MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

Gypsy Smith's Coming, Armenian Swindlers, Marriage Laws, Subjects Considered.

The regular meeting of the Ministerial Association was held on Monday afternoon at the manse. It was decided to call the attention of the ministers of the county to and have them announce to their congregations the coming of Dr. Roy K. Flannagan, State Health Officer, who will speak at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of February 16, at the Farmers' Institute and at 7:30 at night in the Baptist Church.

The night lecture will be illustrated. Dr. Flannagan is here in the interest of Cooperative Extension Work. He has been asked to remain over Sunday and speak in the Presbyterian Church at a union meeting of men and boys on "Personal Purity."

The secretary, Rev. Alford Kelley, gave notice that he had received word from the inspector in charge of Immigration Service of the U. S. Department of Labor at Norfolk, stating that the two Armenians, who were recently in Manassas, are probably among the number of Armenian swindlers recently arrested and they are now being detained at Kinston, N. C.

Mr. W. R. Morton, inspector in charge, says it is surprising how many testimonials there are from governors, college presidents, consuls, ministers of the gospel and others endorsing these swindlers merely on a paper that they themselves prepared. The secretary also reported that nothing definite had been received from Gypsy Smith, jr. A conference will be held with him at the tabernacle in Washington on Thursday afternoon of next week, when the matter will be fully discussed, word having been received this morning that he can come here in June, but not in August or September.

The Association voted to encourage the efforts being made by the State Student Y. M. C. A. Secretary to establish in Manassas a community secretary, who would work with the College and High School students and young men and boys generally of the town.

The Virginia marriage laws allow anybody to get a license, no matter how physically diseased, mentally abnormal or morally degenerate. The county clerk has no discretion in the matter, being obliged to grant a license even to criminals. Accordingly, the Association resolved to request our representative in the next legislature to introduce a bill requiring some physical and mental qualifications on the part of persons seeking a marriage license.

As the laws of the state prohibit the sale of cigarettes to minors and as the Association believes the business men observe the law, a resolution was passed appealing to the men of the town who are interested in good manhood, to refrain from giving cigarettes to boys lest they form a habit that is so injurious to health.

The next meeting will be held at the manse, on Wednesday, March 7, at 2 p. m.

The mothers' meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held last Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. B. T. Hodge. Mrs. Burdge had charge of the meeting. The subject discussed was "The Heart of the Mother." Several interesting articles were read and discussions and talks followed. After the meeting the social hour was enjoyed by all. Delightful refreshments were served by the hostess.

URGED TO BUY AT ONCE

Farmers Advised to Order Fertilizer Ahead to Prevent Car Shortage.

Farmers are being urged to order out their fertilizer shipments immediately in order that they may not suffer from a car shortage, should one develop in the late spring. Shippers are pointing out that farmers who delay their orders may find themselves unable to get supplies in time to follow the "plant early" plan which has been advocated as one of the most effective methods of fighting the boll weevil.

In view of the unusual demands for box cars, now being made by shippers in other lines of business, the supply of cars available for the movement of fertilizer may not be as large this season as in former years and it is therefore important that shipments of fertilizer be spread over a longer period.

Should the great majority of farmers wait until the fertilizer is actually needed to place their orders, it is feared that this in itself might create a car shortage which would cause many of them to be disappointed. Dealers stress the point that early ordering is equally important for the farmer who buys only one ton and for the planter who buys by the car load.

DR. FLANNAGAN TO SPEAK

State Health Official Will Come to Manassas Next Week on Farmers' Day.

(Miss Lillian V. Gilbert, County Home Demonstration Agent.)

One of the interesting and instructive features of the Farmers' Institute on Friday, February 16, will be an address in the afternoon by Dr. Roy K. Flannagan, assistant health officer for Virginia. Every effort is being made to make this an occasion worthy of Dr. Flannagan's coming.

On the evening of the 16th, beginning at 8 o'clock, Dr. Flannagan will give an illustrated lecture in the Baptist Church. These lectures will be along the lines of the health work of the cooperative extension work in the south. All home demonstration clubs in the county have received programs.

It is earnestly desired that the county be well represented at these meetings and it is requested that the ministers throughout the county, from the pulpit the coming Sunday, announce the plan for the work, and the time. Especially are the mothers and fathers urged to hear Dr. Flannagan, for he has a message of special interest to them.

It is hoped that arrangements can be made for Dr. Flannagan to visit the schools during the morning, before the time of the opening sessions of the Farmers' Institute.

The county home demonstration agent will be in Blacksburg from February 12 to February 23 in conference with the state workers and agents who are out in the field work. Although the call to Blacksburg comes at this time the work will go along smoothly. Plans for the club work have been arranged and all teachers, club members and demonstrators are urged to let their requests be known, as important mail will be forwarded to Blacksburg to the agent.

The ladies of the Presbyterian Church will give a supper for the men and boys on Friday, February 16, at 6 p. m. at the manse. All the male members of the church and congregation are formally invited to be present. As the church has no money except by the offering plan, "freely ye have sown, freely give," there will be no charge for the supper.

GOOD ROADS MASS MEETING

Conner's Hall, Saturday, 2 P. M.

Every one in Prince William County is urged to attend a GOOD ROADS MASS MEETING next Saturday afternoon, (tomorrow) at 2 o'clock. There is real business to be done and your presence is needed.

J. J. CONNER, Supervisor.

C. R. C. JOHNSON, President Business League.

WHY NOT A CORN CLUB? CLIFTON LEAGUE IN SESSION

Formation of Agricultural Clubs Advised by Agent—Mission of Each Explained.

(C. A. Montgomery, County Demonstration Agent.)

Wouldn't it be well to organize at once corn, pig, canning and poultry clubs in your community; to see your local teachers and through the teachers, the county farm agent or the demonstration agent and the county superintendent of schools to get the work under way?

The mission of the boys' club work is not merely the making of 100 or 200 bushels of corn to the acre but rather the institution of knowledge, ideas and habits of thought and observation that will eventually produce a better farmer and a better citizen. Similarly, canning a few tomatoes is far from being the final aim of the girls' club work; for here, too, it is the making of a better, more adequately equipped woman that is the real aim.

Prizes will be offered in the different clubs for best work or production; in addition to this there will be special prizes—such as the ten-day course at Harrisonburg State Normal, including domestic science and arts, manual training, etc.—to the winner in the canning club.

With the above conception of the work, let us not put too high a valuation on the material prizes offered. These are something, it is true, but the greatest and most enduring prize of all comes to the boy or girl who works faithfully and conscientiously with his project, keeping an exact record, and at the end of the year possesses knowledge and inspiration that in after years will make for better farms and better homes.

IMPORTANT U. D. C. MEETING

The regular meeting of the Daughters of the Confederacy was held on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. W. Sinclair. The hostess was greatly gratified by the large attendance, especially on the part of two elderly ladies, who have not been in the habit of being present. Mrs. G. W. Covington, vice president, opened the meeting in the absence of Mrs. C. M. Larkin, president, who was detained but arrived later and assumed the duties of her office. After the payment of dues, the outline plan of historic work as arranged by the Virginia Division and the U. D. C. historian was read by Mrs. Sinclair, the local chapter historian.

The constitutional quota was voted for the scholarship in Fredericksburg Normal School, thus providing for the education of a girl from the fourth district. There was a debate on the question, "Was the expedition of the 'Star of the West' a prior act of war?" The question was decided in the affirmative.

A second subject for brief discussion was the origin of "The Bonnie Blue Flag" and its author, Mr. McCarthy. This song was first heard in New Orleans.

The last half of the meeting was given to the enjoyment of Mrs. Sinclair's dainty refreshments, which delightfully interspersed the social converse of the congenial associates.

The Jeffersonian Society program for Friday night includes War Stories by Rev. John Copeland and a debate on the Monroe doctrine by Mr. Copeland and Mr. Martin and General Parliamentary Practice.

Members Vote to Put Steps on Hill—Address Made by Rev. Alford Kelley.

(Mrs. Mary E. Quigg, Secretary.)

A meeting of the Clifton School and Civic League was held Friday, February 2. After the opening exercises, which consisted of Scripture reading, prayer, two songs by the high school girls, reading of the minutes and the treasurer's report, a digest of the compulsory education law was given by Rev. Alford Kelley, pastor of the Presbyterian Church.

The question of medical inspection of the school was discussed and the secretary was authorized to write Dr. Brooks as to what could be done to have such a survey.

The league decided to place steps on the hill approaching the school building. Miss Jenkins was authorized to see about having the work done.

The matter of having a fire drill was discussed. No definite decision was made except that the majority present thought it should be part of the curriculum of the school.

The members decided to have the program prepared and published before the next meeting and to have the secretary report the meetings to the Fairfax and Manassas papers.

The amount of $2 asked by the state Cooperative Education Association was voted to be paid by the secretary.

The society adjourned to meet again in March.

EASTERN COLLEGE NOTES

Mrs. Hervis U. Roop, of Eastern College, entertained at tea, Thursday afternoon, in honor of Mrs. G. J. Kramm, of Indianapolis. A delightful entertainment was given by Miss Mabel Martin, who read; also Mrs. Roop, Miss Swartley and Miss Margaret Roop, who sang a number of selections. Mrs. Roop was assisted at the tea-table by Miss Margaret Roop.

Those present were Mrs. C. J. Kramm, Mrs. Orville Watson Mosher, jr., Mrs. Ballantyne Patterson, Mrs. Chloe Lay Hodge, Mrs. J. E. Jordan, Mrs. Guida King, Mrs. Richwine and Mrs. H. U. Roop, Miss Blanche Wharton Sheer, Miss Mabel Martin, Miss Ernestine Moyer, Miss Ruth Swartley, Miss Mary Cattin and Miss Margaret Roop.

A number of Eastern College students have had seats reserved for "Ben Hur" which will be played at the New National Theatre, Saturday matinee and evening.

The Eastern College basketball team left yesterday morning on a trip which will occupy the entire week. During this time they expect to play Massanutten, Fishburne, Augusta Military Academy and other prominent schools in the southern part of the state.

A very enjoyable dinner-party was enjoyed by a number of the Eastern College students, Saturday evening. The table decorations, favors and place cards were very attractive. Covers were laid for fourteen guests; Mrs. Ballantyne Patterson being the guest of honor.

The Jeffersonian Society program for Friday night includes War Stories by Rev. John Copeland and a debate on the Monroe doctrine by Mr. Copeland and Mr. Martin and General Parliamentary Practice.

NEW BOOKS FOR LIBRARY

Lieut. Round Acknowledges Offers of Rare and Valuable Historic Volumes.

Mr. George C. Round desires to acknowledge the offer of the following books for the public library:

Two large quarto volumes containing a history of the North American Indian, from Mr. C. A. Heineken, of Haymarket.

Four volumes containing the history of suffrage by Susan B. Anthony, from Mrs. Estelle B. Day, of Relay, Md.

Three rare and valuable volumes, from Mr. John S. Ewell, of Hickory Grove.

1. The Revolution in America by the Abbe Raynal, Edinburg, 1783. This book gives the view of an educated Scotchman of the causes and outcome of our Revolutionary War—a most interesting book.

2. An Abridgment of the Laws of Virginia, January 1, 1758.

3. Rayner's Life, Writings and Opinions of Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence, of the Statutes of Virginia for Religious Freedom and father of the University of Virginia.

W. C. T. U. UNION MEETING

Numerous Important Selections Read and Stimulating Addresses Given.

The union service held in Grace M. E. Church, South, on the night of the 24th of January, under the auspices of the Manassas Christian Temperance Union, was largely attended. It proved to be an interesting and instructive meeting. After singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name," the scripture lesson was read by Mrs. E. Wood Weir.

Prayer for Divine guidance for the President of the United States, Congress and those who occupy places of public trust, and leaders in the movement for national constitutional prohibition, was offered by Mr. G. C. Round and others.

Mrs. G. D. Baker read a section from the national president's annual address, relating to some recent victories, followed by Mrs. J. M. Bell, who also read from the president's address a selection relating to national constitutional prohibition.

Some essentials for insuring permanent victory were given in five minute talks. "Enforcement of Law" was treated by Rev. Alford Kelley.

"Appreciation of Personal Responsibility" was the topic of Rev. J. Halpenny and "Personal Abstinence" was the subject of Rev. E. A. Roads.

Mrs. Randall read a section from the president's address and a reference to the well known fact that the same ships, carrying missionaries to foreign fields, have at the same time carried heavy consignments of whiskey to the same lands.

"Definite Co-operation" was the topic of a five-minute talk by Dr. H. U. Roop. "Definite Prayer" by Rev. T. D. D. Clark and "Definite Giving" by Hon. C. J. Meetze.

A generous collection followed, after which there was a prohibition song by Dr. and Mrs. Roop. The meeting closed by the benediction pronounced by Dr. Roop.

"Virginia's track and field squad," says a news dispatch, "is putting in some hard licks on their outdoor board track in preparation for the first annual meet of the year in Washington. Among the four or five hundred athletes made last time in the winter-mile is mentioned the name of Roswell Round, of Manassas."

MORE YOUTHFUL BURGLARS

Is There a Young Gang Here or Are Former Thieves Imitated?

The wave of crime, especially in the form of burglary, that has been sweeping our large cities and the country generally, seems to have struck Manassas monthly. A series of robberies was chronicled in December and another was recorded in January. February has its quota also.

Last night Dowell's Pharmacy was visited. An alley window was raised, but a stack of boxes, bottles and other stock would have been thrown down by persons entering, so the thieves left rather than risk exposure by the noise of the falling goods.

At Wenrich's jewelry store the back window lock was broken by slipping up some instrument between the sashes. A turning lathe at the window was in the way of a convenient entrance, so the thieves then went to a side window adjoining McCoy's garage. Here the cutting of slats out of the window shutters set off the burglar alarm and the would-be intruders ran away.

W. N. Wenrich, who sleeps in the second story, had been awakened by the noise and come to the window. He was in time to see a boy running away and fired his revolver at the retreating figure, but failed to hit him. Mr. Wenrich noticed that the time was four o'clock this morning.

Newman & Trusler's store was likewise visited and here the burglars were more successful. They broke the side window latch in the same manner as they had done at Wenrich's store and easily secured an entrance. They took three cheap watches worth respectively $6, $3 and $2, an air rifle, about $1 in pennies and several pocket knives. They left a number of valuable watches, showing that the burglars must have been children who did not know the value of the articles within reach. Children's tracks on the outside are another indication that the intruders were young in years though old in experience as thieves.

In all the burglaries of the past three months the tracks left have been those of children and the articles stolen have been those used by children or goods that were inexpensive, the valuable stock being untouched.

Have some former thieves, as yet not caught, been repeating their acts; has the example of former burglars been imitated by another set of youthful criminals; is there an organized gang of petty thieves here; or has some Fagin started a school for thieves in Manassas?

RESULT OF DEBATE

The Fraternal Americans held a debate on Tuesday night, the subject being, "Resolved, That the United States should adopt compulsory universal military training and service." The affirmative debaters were Mr. Powell Metz (in the absence of C. A. Sinclair, Esq.) and Rev. Alford Kelley; negative, Mr. Jesse M. Bell and Rev. E. A. Roads.

In order to have all present pay strict attention to the arguments it was decided to have the members present act as judges. The decision was given to the affirmative by a strong majority. On Tuesday, February 2, ten days before Washington's birthday there will be a Washington Symposium. At this various questions will be discussed. The members of the society are serving refreshments after the literary treat, so that it is possible that canned cherries will be served as part of the menu.

NEW STATE PENSION LAW

Member of County Pension Board Calls Special Attention to Provisions

Mr. F. A. Cockrell, member of the Prince William county board of pension commissioners, directs attention to certain provisions of the new pension law. A notable feature of the new ruling is the requirement that all applications for pensions shall be filed with the clerk of the court and not with the pension board.

Extracts from the law follow:

Applications heretofore allowed to remain on roll until removed for cause; others to comply with requirements; no special act for relief to be passed.

SEC. 14. That all soldiers, sailors, or marines, and the widows of any such, whose applications have been heretofore allowed and whose names have been enrolled, as required by the several pension acts heretofore passed by the General Assembly of Virginia shall remain upon the said pension rolls until their names are removed therefrom for the causes provided by this act. And that all others, before they shall be entitled to any relief under the provisions of this act, shall comply with the requirements thereof, and no special act for the relief of any such soldier, sailor, or marine, or the widow of any such, shall hereafter be passed by the General Assembly.

Clerks to prepare lists of applications and endorse same; other duties of clerks as to same.

SEC. 15. That the clerks of each of the courts hereinafter mentioned shall endorse upon each application filed in his office the date of filing, and shall, at least fifteen days before any regular term of the court, prepare a list, alphabetically arranged, of all applications filed in his office twenty days before any regular term of the court, which list shall set forth the full name of the applicant, and whether the claim be of a soldier, sailor, or marine, or widow, the cause of disability or death, the date of death, and the name of the command of the soldier, sailor, or marine, or of the deceased, and said clerk shall make three certified copies thereof, and shall deliver one copy thereof to the chairman of the board of commissioners hereinafter provided for, and post one copy thereof at the front door of the courthouse of the city or county, and, on the first day of the next regular term of the court, shall deliver one copy thereof to the court, together with the applications therein listed.

Courts to examine and consider applications, certificate of court, hearing in case of objection; duties of clerk.

SEC. 16. That the circuit court of each county, and the corporation or hustings court of each city shall, at each regular term of the court, take up, examine and consider all applications certified by the clerk thereof, as aforesaid, and if such court shall be satisfied that the requirements of this act have been substantially complied with, and that the application is supported by the affidavits and certificates herein required, or by oral testimony in open court (if the court shall require oral testimony), of persons of well-known reputation for truth, honesty and integrity, and satisfied as well of the justice of the claim of the said applicant if there be no objections filed or offered by the board of commissioners hereinafter named, or by any other person, to the said application being certified, shall certify the same to the auditor of public accounts.

In case there shall be filed or offered by the said board of commissioners, or any other person, objection to the certifying of any such application, the court shall cause the applicant and such other persons as it may deem necessary of which either party may require, to appear before the court at such time as the court may fix, and after a full hearing shall determine the case according to the justice thereof. Such application shall be disallowed, shall endorse, or cause to be endorsed, upon the application, the reasons for disallowing the same. And the clerk of said court shall enter upon the minute book of the court an order showing all applications allowed or disallowed, and shall certify a copy of the said order, under the seal of the court, to the auditor of public accounts, and forward the same to the said auditor, with all applications, either allowed or disallowed, at any regular term of the court.

GENERAL STONEWALL JACKSON

More than half a century since the death of General Stonewall Jackson, recognition of his great military genius has become so firmly and universally established that there is increasing interest in all of the details connected with his life. The influences which contributed to the molding of a character that stands out so conspicuously appeal powerfully to this period of war.

Biographies upon biographies have been written about him by conscientious narrators of keen discernment and acknowledged literary ability, some of whom were intimately associated with him in the later years of his life until it would seem that the subject had been more than exhausted, but each contribution only added zest to the demand for more.

To reveal something of the less-known part of General Jackson's life, and to preserve in a permanent form such facts as might be of additional interest to his admirers, his nephew, Thomas Jackson Arnold, after years of painstaking labor, has assembled a mass of facts, which have just been published by the Fleming H. Revell Co. in a volume entitled "Early Life and Letters of General (Stonewall) Thomas J. Jackson."

The author, a son of General Jackson's only sister, was associated with him more or less daily during a considerable period of his life, and knew intimately many of his boyhood companions, a number of them his relatives, who have contributed from memory to the richness of his collection. From more than 100 letters of General Jackson's private correspondence, of a most intimate nature, written to the General's sister during many years, the author draws interesting sidelights on his youthful ambitions and experiences, his home and college life, and the steady and determined purpose to succeed that characterized his every undertaking.

No attempt has been made to embrace in this volume the period of the War Between the States, but the author directs attention to an interesting revelation, gleaned from the correspondence with his sister, of the seemingly intuitive perception with which General Jackson, as early as the year 1855, penetrated future political events, and foresaw, not only a coming effort at separation of States, but that such separation would be accompanied by strife.

"So expectant was he of this," says the writer, "that he stated in his letters his unwillingness to invest more than a limited part of his money in a contemplated purchase of public lands, in any of the free States, for fear that he might lose the property so acquired by confiscation. Further, the expression in his letters leaves no uncertain conjecture as to where he expected to stand when such a crisis should arrive."

In giving the public the benefit of this accurate insight into the early life of General Jackson, the author has rendered a distinct service. It will be warmly appreciated by the countless thousands whose hearts have become a sacred shrine for perpetuating the memory of this great soldier of the South.—Times-Dispatch.

A good word for the American newspaper from a foreigner is—if not ironical—a tribute indeed. According to Percy Grainger, our journals fill a vast place in our civilization. In Europe, people have more music and more art and more religion than we have. But what of that? "Your newspapers," the pianist tells us, "fill the empty void." That every one reads them is the first observation of visitors to our shores, but how few of these have noticed that the reader "finds therein some truth, some facts"! Conscience compels Mr. Grainger to add "some amusement," and tact enables him to speak inoffensively of still another asset of our press, to which he refers with polite vagueness as "many things to appeal to the imagination." But even politeness did not require him to go the length of praising "the comics." As if determined to please us utterly, he professes to admire these on his own account. "They are decidedly an American expression," he thinks, and he calls them artistic "because they appeal to the imagination and amuse." Judging by this, we have art to burn.—New York Evening Post.

"If everybody would adopt the policy of Mrs. Ethel Byrne," says the Newport News Times-Herald, "the high-cost-of-living problem would soon be solved. But it recalls the experience of the fisherman's horse that was fed with green shavings, as soon as the horse learned to live on such provender, it died."

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE OFFER AID

It has been said that the American people have a consuming passion for organization. They get together quickly and easily into societies and associations. They are so decidedly heterogeneous that they organize upon the slightest pretext. The result is that every town and city has its societies and these societies are associated with similar ones in other cities and states and thus national organizations are formed. Some are fraternal, some patriotic, some sociological, some industrial, some religious, some scientific, some merely social. All of them have a useful function, in making the people better acquainted, in enlarging the field of individual usefulness, in broadening the minds and applying helpfully the energies of the members.

At such a juncture as the present, with the country on the verge of a conflict with a foreign power, these organizations, with their membership of millions, are of great value to the government. They form the centers of citizenship activity. They are headed by selected leaders, who command the respect of the members, and who possess presumably certain qualities as executives. The mechanism of great potential action is thus prepared for application to the needs of the government in its hour of need.

Already these organizations are demonstrating their usefulness, especially among the women of the country. On every hand are signs of activity in anticipation of the call to duty. Offers of assistance are pouring upon the administration. Preparations are making for turning the organizations into helpful work, for nursing in the event of hostilities, for supplying furnishings, for guard service, for numerous other activities. The coiled springs of popular association are giving forth their stored power.

Perhaps this great latent force has not been sufficiently appreciated heretofore or adequately measured. There should be at this moment a clearing house for the various elements of helpfulness that are being brought forward. Confusion may result from too many organizations working along the same lines, overlapping in their action and fields. In a national crisis such as that which now menaces the supreme need is of organization at the top, to coordinate all the forces of the people, who are after all the body and brains and spirit. Whether the people act individually or through their previously formed societies and associations there must be a controlling guidance that is superior to all other authorities.—Washington Star.

FINANCING THE FARMERS

Under the new Federal farm loan act, now being put into operation, the farmers of the country will find it much easier to secure money to make needed improvements or for the purchase of live stock, while it will be easier also for landless men to purchase a farm.

It is not merely in the reduction of the interest charges that the farmers will be benefited. As the new law is being interpreted and applied, it becomes evident that the new land banks will stand ready to lend money on farm mortgage security. The interest charges will be not more than 6 per cent nor more than 1 per cent above the rate paid on the bonds sold by the banks. If 4 1/2 per cent bonds should be issued, the rate charged on loans would be 5 1/2 per cent or less.

There will be no commissions or bonuses. The loans will be made for periods of time ranging from five to four years, thus eliminating the trouble and expense of frequent renewals.

No effort should be spared by the government in educating the public to the double benefits derived from investment in farm bonds. American money invested in foreign securities, which have been made so attractive recently, may be advantageous to the investor, but the advantage stops there. Investment in the bonds issued by the farm land banks brings the additional benefit of increased national prosperity.

The new rural credits system is in line with the protective tariff system. It offers an opportunity for investments in such a way that Americans not only invest their money, but keep it at home for the development of agriculture and industry. One hundred dollars invested in a farm loan bond not only aids the farmer to increase the size and quality of his crops, but enables him likewise to buy more improved machinery. The money thus invested will keep on working in this country, aiding manufacturers as well as the farmers.

At this time, when the reserves of the banks are piling up and when savings have increased enormously, it is gratifying that this new form of investment should be offered to the American people.—Washington Post.

Over and against the wail that is coming up from nearly every newspaper office in the country, the following from the Hanover Progress is refreshing: "As we stated last week, the Progress will be enlarged into an eight-page sheet next week. True to our name, we are beginning to see some real progress." The high, and still advancing, cost of print paper does not frighten the esteemed contemporary.—Times-Dispatch.

LETTER FROM MR. ROUND

Government Purchase of Battlefield Urged by Representative C. C. Carlin.

MR. EDITOR—The last day President Taft was in office, he signed a bill authorizing the Secretary of War to report as to the advisability of the United States acquiring title to the battlefield of Bull Run. Secretary Garrison, in eight weeks after, appointed an army board which made a report to Congress December, 1913, recommending the purchase of the Henry Farm and lands near Groveton, 273 acres in all.

Our Congressman, Mr. Carlin, at the beginning of the present Congress introduced a bill to carry out the recommendations of the department. He has been making special effort to secure its passage at the present session. He has secured a re-print, 2,000 copies, of the report of the army board, the first edition being wholly exhausted owing to the great demand therefor.

The report contains a map and exhibits which include the hearings before the committee given to the veterans of the Blue and the Gray and to the Daughters of the Confederacy, and much historical matter nowhere else obtainable. The document makes a pamphlet of 46 pages and any of your readers could no doubt secure a copy by applying by card to Mr. Carlin at once before the present edition is distributed. Ask for House Bill No. 8, 64th Congress, and House Document No. 491, 63rd Congress.

Mr. Carlin, as is well known, is making strenuous efforts to secure good roads for our district. These two propositions taken together are so manifestly to the advantage of all Northern Virginia, I bespeak for both the support of all citizens of our country in these efforts of Mr. Carlin. Our nation is arranging to expend its billions in preparedness for the future and it should see the propriety of appropriating a few thousand to preserve for posterity the memorials and teachings of the past.

GEORGE C. ROUND, Manassas, Va., Feb. 5, 1917.

HIGH SCHOOL BASKETBALL

Girls and Boys Play Hard But Win Only One in Five Games.

Last Saturday night, in Conner's Hall the basketball teams representing Manassas High School dropped two games; the boys being defeated by Warrenton High School, while the girls met defeat at the hands of the Delta Sigma Girls, of Washington.

Of the two, the girls' game was the most interesting. The Delta Sigma Girls presented a team much heavier and taller than the local girls, and showed the result of better coaching and teamwork. The local girls played a fine game and should be praised for their good showing against a more experienced organization. The game was close throughout, the final score being 28 19.

The game between the Manassas and Warrenton High boys was a one-sided affair from the local standpoint. The home team displayed their poorest form of the season and Warrenton had little trouble in defeating them by the score of 44 8.

The Manassas High School basketball team returned Wednesday night from a three game trip, winning one game and losing two.

Showing a reversal of form, they had little difficulty in disposing of the team representing Culpeper High School, on Tuesday afternoon. The game was characterized by the passing and shooting of the entire Manassas team. The final score was 60-20.

After making a quick trip to Remington, and with only a few hours rest, the second game was lost to Remington High School by the overwhelming score of 83-17. The score does not indicate the closeness of the game, as the smallness of the hall greatly handicapped the visitors. Ferguson, of Remington, was the star of the game.

Wednesday afternoon the team encountered the fast and strong team of Woodberry Forest. Several teams were used by Woodberry in defeating the Manassas team by the large score of 67-16.

REPORTS ON PRINCE WILLIAM COWS

Official Tester of County Association Finds Many Fine Dairy Animals in this Section of Virginia.

(H. W. Sanders, Tester and Secretary of the Prince William Cow Testing Association)

The table given here is a report of the Prince William Cow Testing Association which was organized last fall with a membership of twenty-one. The record shows briefly some of the results of the second month's testing. The association now includes twenty-five herds, or approximately 450 cows, among which are to be found a majority of the best dairy animals in this section of the county.

The standard adopted by the association for cows attaining the honor roll is forty pounds of butterfat per month. Judging from this long table, however, it would seem that we have set our standard a little too low, even though it is the same as that used by other associations in the state. The number of cows tested in January was 422, making the percentage of honor roll cows 7.8.

Jephson's Discovery

By HAROLD CARTER

(Copyright, 1916, by W. G. Chapman.)

It had been a slashing day on the exchange. Interests which Jephson had thought at comity had combined against him. Jephson was ruined.

It was the last episode of a long-drawn-out fight against him, in which one man, with a paltry five millions, had fought twenty times his wealth, had fought a losing battle for weeks, culminating in this day.

Bitterly Jephson reflected that somebody in his office had betrayed him. It was Edgar, his clerk, most probably. Jephson smiled cynically as, beaten and helpless, he watched the suave assistant gather his papers together.

"We're done for, sir," said Edgar. "I think so," answered Jephson calmly.

Miss Garrett, his stenographer, put the cover on her typewriter. The clerks in the outer room had already departed. Each was under a month's notice, issued at the beginning of the fight, and revocable in case of victory.

They had mostly found other berths long since. "Edgar," said Jephson suddenly, "you have got another position?"

"No, sir. I thought I'd stay as long as you wanted me." "That will do," said the ruined man, with a sudden outbreak of temper. "You can go. It is no use coming back. I will send you a check tomorrow."

Edgar took his hat and left the room. Miss Garrett put on hers and went to the ladies' room to put on her veil. Jephson was left alone.

It had taken him five years to jump from obscurity into the light of pub-pay, and the office had been at sixes and sevens till she came back. And to think that the girl was a common thief!

He opened a drawer and took out a revolver. He always kept it there because he had frequently to work at night, with a hundred thousand in his safe. He could end all his troubles by the least pressure of his finger on the trigger.

He raised it toward his forehead and hesitated. He was not in any hurry. He wanted to deliberate upon the act. What would men say of it? And did he care what men said?

The sound of light footsteps outside startled him. He thrust the revolver hastily into a drawer, and looked up to see Miss Garrett. She hesitated and then came up to him.

"I must say something before I go," she said anxiously. "I should have told you long before, but then the mischief was done. Mr. Edgar has betrayed you to the interests on the exchange."

Astounded, Jephson rose to his feet, and at that moment Edgar came hurriedly in.

"I saw Miss Garrett come into the office, sir," he cried, "and I decided that I couldn't accept your decision. I charge her in your presence with—"

"Steady," said Jephson. "Miss Garrett has the floor."

Millicent Garrett turned upon Edgar with flaming eyes.

"He stole that confidential paper from your desk, Mr. Jephson!" she cried. "I was in the cloakroom Saturday afternoon about a month ago, and I saw him come in and fit a key to your office door. I knew he had no business there, and so—well, I watched him. And I saw him unlock your desk and take that O. & F. paper from it."

"Why—" shouted Edgar. "Go on, Miss Garrett," said Jephson, raising his hand for Edgar to be silent.

"I saw where he put it and I contrived to get it. He didn't know that the key of my typewriter desk fits that lower third drawer. Well, it does. And I took it. And I kept it, so that he shouldn't sell you out. But he had done so already, evidently."

Miss Garrett's eyes flashed fire. "Why didn't you give it back to me?" demanded Jephson.

"Because I wasn't sure," she faltered. "I have been watching him. And in the last week we have all known you had been betrayed."

"Why, you told me to take that paper, sir!" said Edgar.

"I did," said Jephson briskly. "You see, Miss Garrett, you acted in my interests, but each of you suspected the other."

"He suspected me!" gasped Miss Garrett.

"I did," said Edgar, a little sheepishly.

"Well, you'd better shake hands," said Jephson briskly. "Shake hands, fall you! That's better. And business will be resumed at the same old stand tomorrow, and we'll fight it out as long as there's rent in the bank and petty cash in the stamp drawer."

For he knew that with subordinates as jealous for him as that no man could ultimately fail. And Jephson's heart went up in thankfulness that the disaster had revealed this asset to him at last—loyal hearts, such as a man only finds when he needs them.

MAY ASTONISH THE WORLD

Find of Prehistoric Skeletons That It Is Believed Will Prove of Greatest Value.

Near the outskirts of Los Angeles is a bit of ground underneath which lies a bed of asphaltum. In this thick, black substance are concealed thousands of skeletons which once belonged to strange, prehistoric animals.

The owner of the 35-acre tract has presented this subterranean treasury of ancient secrets to the city of Los Angeles with the understanding that the search for fossils is to go on and that the skeletons recovered are to be housed in a museum to be maintained upon the spot.

The LaBrea ranch, on which prehistoric bone discoveries were first made three years ago, has already produced the most striking collection of skeletons in prehistoric animals in existence. The country in that section must have been a favorite haunt for strange animals of all kinds in the dim ages of the past. The theory is that these animals wandered unsuspectingly into the asphaltum area, were overcome by fumes, and expired. The asphaltum preserved their bones in perfect condition. Up to the present the complete skeletons of 16 imperial elephants have been recovered, together with hundreds of skeletons of unknown species, including enormous birds.

This rich discovery is destined to prove of immense importance to scientists, who, up to the present, have been obliged to reproduce prehistoric creatures from more or less incomplete specimens. Montana, Nebraska, and Wyoming have yielded remarkable fossils. These, however, have usually been recovered only at great labor, the bones being incased in solid stone or buried deep in the earth. The bones on the LaBrea, however, are easily recovered, and it may be possible to construct from them a story of the prehistoric animal kingdom which some day will amaze the world.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

ROAD BUILDING

ROAD ENGINEER IS ESSENTIAL

Expert Points Out Reasons Why Highway Improvement Work is Inefficient in Many Places.

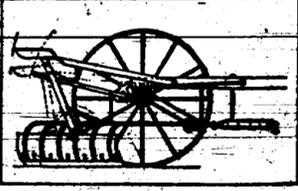

James Leland Stamford, a highway engineer who made a nation-wide investigation of road work for the national committee on prisons, which is interested in promoting road building by convicts, says in regard to the lack of efficient supervision of road work generally:

"In 44 states county road work is carried on under the supervision of county commissioners; in other states it is under the control of the sheriff. These authorities are not trained for their work and the road work is costly and inefficient. All counties carrying on road work should obtain the services of a county road engineer who is acceptable to the state road authorities and able to work in co-operation with them."

ROAD DRAG IS A NECESSITY

Split-Log Affair Was First, Cheapest and Easiest Made—Various Patent Types on Market.

Road building becomes more a necessity and less a luxury every year, though the advance of the automobile in the farming business is largely responsible for the awakening in the rural districts. The split-log drag was the first, cheapest and easiest made, that appeared in the central West, and it is still popular. Various patent types have appeared on the market, the latest patent being granted on the drag shown here. The angle of the cutting blade may be varied by means of a lever.—Farming Business.

IMPROVE ROADS TO SCHOOLS

Massachusetts, Ohio and Indiana Lead in Number of Schools and in Better Highways.

There are about 2,000 consolidated rural schools in the United States, with Massachusetts, Ohio and Indiana in the van. It is significant to note that about one-third of the roads in these states have been improved. The boy or girl, who formerly stayed away from school because the road was a sea of mud, is transported in school-wagons, which are sent out every day to gather up the children and to take them home again in the evening. All the children within a radius of several miles are thus provided with modern school facilities.

ROUNDED ROAD SHEDS WATER

Big Essential Is Disposition of Surface Water—Proper Drainage Is Solution of Problem.

Good roads means mainly disposing of the water. Nearly always a road that runs can be made by proper drainage. The King-dragged road is easily made and sustained by running a split log or plank drag over it when it is wet from a previous rain. The surface of this dragged road bakes and makes a rounded roadway that sheds water, stays smooth and solid, and makes the best all-round highway on earth.

AID FOR YELLOWSTONE TRAIL

Item of $5,000 in Government Appropriation Bill to Assist in Improving That Highway.

The government appropriation bill contains an item of $5,000 for the benefit of the Yellowstone trail, to assist in improving that transcontinental highway across the Standing Rock Indian reservation in South Dakota. This item is there because of the recognized value of the Yellowstone trail as a transcontinental road, and the money that counties and states and individuals are pouring into the improvement of the road.

The cattle will soon be on pasture. One necessity is salt, and plenty of it. It should be conveniently placed, so the animals can get it when they choose. A box full of salt kept under a shed is best.

German millet requires nearly 100 days to mature and must be sown in May, following rain. Much of the so-called German millet seed on the market is made up of common millet or a mix-

The Rhyme Word

By GEORGE ELMER COBB

"That's luck!" uttered Mr. Lionel Wray, as his daughter at the wheel, their auto crept into the public garage and stopped dead short.

"Yes, I'm thankful to get this far," echoed Lillian Wray with a sigh of vast relief. "I was afraid we would have to be towed into town."

The machine had refused to take a hill on the country road two miles back. However, by using second speed and halting frequently until the carburetor had a normal supply of gas from the choked-up feed pipe, they just managed to gain the garage at a snail's pace.

It was a drowsy mid-afternoon hour and there was only one person in the garage. He might be the proprietor, or a customer, judging from his clothes, and Mr. Wray accosted him with some hesitation and timidity as he made his wants known. Lillian reflected that this stranger, at once interested in their troubles, had a fine intellectual face and she looked gratified when he announced that, although the garage owner and his helper were both away on a smashup job, he felt an ability to help them out.

The young man took off his coat and the sudden transition into a jumper caused Lillian to smile. He spread a tarpaulin under the machine and was soon at work with pump and tools.

"Have to take off the sediment trap cover," finally announced the impromptu mechanic. "It's easy to pump the pipe clear, but it will fill right up again so we might as well make a thorough job of it while we're at it. She's stuck hard, but I fancy I can budge her," and the accommodating young man once more crept out of sight, a formidable wrench in his hand.

It was fully half an hour before he emerged bearing evidences of exhaustive labor and agone, but smiling courteously.

"I got it," he announced with a palpable spice of triumph in his tone and went over to a sink to wash his hands. Lillian edged up to her father.

"Papa, dear," she said, "you will have to let me have some money. I presume this will be quite a bill—that young man had to work dreadfully hard."

"Certainly, how much, daughter? The mischief!"

Going in turn through his pockets, Mr. Wray finding nothing, looked perturbed and dismayed.

"What is it, papa?" questioned Lillian anxiously.

"Bless me! if I haven't left money and check book in my other clothes."

"Oh, papa!" palpitated Lillian with concern. "Only seventy-five cents?" she added, glancing into her purse.

"What will the young man think of us?"

The young man, overhearing, his back to them wiping his hands at the towel, smiled quietly. As he faced about Lillian approached him with timidity.

"The charge, please, please," she faltered.

"Oh, that!" responded Vance Elliott, lightly. "Let me see," and he feigned to consult a written schedule on a desk. "Ah, yes—twenty-five cents."

"Twenty-five?" voiced Lillian faintly.

"Centa," supplied the smiling amateur workman. "You see, we can't call this a regular job, as I am not acting officially. The mechanic's proportion would be a quarter, so—thanks."

Lillian was immensely relieved. She flushed, however, as her eyes met those of this courteous obliging helper. There was a slightly quizzical expression in his glance. Had he overheard her conversation with her father?

Running a Race
A Sermon for Young People
By REV. JAMES M. GRAY, D. D.
Dean of Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run, that ye may obtain. And every man which striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible.—I Cor. 9:24-25.

I have chosen these words because they touch a subject in which most young people are interested in these days—athletics.

Paul was a Roman citizen, but he traveled a good deal in Greece in the course of his missionary work; and it is with this country we chiefly associate the idea of out-door sports. Corinth was a great commercial city of Greece, where they thought and talked about their running races as much as we think and talk about our baseball and football games.

Knowing this, Paul uses an illustration that would attract their attention and impress them with the great Christian truth he wishes to teach. That truth is the future reward those Christians obtain who faithfully serve the Lord Jesus Christ in this life.

The figure is that of a running race. In a real race anyone may not run just because he wishes to do so. He must have certain qualifications and be properly entered in the race.

And it is so in the Christian race of which Paul writes. One must be a Christian before he can enter that race, and all people are not Christians.

But who is a Christian? Some think they are Christians because they are not heathens, or because they live in a Christian land, or because their parents were Christians, or because they try to live a moral life, or because they attend church or Sunday school.

But this is not right. Paul teaches in another place (II Cor. 5:17), that a Christian is a new creature, or a new creation altogether; and this agrees with what Jesus Christ said: "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God" (John 3:3).

And how may one be born again? The gospel of John, 1:12, 13 answers that question when, speaking of Jesus Christ, it says: "As many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name, which were born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God."

We see that to be born again is to receive Jesus Christ as our Savior. And to receive him as our Savior is to believe on him, to put our trust in him to be saved, and pledge ourselves by his grace to follow him as our Lord.

But if you have done this, what then? We come back to our text for answer. Paul says, "Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize?" In other words, all Christians are running in this race, but all will not win the prize. That does not mean that all real Christians are not saved or that all such will not go to heaven.

But it means that it is one thing to be saved and go to heaven and another thing to get the prize Paul talks about. Just what that prize is he teaches on a little later, but here he simply says, "So run, that ye may obtain."

Is not that what we want to do? Do we not want to run successfully? Do we not want to obtain all that God has so lovingly promised us in his Word?

How may we do it? Here is a hint. "And every man which striveth for the mastery," says Paul, "is temperate in all things." You know how it is if you want to be a good all-round athlete. You must take good care of yourself. You must eat the right kind of food, and sleep well, and exercise regularly and practice hard, and all that kind of thing. You cannot afford to be careless in anything if you would win the prize. And so it is in the Christian race. To be "temperate in all things" means that as Christians we must keep a watch upon ourselves.

And this is worth while for Paul says: "They do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible." The winner in the Grecian game felt it reward enough if he had a crown of laurel placed on his head in the presence of the applauding throng. Such a crown would soon wither away, however, but not so the crown which God gives to the victorious saint. That is an incorruptible crown, there is no decay in it and it lasts forever.

What is the nature of that crown? It is hard to express it in human language. Paul was once caught up into Paradise, he tells us, "and heard unspeakable words which it is not possible for man to utter." And this illustrates why we cannot understand much that we accept by faith of "the things which hath prepared for them that love him." They are impossible

Wheat in California.

California has an important wheat crop and need for large bonanza wheat farms is no longer classed as a thing of the past. Twenty years ago it produced 2,000,000 bushels of wheat, shipping much of it to Europe. Now its production will probably be for much more than 4,000,000 bushels, and it will need to ship in other states 10,000,000 bushels or more to meet its own food requirements.

ARE YOU GUILTY?

A FARMER carrying an express package from a big mail-order house was accosted by a local dealer.

"Why didn't you buy that bill of goods from me? I could have saved you the express, and besides you would have been patronizing a home store, which helps pay the taxes and builds up this locality."

The farmer looked at the merchant a moment and then said:

"Why don't you patronize your home paper and advertise? I read it and didn't know that you had the stuff I have here."
