Last Friday.

The Groveton Patrons' League held its regular meeting at the schoolhouse last Friday evening, with most of the members present. The principal business transacted was the election of officers. Mrs. Scansney was made president, Mrs. David Harrover, secretary, and Mrs. Samuel Moss, treasurer. Mrs. Dogan reported $26.10 as the amount thus far sent in towards the piano fund. The piano at the school is of the greatest pleasure to all. Miss Grace Metz, the teacher, giving the pupils full benefit of it. In passing it may be said that the school is very fortunate in having Miss Metz as its teacher and it is hoped she will be retained as long as she is willing to serve in her present capacity.

After the rendition of a St. Patrick's Day program of songs and recitations, Miss Emily Johnson, county agent in girls' canning club work, gave a talk on poultry raising. Miss Johnson is doing a great work in her demonstrations and the old folks had better watch out else the children will soon surpass them.

MISS YOUNG A BRIDE

Miss Emily Johnson's Daughter Married Yesterday to Paul J. Cooksey.

Springing a surprise on many of their friends, Mr. Paul Cooksey, of Charleston, S. C., and Miss Norma I. Young, of near Manassas, went to Washington yesterday morning and were married at high noon. The ceremony was performed at the parsonage of the Lutheran Place Memorial Church, the Rev. Henry Anstadt officiating. Mrs. H. P. Young, mother of the bride, and Miss Anna Bell were the only attendants from Manassas.

The bride is the daughter of Mail Carrier and Mrs. H. P. Young. She was born and reared near Manassas and has a host of friends in this vicinity. Mr. Cooksey, the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Cooksey, of Brentsville, was born in that neighborhood. For the past three years he has served as a railway mail clerk on the Atlantic Coast Line Railway. For the past two or three months Mr. Cooksey has made Charleston, S. C., his home. A year or more prior to that he lived in North Carolina.

After a brief wedding trip the newly-wed couple will be at home to their many friends at 58 Carolina street, Charleston, S. C.

WILLIAM W. SMALLWOOD

Buckhall and Washington Man Passed Away Yesterday—Funeral Saturday.

After an illness of several weeks, William W. Smallwood, of Buckhall and Washington, passed away at his Buckhall home early yesterday morning. Mr. Smallwood, who was between 65 and 66 years of age, had been in bad health for several months and had recently suffered an attack of grip and pneumonia. We understand that the cause of his death was heart trouble.

Mr. Smallwood for the past ten or twelve years had been connected with the Woodward & Lothrop department store in Washington. It was his custom to spend his week-ends with his family who lived at Buckhall. He is survived by a widow and ten children.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow (Saturday) and interment will be made at Buckhall.

REST ROOM DISCUSSED

Need of Such A Convenience in Manassas Considered by Groveton G. H. Club.

At an informal meeting of the Groveton Good Housekeeping Club held at "Rosemount" on Thursday afternoon, April 16, officers for the coming year were elected. The subject that was then discussed was ways and means of establishing and maintaining a rest room in the town of Manassas.

Mrs. C. F. M. Lewis reported that she and Mrs. Walter Sanders, of Catharpin, had made a partial canvass of the merchants of Manassas and all were entered most heartily into the plan and promised their support. Mrs. Lewis also stated that a number of rooms had been inspected but none proved suitable from all points of view.

Now every one concedes the necessity for this room. We have yet to hear a dissenting voice and since the farmers' wives more than others will receive comfort and pleasure from its establishment it is asked if the Farmers' Institute will not back the Woman's Auxiliary in the establishment of such a room. It seems that the school leagues might also help since women and children from all over the county stand in need of such a room frequently when they visit Manassas. The good housekeepers propose to furnish the rest room. We are going to have a rest room, but how are the expenses going to be met?

Since our meeting it is learned that both Vienna, in Fairfax county, and Berryville, in Clarke county, have beautiful rest rooms. The towns of Manassas cannot afford to lag behind in this important matter.

RELIEF MONEY SENT IN

The first of this week we forwarded $24.33, the total amount sent in to THE MANASSAS JOURNAL by citizens of Prince William county for the relief of world-war sufferers, to the state relief headquarters. Yesterday morning we received the following acknowledgment:

WAS KILLED ON BRIDGE

C. & O. Train Strikes Miss Manuel On Bristow Bridge—Miss Dickens Injured.

Shortly after two-thirty o'clock Tuesday afternoon the Bristow neighborhood was horrified to learn that at the Southern Railway bridge over Broad Run, a short distance north of Bristow, the Chesapeake & Ohio train No. 4, had instantly killed Miss Rosie Manuel, aunt of Everett P. Robertson, of Bristow, and has seriously injured Miss Esther Dickens, the twenty-two-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. H. Dickens, of the same neighborhood, John Harris, colored, an employee of Mr. J. P. Leachman, was an eye witness of the accident.

The Three Started Out for a Walk

From the most authoritative accounts available it appears that Miss Manuel, accompanied by Miss Dickens and Miss Francis Griffith, 15-year old daughter of Mr. W. T. Griffith, of Manassas, who was visiting in the Bristow neighborhood for the day, set out from Bristow to visit the bridge over Broad Run. When they reached the bridge they started to cross it, apparently unaware that the C. & O. passenger train was coming on the northbound track, on which they were walking.

The engineer, while yet south of Bristow, saw that there were people on the track but at the time thought it was a force of action hands. When he came past the depot, however, he saw that there were three women on the bridge and at once cut his engine off and applied the air brakes, at the same time blowing his whistle.

One Killed, One Seriously Injured And One Unharmed

Miss Griffith had the presence of mind to run out to the side and wrap her arms around one of the upright iron standards. Miss Dickens, it is said, also grasped one of these standards but fainted before the train passed, and was consequently struck by the side of the engine. But in the case of Miss Manuel, who was 51 years of age, it is thought that she kept running right in front of the train and perhaps had a foot caught in between the ties, thus throwing her just before being struck. Anyway, Miss Manuel was thrown through the side of the bridge and horribly mangled, the remains hardly bearing any points of recognition. Miss Dickens was hurled out on one of the abutments and seen to be seriously injured. Miss Griffith, outside of the nervous shock, came off unharmed.

The train, after quite a stop at the scene of the accident, brought the remains of Miss Manuel to Manassas, and Miss Dickens was carried to the Alexandria Hospital in charge of a physician who happened to be on the train. At the hospital it was learned that Miss Dickens had suffered the breaking of one arm in two places, the other arm in one place, a broken collar bone and shoulder blade and several cuts about the head. Her condition was pronounced favorable provided there were no internal injuries.

LATER—As we go to press we learn that Miss Dickens had to suffer the amputation of her right arm Wednesday afternoon. Since the accident Miss Dickens has been kept constantly under observation. Her condition, while still very serious, was more hopeful this morning after she had spent a restful night. Mrs. Dickens is at the bedside of her daughter. Continued on Second Page

In selecting seed corn we should bear in mind that the high ears mature late whereas the low ears mature early. We should try to secure ears that mature between these two extremes. Ears that mature about the same time will when planted produce pollen that matures at about the same time, a very important factor in the pollination of corn.

In seed corn that has been field selected the yield has been noted to increase anywhere from two to twenty bushels over corn that has not been selected. A fact to be borne in mind in selecting corn is to secure ears that are well covered at the tip by the shuck and one in which the shank turns down to thus prevent damage by wet weather while still in the field.

County Fair Should Be Educational

In organizing a county fair it is very important to keep in mind the fact that the fair should be made educational, that is, make the fair mean a great deal to the school children of the county, get the ladies interested and the organization will go. A fair should represent the whole people. The Southern Railway will cooperate and does its part to make the fair a success.

Mr. Heuser said that he had always gotten good results by selecting seed corn in the crib and remarked that he could not see through the shuck and determine what kind of ear was underneath. To overcome this difficulty Mr. Wood suggested selecting in the field about four times as much corn as would be needed for seed and after shucking same select the best ears.

Mr. Ransdell asked the speaker about certain rates, whereon Mr. Wood said that he was not connected with the freight department of his road and suggested that the matter be taken up with the proper department. Upon motion, the Chair appointed Messrs. Ransdell and Heuser to confer with President Fairfax Harrison regarding rates on lime and other commodities. Upon motion, Westwood Hutchison was added to the committee.

At the conclusion of Mr. Wood's address, which was enjoyed by all present and which proved to be very instructive, the meeting adjourned and an excellent lunch was served by Miss Lula Metz and the domestic science class for which the institute extended them a vote of thanks.

F. S. Farrar Tells of Demonstration Work

The first speaker of the afternoon was Mr. F. S. Farrar, district agent, U. S. Department of Agriculture, who addressed the institute on "Demonstration Work."

At the beginning of Mr. Farrar's excellent address he told how about ten years ago the demonstration work was inaugurated by the late Seaman A. Knapp, the South's greatest benefactor. The work in the beginning was financed by the General Education Board of New York and the money which this board gave to the work was given without any strings on it, but notwithstanding this fact some people, including some Southern congressmen, were loath to accept the money. Mr. Farrar continued his address in part as follows:

From the small beginning about ten years ago we now have a nation-wide movement for the betterment of the farmer, enabling him to grow better crops, make more money and make the farm a desirable place to live on. This work is carried on jointly by federal and state aid. The headquarters of the work in each state is at the state college of agriculture. The county is the smallest unit by which the work is conducted and there are now in the South over a thousand county demonstration agents, there being fifty in the state of Virginia in addition to five specialists who work the entire state and a number of home economics agents.

One of the main things that has kept the farmer back is the lack of being organized. The farmer is not organized as are men in other callings because he is somewhat prejudiced, lacks confidence in fellow farmers and has not got the spirit of stick-together that is absolutely necessary if anything is to be accomplished by organization. The farmer complains of being imposed upon by men in other occupations, and he perhaps is imposed upon sometimes, but no man is to blame for the condition of affairs but the farmer himself. If he was organized and would stand by his fellow farmers such conditions would not obtain. The farmer of America gets 40 cents on the dollar for his product whereas the farmer of Denmark get 69 cents on the dollar because the farmers of Denmark are organized.

The legislation of the country has been created for commerce and not for farming. The schools of the country have been patterned after the city schools whereas they should be adapted to rural conditions, should teach the child to love the soil. Due to the conditions existing on the farms of Virginia during the last fifty years, five hundred thousand boys have left the farms of the state.

Funeral of Miss Manuel Held Wednesday

The funeral of Miss Manuel was held at Morrisville, Fauquier county, Wednesday afternoon, the remains being accompanied from Manassas by her nephew, Everett P. Robertson. Mrs. B. S. Robertson, of Bristow, a sister of the deceased, was unable to attend the funeral on account of illness. Interment was made in the burying ground at M. E. Church, South, Morrisville, of which Miss Manuel had been a member ever since childhood.

Miss Manuel, who was a daughter of the late William Manuel, of Morrisville, had made her home with Mrs. B. S. Robertson for the past two years. She was well known to many of the Bristow neighborhood. She is survived by two brothers, G. W., of Roanoke, and J. P., of Morrisville, and three sisters, Mrs. B. S. Robertson, of Bristow; Mrs. R. J. Embrey and Mrs. L. B. Anns, both of Morrisville.

Second Accident in Month's Time Near Bristow

The accident recorded above is the second of this nature to occur on the Southern Railway tracks near Bristow within a month's time. Oscar Ritenour, son of Mr. Joseph Ritenour, who has charge of the pump house at Bristow, it will be recalled was killed on Wednesday morning, February, 23rd, by the Norfolk and Western passenger train No. 42, while walking the tracks between the depot and bridge while on his way to the pump house.

The stretch of track that passes through Bristow and on to the bridge over Broad Run seems to be particularly dangerous because of the fact that the road bed is lower there than on either side and trains come by with great force and under conditions making it practically impossible to stop quickly. The fact that there is no foot bridge over Broad Run at the bridge, while there is a ford there and a county road on each side is the reason for many using the bridge as a throughfare who would not otherwise cross it.

When you use a De Laval Separator you not only get more cream but better cream as well

THE best evidence of this is that during the last twenty-five years butter made from De Laval separated cream has invariably scored the highest at all important contests and state fairs. Practically all the cream entered in the International Milk and Cream Show held in connection with the Panama-Pacific Exposition, was separated by De Laval, and every first prize, and most all the other prizes, were won by De Laval separated cream.

These facts are simply further proof of De Laval supremacy in everything that goes to make a good cream separator. Don't buy any separator until you give us an opportunity to let you see and try a De Laval. We will be glad to send one out to your farm on trial any time you say. Just phone, send a post card, or call and we will be glad to give you all the information you wish.

MANASSAS, VA., FRIDAY, MARCH 24, 1916.

NEED OF A FOOT BRIDGE SHOWN

After a disastrous fire a town awakes to the importance of brick and concrete buildings; after a big flood the surrounding country begins to realize the need of a large and thoroughly-touted dam; after losing his health a man realizes how foolish he was not to have safeguarded his most priceless possession in earlier years. So, after the appalling accident of Tuesday afternoon when one woman was instantly killed and another seriously injured on the Southern Railway bridge near Bristow, the county is given the opportunity of awaking to the great need of a foot bridge over Broad Run near the railroad bridge. The Board of Supervisors of Prince William should erect such a bridge over the stream at the point in question and here's the reason.

If we remember correctly, there is a county road which comes up to each side of Broad Run at the railroad bridge. Those traveling on horseback, in buggy or automobile can cross the stream by the ford, but for those on foot the stream can be crossed at this point only by way of the railroad bridge. Now there are several families living near Bristow whose members use this road to Bristow almost exclusively. Where the trip is made on foot (and we daresay a large number of the trips to Bristow by users on this road are made on foot) the railroad bridge must be used to get across Broad Run, as stated above. Thus, unwittingly, the county indirectly encourages some of its citizens to risk their lives on a dangerous railroad bridge. The cost of spanning Broad Run with a simple foot bridge would be small compared to the loss to the county occasioned by the death of one or more of its citizens. If the board will consider this matter carefully it will be able to see the real need of a foot bridge at the point indicated above.

While the frightful accident of Tuesday is still fresh in the minds of our readers it may be well to emphasize again the great risk run by every one who trespasses upon railroad property. At the very time everything is thought to be safe, death in the form of an onrushing engine may be bearing down upon those who walk the railroad tracks. Every one knows that the practice of track walking is dangerous but many continue to thus jeopardize their lives by using the railway company's highway as a public thoroughfare for pedestrians. As shown in the columns of THE JOURNAL not long ago, the Southern Railway Company recorded 146 trespassers killed on its lines during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915. Ninety-three, or nearly 64 per cent, were walking on the tracks. The danger of trespassing upon railroad property is being constantly emphasized but the warnings continue to be largely disregarded at the cost of human lives.

THE REST ROOM NEARER A REALITY

Discussion as to the need of a rest room for Manassas is becoming general. And it is well that the people of various sections of Prince William are beginning to consider this proposal in all seriousness. So much in the way of comfort and helpfulness, at a small running expense, can be given women and children who are forced to wait in Manassas, often hours at a time, without any place to rest, that the wonder is that the rest room idea has not become an established reality before this. Since the need and benefit of a rest room are so evident we suggest that thought be given entirely to ways of bringing about its establishment and maintenance.

Several of the business men of Manassas have been canvassed and they have promised to contribute liberally towards the running expenses of the proposed rest room. It is confidently believed that nearly all of those who have not been seen will also be willing to help. The town council has been asked to consider the proposition of contributing one-third of the running expenses and that body is to discuss the matter at its meeting on Monday evening. The county board of supervisors will also be asked to contribute one-third of the running expenses. In these ways it is hoped to establish a rest room on a permanent basis so that once the county women and children make use of it there will be no withdrawal of the privilege. The good housekeeping clubs of the county, we understand, will endeavor to furnish the room in an attractive and comfortable manner.

As yet no definite location for the rest room has been decided upon. Several available rooms have been examined but none has measured up to all requirements. Some of the rooms looked at were second-story rooms, which would necessitate the using of a stairway in going to and from the room. We do not believe that anything but a ground-floor room would serve the purpose for which a rest room is to be established. The whole idea of a rest room is wrapped up in the great convenience it affords and the ease with which it can be reached. To a tired mother with two or three little children tugging at her skirt the very thought of having to climb a flight of stairs to get to a rest room would not be conducive to its free and wide-spread use. Such a woman the rest room is designed to help, but, if it is placed upstairs, the chances are it will not be freely used by those who need it most.

When Manassas gets a rest room let it be on the ground floor and centrally located, even if the expenses of running it are slightly more. The real service of a rest room must not be lost sight of when its location is being decided upon. The purpose of the rest room, we believe, is fully understood by all and we trust that its location will be such that it will be used freely by the women and children of Prince William, for whom it is designed to be a great benefit and blessing.

SPRING AND SPRING FEVER

With the first warm days of spring man yearns to get out of doors and live close to nature. After passing through a long winter indoors it's no wonder that springtime is hailed with greater joy perhaps than any other season. And did you ever notice that walking becomes much more fashionable as the days grow longer and warmer? Even if spring is a little late this year it is coming and we just as well figure on how we are going to meet it.

There are some who look upon spring as the one season of the year to be dreaded. They are so sure that spring fever awaits them that they take no precautions against openly inviting that languid feeling we hear so many complain of. To all such as are annually afflicted with spring fever we prescribe as follows:

Early to bed and early to rise. Drink plenty of good, fresh water. Change from the heavy hot-cake, fat meat and pastry diet to a lighter one in which green vegetables and fruits figure prominently. Exercise by preparing a garden or a flower bed, thus getting the best tonic and blood purifier—fresh air. Take long walks into the country and stay out of doors every minute you can.

There never has been a single good reason advanced why one should feel any worse in spring than during any other season, provided he or she lives in accordance with the dictates of nature. All this molasses and sulphur business, this drinking of sassafras tea and the running to so-called "tonics" in bottles are just so many ineffective attempts to correct conditions which nature stands ready and willing to correct if you will only follow her prescription. It's so simple that most of us do not consider it worth trying.

THE MEXICAN SITUATION IS SERIOUS

It now appears that the United States has got its foot in it right in this Mexican business. What at first looked like a punitive expedition against the bandit Villa, in which cooperation on the part of Carranza and his troops was to be unstintingly given, has become more and more serious looking until late reports lead us to believe that our country is launched upon a long and extremely hazardous undertaking.

Carranza, we really believe, would willingly render our troops all reasonable aid in running down Villa, but unfortunately what Carranza wants done is not always executed by his soldiers. Our belief that the Mexican soldier at best is undependable was further strengthened when we learned yesterday that General Luis Herrera, until recently in command of the Carranza garrison at Chihuahua City, had gone over to Villa with 2,000 troops. This move we fear presages other moves of similar character on the part of Carranza's troops. As is well known, the Mexican soldier has no love for the citizens or soldiers of the United States and it is really not surprising to see such a soldier of recognized authority join hands with his bandit brother against what looks to him to be an invasion of his native land.

How about all this paper and trash one sees upon the streets of Manassas after the announcement that the ordinance against this thoughtless practice was going to be rigidly enforced?

have a bank account and pay her bills by check. It's the modern, business-like, economical way. It tends toward careful management, gives a better idea of the relation of income to outgo, provides a receipt for each payment, as well as a record of date, amount, etc. And it often leads to the creation of a substantial reserve fund with which to realize a fond ambition or meet an emergency. WILL COPY PORTRAIT

See Similar of Reynolds' Last Fairfax to Adorn President Harrison's Home.

Sir Joshua Reynolds' portrait of Sir Thomas Fairfax, sixth lord of the name, regarded as one of the most valuable pictures in America, is to be copied for the first time for Fairfax Harrison, president of the Southern Railway, a great-great nephew of Lord Fairfax.

The portrait is the property of Alexandria-Washington Lodge of Masons and hangs in its lodge room where it is seen by many thousands of tourists annually. A special meeting of the lodge was held last week for the purpose of granting permission to Mr. Harrison to have the portrait copied.

The portrait was presented to the lodge by Ferdinando Fairfax, a son of Bryan, eighth Lord Fairfax, in 1812. Ferdinando Fairfax was a member of the lodge at that time. It was valued by E. F. Andrews, director of the Corcoran Art Gallery, in Washington, some years ago, at $150,000.

The copy of the original, which is to be somewhat smaller, is to be made by Mrs. E. F. Andrews and is to be hung in Mr. Harrison's home in Fairfax county.—Alexandria Gazette.

"Wet" Doorkeeper of House of Delegates Not Downcast Over Mapp Bill.

Colonel S. M. Newhouse, of Culpeper, first doorkeeper and paymaster of the House of Delegates goes by the nickname of the "Lord Chesterfield of the House of Delegates," a designation which fits his punctilious manner and choice of words. When Delegate Meetze, of Prince William, presented him with a handsome umbrella on behalf of the members of the House referring to him as a "wet" man who needed something besides the Mapp bill to keep him dry, Col. Newhouse replied:

"The Mapp bill suits me. It only allows a man one quart, but it permits a hotel to keep any quantity it pleases. I can't go to a hotel and get a drink, but I can have a whiskey bath and I never yet have been able to take a bath without swallowing some of the water."—Fredericksburg Free Lance.

We have got to make the farm a place that the boys will not want to leave, a place that offers as good opportunities as the city, a place where the conditions are conducive to good health, good living and a place that the boys will not want to leave because of the opportunities and possibilities on the farm. This is what the demonstration work is doing.

How Demonstrators Make For Prosperity

In Texas it was found by tests that boys that were in the clubs made a grade averaging of 19.23 per cent higher than the boys who were not in the clubs. These tests were on reading, writing and arithmetic. The club boys were five per cent better morally than the boys not in the clubs.

Fifteen thousand, eight hundred, ninety-five acres of corn were grown under the direction of county agents and according to demonstration methods in the state of Virginia last year. The average yield of the corn grown by demonstration methods was 106 bushels per acre more than that grown by ordinary methods, which at 60 cent per bushel represents a sum of money very much greater than sufficient to pay for all the agricultural extension work done in Virginia.

By the same method of comparison the value of the increase in alfalfa was greater than the total amount paid the agents in salaries. When the agents began work there were in the state 475 silos and now there are 2,273. In counties where there are agents the farmers were saved on an average $3.75 per ton on every ton of fertilizer bought. There has been brought into the counties where there are agents 131 pure bred dairy bulls and the agents have tested some three thousand cows for butter fat production. An equally well showing is made in other live stock, other crops, and with the boys' and girls' club work.

Will Ask Supervisors for Agent.

We can secure an agent in this county if the board of supervisors will agree to pay half the salary of the agent. The counties that have agents are paying half the salary of the agents and the government is paying the other half. The speaker recommended that we get pay enough to get a first class man and recommended that the man should not be a local man, the reason being plain to every one.

Upon motion, duly seconded, the institute went on record as favoring the appointment of an agent and the Secretary was directed to bring the matter to the attention of the board of supervisors.

During Mr. Farrar's address the farmers asked a number of questions and were thus able to learn a great deal in detail about the work.

When the question of getting an outside man for agent was being discussed Mr. Hutchison and Mr. Ransdell, both of whom are very much in favor of good roads, brought to the notice of the institute some facts connected with the building of roads by the state, stating that a great deal of money was extravagantly spent in salaries and traveling expenses of certain officials connected with the work.

"Hog Cholera" Discussed by Dr. Hays

The next speaker was Dr. C. H. Hays, hog cholera specialist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, who delivered a very instructive address on "Hog Cholera." Dr. Hays spoke in part as follows:

There is no hog cholera in this county as far as we know of at the present time, but there is no way of telling when an outbreak will occur and it is well that the farmers inform themselves in regard to this disease.

Hog cholera has caused the death of 50 million dollars' worth of hogs in the U. S. annually for the past ten years. There were $300,000 worth of hogs lost in this state by the disease in 1913. The disease first appeared in this country in Ohio in 1833 and has since spread to every state in the Union. Hog cholera is caused by a germ which cannot move from place to place but must be carried. The table below shows sources of infection and ways in which cholera reached herds in sixteen counties in 1914-1915.

Source of Infection	Per Cent
Exchanging labor and visiting neighbors	21
Exposure to sick herds in pens and pastures	9
Infection harbored on premises	18
Carried by dogs	9
Infected cars and public highways	2
Purchase of new stock	5
Contaminated streams	2
Birds, buzzards, crows, etc.	14
Other sources of infection, less common	6
Indefinite	16

Results of Work in Sixteen Counties in 1914

Below is given the results of work done in sixteen counties in 1914 (work was begun in three of these in 1913). Results in exposed herds with hogs apparently well when treated were as follows:

Treated with serum	2,686
Lost	34
Per cent loss	.03

RESULTS IN HERDS AFFECTED.

Treated	Died	Per Cent Loss
Sick when treated..... 53,485	15,570	29.1
Apparently well..... 40,462	2,077	5.1

There is no cure for hog cholera and the only preventive is the anti-cholera serum. The results above given demonstrate positively the effectiveness of serum (1) to render healthy herds immune, (2) to prevent spread of infection in diseased herds.

Anti-cholera serum may be obtained from the State Commissioner of Agriculture at one cent per cubic centimeter and the dose for an hog weighing 100 pounds will cost about 30 cents. The serum will render the hog immune from four to six weeks.

Precautions to Take Against Hog Cholera

To keep hog cholera from reaching your herd the following precautions should be taken:

Locate your hog lots and pastures away from streams and public highways, and do not allow your hogs to run at large. Do not visit your neighbor or allow him to visit you if either of you have the disease in your herds. Do not drive into hog lots when returning from market. When purchasing new stock keep such stock quarantined for two weeks, and use care to prevent infection from the new stock. Confine your dogs and do not keep pigs unless you confine them.

If hog cholera appears in your herd: Confine your hogs in limited quarters that may be cleaned daily and sprayed three times a week. Treat them immediately with anti hog cholera serum or call on your agricultural director, E. K. Watson, Manassas, Va., who will gladly treat your hogs for you. Post a notice at the entrance of your farm: "Hog Cholera, Keep Out." Notify your neighbors that your herd is infested so that they may take necessary precautions.

Speakers Extended Vote of Thanks

To show the appreciation of the institute for the three excellent addresses delivered by Messrs. Wood, Farrar and Hays, upon motion, the institute extended to these gentlemen a rising vote of thanks.

Mr. Westwood Hutchison offered the following resolution, which was duly adopted by the institute:

Resolved, That the patrons of this institute learn with deep regret of the illness of our friend and co-laborer, Mr. Geo. C. Round, and extend to him our sympathy and best wishes for a speedy recovery.

The proceedings of one of the best institutes of the season was brought to a close at 4:45 p. m. The institute will hold the last meeting of the session on Friday, April 28.

PIDGIN ISLAND

By HAROLD MACGRATH

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

SYNOPSIS.

Cranford, an international secret agent, back from Europe, decides to go fishing at Pidgin Island. He does not know that there is a handsome young girl, who is ready to arrive there.

Simmons, a poor wanderer, instructs his son to get Cranford, who has broken up the father's illicit business. They learn about his fishing trip.

Cranford meets Diana (Miss Wynne) and learns that she knows Uncle Billy, guide and fisherman, very well. Cranford gets a telegram stating that his room at home had been entered and looted.

Cranford and Diana meet at the end of a fishing expedition. The girl becomes greatly excited when she sees a power boat approaching Pidgin Island.

Cranford and Diana become better acquainted. They become rivals as to who can catch the most and the largest fish. Uncle Billy becomes an admirer of each of them.

The women natives wonder who Diana is and speculate in gossip fashion. They conclude that she is an actress. Uncle Billy resents this suspicion. Cranford plans a trip to Kingston.

Cranford begins to realize that he is in love with Diana Wynne. He admits to her that he is a secret agent who has been tracing the lawbreaking operations of the smuggler, Smead.

Cranford learns that the celebrated necklaces of the Princess Xenia had been found to be made of spurious stones. Some one had substituted imitation for the real jewels.

Smead's son reports that he will soon have Cranford out of the way. The son discloses his father, owing to the smuggler's ill treatment of the lady's mother, who is now dead.

Smead's son (Donald) holds a mysterious conversation at night with Diana on Pidgin Island. He is shown to have a strange influence over her, and he is a student of Cranford.

CHAPTER XII.

A Will Drawn Up.

DIANA never could tell how she got back to the farm.

One of her knees throbbed painfully, for somewhere along the road she had stumbled and fallen. In bed she could not shut her eyes. The voice of the man had awakened the half-forgotten terrors of the past.

The peace and serene happiness of the white walled convent, the beautiful gardens, such as only Europe has had time to prepare and fulfill, and in her innocence she had dreamed that the world outside the huge iron gates was a grand fairy story waiting to be read.

Then into the world, the great house with its paintings and rugs and tapestries and marbles; the coming of the young men, of middle aged men, of old men, and the fever of card playing; her beautiful gowns and gems, and the vaguely growing wonder why the men never brought their wives with them, and then came the thunderbolt.

A young man much in wine had thrown his arms about her in the hall and kissed her. Her indignation, his laughter, the terrible revelation.

"Oh, come now! Don't be a prude. Do you suppose we shall ever come here but for a chance to see you and talk with you? God-in-heaven, you mean to tell me you do not know that this is a private gambling house? The low, abominable scoundrel!"

From her varied wardrobe she had chosen the simplest hat and gown, taken only the money in her purse and fled.

It was almost as if she had fled with her hands to her ears and her eyes shut. The gradual disillusioning from which humanity draws its experiences and profit was denied her.

It had beaten down upon her with the suddenness of an avalanche. For days after there had been mental anguish. Dry eyed and trance-like she had gone from place to place for work. God forgive them; never would she begin the battle with the world.

Warned, she learned quickly how to deal with men and half men and Smead learned to hold them off at arm's length without repelling them, to meet rebuff with firmness and gentleness, harshness with patience, guile with discerning honesty. The fairy story she had dreamed of reading there behind the convent grille was a grim hag's tale. In these teeming six years many had been her occupations—shop-girl, stenographer, nurse, governess, companion to old ladies, stewardess on the Atlantic liners which she still followed ostensibly, but in reality as a blind for a more daring business.

And now the hurt she had always succeeded in avoiding had finally come. Here in this quaint, low ceilinged room she faced her destiny.

She cared more for this comparative stranger than was wise, and the lesson was how to leave him, to forget him and make him forget in turn.

Quarter after 10.
Smead is playing solitaire and peering from time to time abstractedly, for here and there the face of a card discloses and a vision comes instead.

Cranford is smoking his pipe, and in the blue glow of the smoke he looks in the mirror behind the man who came himself. He has his vision of the old man's face and wonders if there are any signs upon his own face that would show the old man's surprise about the powers of the young woman in the farmhouse. Quarter after 10.

In a house in the great city a knock in a hallway struck the quarter hour.

The soft boom of it penetrated all the lower rooms of the big house. By the library reading table the gray haired man laid down his newspaper and looked at his watch.

"Wonderful how that old clock keeps time," he said to the white haired woman opposite. "Hundred and fifty years old, and yet it is still as accurate as this Swiss piece."

He returned the watch to his pocket and was about to resume his reading when he saw something sparkle on the cheeks of the woman. "What's the matter, Jane?"

She dabbed at her cheeks with her handkerchief and fumbled the leaves of her book. "Nothing."

"Nonsense! That's not the truth. What's troubling you?"

"That which is always troubling me," bravely, since she knew it must be said.

The man's features seemed to draw together almost imperceptibly.

The eyes narrowed; the nostrils, the lips became pinched. She could hear the long drawn breath.

"You are always thinking of her."

"I can't help it. She is flesh of my flesh, blood of my blood. I am her mother."

"And am I not her father?"

She smiled wistfully. "That is not quite the same thing."

"You are without a stick of pride."

"No, no! I have pride, but it is the pride of pity, the pride of love. I cannot crush out either at command from you. It is five years since you denied her."

"Ah!" He was one of those men whose faces grow white when angered. All the blood went with a rush to his heart, leaving his mind clear and cold. "I have told you never to mention her. I have no daughter."

"I have. And oh, I think of her at night! Where is she? Is she dead, alive, in misery? She, too, has pride. For she has never written but once."

"I tell you I have no daughter."

"And I repeat I have. And if I did not depend upon you for my bread and butter I would seek and find her. In my heart I have never forgotten her."

"She is still more to you than I ever was."

"No. Since that day when you ceased to be my lover. Money and pomp and false pride have robbed me of both my daughter and my lover."

He sat down. "This seems to be a crisis, Jane." He spoke gently now.

"I want her."

"Listen. Was I the tyrant, the ogre? Did I ever deny her anything in reason? Did I not do my duty in laying all the facts before her and proving them—that the man was a youthful blackleg, a gambler, a handsome scoundrel, the son of one of the greatest rascals in the state? God knows it was not that she had chosen as her lover a poor young man, honest?"

He paused passionately.

"I know as well as you do that love is something we cannot harness and drive. But in the face of all these facts she ran away and married him. I have spoken. I disowned my daughter the day she disowned me, for that's what she did, and so long as I live she shall not enter this house. When I am dead and gone you may do as you see fit with my money. I make no reservations."

"She may be hungry and cold."

"Am I to blame?—Jane, you are wrong. Money has not made me a hard man, but it has given me something to think of. That girl's foolishness seemed to change my heart into stone. I have never said anything, but I know that you gave her your inheritance. It was yours, to be dumped as you pleased. Doubtless she dumped it into his lap. New listen. Rather than have this subject brought up again I will meet you halfway. Find her if you can. Food and clothe her if she is hungry and cold, for I am certain the scoundrel left her when he found that he could not get his crooked fingers into my wallet. But never let me hear her spoken of again in this house. Never bring her to me, hoping that I shall forgive her. That is the last word from me on the subject."

With this he left the room.

Quarter after 10.
The old man heard the message from the door.

Under the study lamp he had gazed at the new photograph. Slowly he laid down the faded photograph he touched the hand pen, and the living footprint came from the hall,
