PROF. HODGE'S LECTURE

Eastern College Professor Outlines Plan of World Government.

"Mundane Government, Civil and Ecclesiastical," was the subject of a lecture delivered by Prof. B. T. H. Hodge Tuesday evening in the U. D. C. Chapter Hall for the benefit of war victims.

The scope or aim of the lecture, according to Prof. Hodge, was and is to induce the regenerate followers of Christ to club or league themselves in every community to urge forward an endless chain relation upon all sovereign electors and their representations to hate and forsake despotism, love and enforce Christian liberty as focused in the Constitution of 1787, the elixir of political reason, the secret of constitutional self-government, and to expend their superabounding resources upwards and found a mundane government having the same relation to the nations that the United States government has to its states, counties and townships.

Prof. Hodge yesterday presented a check covering the proceeds to the Manassas Chapter of the American Red Cross.

DEATH OF G. R. KINCHELOE

Young Man Dies at Dumfries Home—His Wife and Son Survive Him.

George Richard Kincheloe, seventh son of Mr. and Mrs. James William Kincheloe, passed away Monday, July 2, at the home of his parents near Dumfries. He was born at Walnut Farm, this county, twenty-four years ago.

Funeral services were held on July 3 at the Kincheloe home, Rev. D. H. Showalter officiating. Interment was made in the family cemetery.

G. R. KINCHELOE

The pall bearers were the six surviving brothers of the deceased, Messrs. G. H. and W. E. Kincheloe, of Dumfries; J. E. and R. W. Kincheloe, of Washington; T. B. Kincheloe, of Indian Head, Md., and V. F. Kincheloe, of Cherry Hill.

When quite young Mr. Kincheloe entered the timber business as a representative of L. A. Clarke & Son, which he continued successfully for two years, at the end of which time on account of ill health he was compelled to leave the business for something less confining. He purchased a traveling moving picture tent show with which he traveled for some time. After regaining his health he again took up the timber business in partnership with Mr. Alexander Stone. After Mr. Stone's death he discontinued the business and accepted a position in Washington with the management of the New Willard Hotel. Failing health again caused him to relinquish his position and he returned to his former home at Dumfries.

Surviving members of the family are his wife, who was Miss Blanche Virginia Leary, daughter of Mr. W. H. Leary, of Hoadley; a small son, his father, mother, six brothers and one sister, Mrs. W. H. Alexander, of Indian Head, Md.

TYLER HEADS RED CROSS

Mrs. George F. Lyon Named Vice Chairman—Other Officers of Manassas Chapter.

The Manassas Chapter of the American Red Cross held its first meeting Monday evening at the Town Hall, about forty persons being present. Mr. G. Raymond Ratcliffe, a member of the committee on organization, was made temporary chairman, and the members proceeded to the election of officers, which resulted as follows:

A vote of thanks was given to Mrs. C. R. C. Johnson for her efforts in behalf of the junior circles, two of which have been formed under her supervision. Miss Mary Larkin reported the receipt of Rev. Gypsy Smith's gift of copies of his lecture, "From Gypsy Tent to Pulpit," which are being sold for the benefit of the Red Cross. The secretary was instructed to write to Mr. Smith expressing the thanks and appreciation of the chapter. The next meeting is to be held at the call of the chairman, when a speaker from the American Red Cross is expected.

"QUART" PRIVILEGE IS GONE

Department of Justice Rules That Prohibition States Must Be "Bone-Dry."

Striking a death-blow to the liquor traffic by making it virtually impossible to transport liquor into "dry" territory under any conditions, the United States Department of Justice, in an opinion upon the provisions of the "bone-dry" rider to the post office appropriation bill prohibiting the shipment of liquor into a "dry" state, held Friday that an individual cannot transport liquor into such commonwealth, either in his personal baggage or on his person, for any purpose.

All doubt as to what construction would be placed by Federal authorities upon this question, since it was the only one in which there was any cloud as to the object of the law, was set at rest with the department's ruling. Prohibition supporters last night believed this decision was one of the most important steps taken in prohibition matters in months. Liquor can now be transported from a non-prohibition state into Virginia, or any of their twenty-two states affected only by common carriers and then only in a limited quantity. The Federal measure provides that liquor, wine or other intoxicants can only be shipped into a "dry" state for medicinal, mechanical, sacramental or scientific purposes.—Alexandria Gazette.

Dr. W. Fewell Merchant, who has been commissioned first lieutenant in the Medical Reserve Corps, this week was ordered to the Petersburg cantonment which is known as Camp Lee. Dr. Merchant is making plans to leave for Petersburg.

MARINE SHOTS HIMSELF

Lieut. McKay, 21 Years Old, Found Dead at Training Camp at Quantico.

John Henry McKay, Second Lieutenant, United States Marine Corps, was found dead early Monday morning at the training camp at Quantico, evidently from a self-inflicted bullet wound. No reason has been assigned for his action. The young officer is said to have drilled his men as usual Monday morning and returned to his room ostensibly to clean a revolver. His comrades heard the report of the weapon and rushed into his room, finding him dead with a bullet wound through his heart.

On a table near his body was a note, evidently fresh from his pen, which read, "Good-by, Mother, I'm gone."

Dr. J. C. Meredith, of Manassas, who was summoned at the time of the shooting, considered it unnecessary to hold an inquest.

Lieut. McKay was twenty-one years old. His home was in Philadelphia.

BOY SCOUTS CAN BEANS

Manassas Boys Learn Canning As a War Measure—Miss Gilbert in Charge.

Several members of the Manassas Boy Scouts took part in a canning demonstration which was conducted Wednesday morning on the Ruffner school grounds by Miss Lillian V. Gilbert, Prince William county home demonstration agent. The boys canned beans, peaking and sealing the cans themselves to the entire satisfaction of Miss Gilbert, who declared that she was very proud of her pupils.

Miss Gilbert gave another demonstration Tuesday morning, assisted by several of the ladies of the town. Glass and tin cans were used and the vegetables canned were beets and beans.

The ladies of the town have asked for another demonstration, but Miss Gilbert's calendar at present is too full to permit her to carry out their wishes. She is to accompany the canning club girls of Prince William, Fairfax, Loudoun and Fauquier to Harrisonburg Saturday for the girls' short course at the State Normal School, July 21-30. Returning Monday, she will address a meeting at Tom's Brook, Shenandoah county, and later she will attend a canning demonstration which is to be given at the home of Mr. John Ewell, of Hickory Grove, by the members of the Hickory Grove Good Housekeepers' Club.

The members of the Prince William county canning clubs who will attend the course at Harrisonburg are Miss Eva Kidwell and Miss Aileen Davis, both of Occoquan district, who won first honors in the county contest which decided who should represent the Prince William clubs. Miss Davis is a first year girl and Miss Kidwell is doing third year work.

The canning club girls' short course, which was given at Eastern College last week, closed Saturday. A luncheon was given in the college dining room to about thirty guests, including members of the county board of supervisors, school board, county and district agricultural councils of safety and woman's auxiliary to the farmers' institute.

Mr. and Mrs. James J. Royster, of Washington, have announced the marriage of their daughter Lesley and Mr. Norval Landon Burchell on Tuesday at St. John's Episcopal Church in Washington. Mr. Burchell is a well-known Washington grocer and has many relatives in this county.

A THREE-CORNERED RACE?

Friends Urge Allen Green to Become Republican Candidate for House of Delegates.

Political circles in Prince William between now and November promise to be enlivened by the announcement of a republican candidate for the House of Delegates. Mr. Allen Green, of Aden, has been urged by a number of his friends to enter the race, and, although his candidacy has not been announced, Mr. Green has admitted that he has the matter under consideration.

When questioned by a representative of THE JOURNAL Mr. Green said he had received a number of letters from influential men of the county who had assured him of their support. In the earlier part of the week he made a trip to Lower Prince William to consult his friends in that section.

While THE JOURNAL representative continued his interview with Mr. Green—not promising to vote for him, as he is a democrat—he was a little surprised to see a democrat come forward to inform Mr. Green that he was ready to vote for him and to support him in every possible way.

Mr. Green is a prominent farmer of Brentsville magisterial district. His son, Mr. McDuff Green, who is affiliated with the democratic party, represents his district on the county board of supervisors.

Altogether the coming election is calculated to rouse old Prince William from any appearance of lethargy. The democratic ship of state in Prince William already has had rough sailing since Mr. C. A. Sinclair was declared the democratic nominee and Mr. C. J. Meetze, who had announced his candidacy but who failed to file his papers in the time required by law, declared his intention of leaving the decision to the voters in November—by running as an independent candidate.

RED CROSS FAIR FRIDAY

Members of Junior Circle Plan Elaborate Fete to Aid War Sufferers.

The Juniors at a meeting Monday afternoon at the home of Miss Sallie Norvell Larkin, elected the following officers: President, Miss Sallie Larkin; secretary, Miss Dorothy Johnson, and treasurer, Miss Marion Burks.

Junior Circle B (the members have not named their circles) met Tuesday afternoon at the home of Miss Elizabeth Quarles Johnson. The next meeting, at which time new members will be received, is to be at the home of Miss Lillian Larkin next Tuesday at 2:30 p. m.

The junior circles, meeting at the homes of the members, have a limited membership. As the circles reach the desired size new circles will be formed.

SUFFRAGISTS PARDONED

Sixteen suffragettes who were sentenced to serve sixty days at Occoquan or pay a fine of $25 each for forbidden picketing at the White House gates, were pardoned yesterday by President Wilson after serving two-thirds of their term at Occoquan where they were relieved of their chains and other finery and given a share of the labor among the women prisoners of every class.

Well Met

A Man Kindly Takes Another's Risk.

By F. A. MITCHEL

A man dressed like a gentleman alighted from a train at a suburban station, asked the agent when the next train to the city would pass, then set out to walk to a residence which bore evidence of having been shut up for the winter. Entering, he went up stairs. Half an hour later he looked out through a window and saw a handsomely dressed woman emerging from another country residence a few hundred yards distant. She was carrying a suitcase.

The man's face took on the expression of one who had discovered something interesting. He kept his eyes on the woman, who was approaching, till she passed the house he was in; then, taking up a suitcase he had packed, he went downstairs and hurried after the woman. Lifting his hat politely, he said:

"Will you permit me to assist you with that suitcase?"

"Thank you very much; it is very light. Do you know when the next train leaves for the city?"

"In ten minutes."

"In that case I shall have just time to reach the station and buy my ticket."

The two walked on together and by the time they reached the station had established an acquaintance. On boarding the train the man helped the woman on to the train, and on seating herself she made room for him beside her. "I saw you leaving Mr. Lawrence's country house," he said.

The woman started.

"I supposed Mr. Lawrence's family in the city and the house was unoccupied."

"I am Fanny Lawrence," was the hesitating reply.

"Oh!"

"I needed some things and came out to get them. They're in my suitcase."

"My case exactly. My country house is shut up, and we're all in the city. I needed some things and came out for them."

"And they're in your suitcase?"

"Yes; they are."

There was a pause in this dialogue. It was evident the lady was ill at ease. Presently the man said:

"The next station is Cloverton. Another road crosses this one there. I'm going to leave this train and take another on the other road."

"Why do you do that?"

"This train enters the city at the Union station. The other stops at several small stations before reaching the terminal, at one of which I shall leave it."

"For what purpose?"

"It will be more convenient for me."

The lady was silent. She seemed to be thinking. Presently she asked her companion at what station he would stop. He said Arlington avenue. Then, after a few questions as to the location of the Arlington avenue station, she said that it would be a more convenient stopping place for her too. The man said that perhaps she had better leave the train there and he would be happy to secure her a conveyance. The lady thanked him and said she believed she would do so.

"Would you mind," she said after a period evidently devoted to deliberation, "when we reach the Arlington avenue station, getting out on the car platform and seeing if there is any one apparently looking for some person?"

"Of course I will."

"I suppose you will think it strange my asking you to do so. I think I shall have to give you my confidence. I am engaged to a young man to whom my father objects."

"I see you are going to elope with him."

"Yes."

"But how is it that you expect to meet him at the Arlington avenue station? You did not intend to stop there till I spoke of doing so myself."

"You don't understand. I don't expect to meet him there. You see, I am a bit nervous lest father or my brother has learned what I am about to do and may stop me."

"I see."

Shortly after these travelers had left their respective country homes a lady living opposite the house from which Miss Lawrence emerged called up Julian Lawrence in the city on the phone and gave him a bit of information that produced in him a sinister activity. When the train reached the crossing a man in a striped waistcoat was standing on the platform. He was about to board the train when he saw the couple step down from it, whereupon he scrutinized them closely and let it go on without him. When they boarded a train on the other road he got on, too, and took a seat in the rear of the car they occupied. But they failed to notice that he appeared to be interested in them. As soon as the couple were seated the man turned to the lady and said:

"If you are trying to avoid capture by your father it behooves you to exercise your wits. Unless some one on the watch for you knows you by sight you may throw him off the track. One looking for a runaway couple will not be likely to suspect one whose appearance gives evidence of having been long married. I would recommend you to join me in playing such a couple."

The lady agreed, and they at once began to show that outward indifference that contrasts with the behavior of a lover's couple.

"It won't do," said the man, "for me to go out ahead of you on arriving at Arlington avenue station and reconnoiter. That would give you away at once. We must step out unconcernedly. I'll let you carry your suitcase case, just as if we had been married twenty years, and go my way, leaving you to follow me without looking back for you."

The couple descended from the train. The man watching them left it a moment later and, keeping them in sight, went out after them to see them take a cab together. They were being driven away when the chaperone called another cab and, getting into it, bade the driver follow the one that was leaving.

"Now, see 'ere," said the man playing the part of the husband, dropping into a vernacular that was natural to him. "You ain't Miss Lawrence no-how. What d'ye want to put up a job like that for? You're the housemaid at the Lawrence's."

"Ow do you know I am?" asked the woman, palling.

"Cause I'm the Tookers' butler, the next 'ouse to the Lawrence's. I've seen you in the Lawrence back yard a-angin' up the wash. Wot y' got in your suitcase case anyhow?"

"Wot's that to you?"

"You and I are in for it together. If one gets holt 'tother gets holt. I reckon y' got some valuables in your suitcase case, hain't you?"

"Reckon you've got some in yours."

"I don't mind lettin' you know that I've got some gold plate."

"Well, I've got some jewels."

"Now we're gittin' on to an understandin'. Ow would y' like to get rid o' your jewels till there's no danger o' your bein' found with 'em on your person?"

"Like enough you want me to trust 'em to you."

"Well, if you don't like that, 'ow would you like to take my haul?"

"I don't want it. I've got enough risk now without takin' any more."

"What you golt' to do with the sparklers when you hit 'em safe?"

"I don't know. Sell 'em if I can."

"You're purty enough to wear 'em yourself. They're none too good for you."

This compliment put a different complexion upon the treatment by the woman of the man. She preferred to rely upon him, as most women prefer to rely upon a man.

"What would you do with 'em if I turned 'em over to you?" she asked in a tone that denoted a disposition to yield.

"Oh, I'd take care of 'em till I could turn 'em back to you. If you were caught with 'em on you you'd get sent up for somethin' like five or six years, and that wouldn't pay since you've got a feller as is wittin' to take the risk on himself."

She being the weaker sex, he succeeded in persuading her to cast her burden on him. She handed her suitcase case to him. The disposition on his face as he took it was, to say the least, crafty. What was passing through his mind was, "Might as well hang for a sheep as a lamb, and two sheeps is better than one."

"When I get 'em back?" she asked.

"Let me see. This is Friday. A week from today you must me do you know the fountain in the park?"

"Yes."

"Well, you meet me at the fountain at 12 o'clock and I'll give 'em back to you."

He called on the driver to stop, and she got out of the cab.

The shadower was disconcerted at this diversion. He could not follow both of them in different directions, and, seeing that the girl was without her suitcase case, he concluded the man had it, so he directed his driver to still follow the cab. It finally brought up at the entrance to an alley. The man in it alighted with two suit cases and, having paid the fare, was about to enter the alley when he fell a hand on his shoulder and, turning, saw a man who about open his coat and showed a badge.

"Ow did you get on to it?" asked the culprit.

"Never mind that; come with me."

An hour later there was an investigation at the police office. The two suit cases were opened. One was found to contain valuable plate, the other jewels. The police had been put on to the track of the housemaid and were not looking for the butler. However, the culprit explained the matter of the double-theft and how he had come to be in possession of all the loot. Since he had nothing to gain by telling that the maid might be captured on a certain date at the park fountain he did not mention the fact.

However, the next morning on taking up a newspaper she saw an account of the capture of the man who had become responsible for her share of the plunder and kept away from the rendezvous. Several weeks later a member of the family she had robbed met her on the street and turned her over to a policeman.

On her trial the prosecuting attorney found it difficult to convict her, since no stolen property was found in her possession and she was not known to have disposed of any. Since she was very penitent her former mistress forgave her and she was set free.

As for the man who had so kindly relieved her of the risk of being caught with the stolen goods, he was given three years for each robbery, making six years in all.

POULTRY AND EGGS

RATION FOR LAYING HENS

Experiments Prove That Wheat is Not Essential to Egg Production.

With wheat so high, poultrymen will be interested to learn that on the United States department of agriculture experiment farm excellent egg laying results were secured with a wheatless ration. Thirty Leghorn pullets to which this ration has been fed for one and one-half years produced an average of 147.8 eggs per hen for the pullet year. This compares favorably with egg yields secured on other rations containing wheat and therefore more expensive. This poor survivor during the first sixteen weeks of its second year has averaged 28.5 eggs per hen, 17.5 eggs per hen being produced in March.

The same wheatless ration has been fed since last November to a pen of Buff Orpington pullets, which have laid fifty-three eggs per hen in twenty weeks and hold the highest egg record of any of the large feeding pens of pullets at the farm this year. Two other pens, however, are less than one egg per hen behind this pen.

The ration used was as follows: Scratch mixture, two pounds of cracked corn and one pound of oats; dry mash, three pounds of cornmeal and one pound of beef scrap.

The scrap mixture was fed sparingly so that the hens ate about equal parts of this mixture and of the dry mash. The total grain consumption of feed for the year was fifty-two pounds, of which twenty-six pounds was scratch mixture. Throughout the year it took 4.6 pounds of feed to produce a dozen eggs.

This scratch mixture, with wheat $2.57, cracked corn $1.35 and oats 70 cents per bushel, is 40 cents per 100 pounds cheaper than the regular mixture of equal parts cracked corn, wheat and oats. Another mash, which is slightly cheaper than this one, is made of 4 per cent each bran and middlings, 26 per cent beef scrap and 60 per cent cornmeal.

If the wheat is omitted from the ration it is very essential to feed a considerable proportion of beef scrap in the mash, but with present prices beef scrap is one of the cheapest poultry feeds, considering its high protein content.

These experiments, the specialists say, prove that wheat is not essential in an egg laying ration and that excellent results can be secured by using corn and oats as a scratch mixture, provided this is fed with a good mash containing 25 per cent beef scrap.

HEN RAISED CHICKS.

Mother Should Care For the Breed as Long as She Will Do So.

When chicks are raised in the natural way with hens fewer mistakes are liable to be made in the care of the chicks. Still, early in the season, when there is much bad weather, too much must not be left to the hen, because she cannot supply all the care that is needed. Many early hen hatched chicks are lost through failure to give them suitable quarters where they will have plenty of room and can take advantage of the sunshine. Small chicks are far better off indoors when the weather is not pleasant. Later on in the season or when the chicks are of some size running outside will be invigorating, but it is best to work on the safe side at all times and take no chances of chilling the chicks.

Sometimes the chicks from two batches are given to one hen for raising, and this works nicely in warm weather, but do not try it until after the 1st of May, because in cool weather one hen cannot cover more than fifteen chicks right, and quite early in the season ten chicks are all a hen can look after.

Let the mother hen care for early chicks just as long as she will do so, and until the chicks are well feathered have some means of protecting them on cool nights. The proper ventilation of their house or coop, however, must always be watched carefully.

Chicks must be made to exercise freely at all times, and, except when there is a good range, a portion of the feed should be given in a litter.

Worms in Poultry.

There are some forty species of poultry worms. If yours have undertaken to feed any of this lot try doses of turpentine and olive oil, half and half. If this does not effect a cure try pure turpentine, one to three teaspoonfuls.

MANASSAS, VA., FRIDAY, JULY 20, 1917.

TRIBUTE TO SOUTHERN CHIEFTAINS

Manassas, as the scene of the first reunion of the Blue and Gray, should be keenly interested in the government's first official recognition of the military genius of Southern leaders which is expected to do much to banish the last vestige of sectionalism which still exists in some sections of the nation. Tribute is paid to General Robert E. Lee, General Joe Wheeler, General John B. Gordon and General P. G. T. Beauregard in naming for them four of the Southern military training camps.

The Virginia cantonment at Petersburg, where the Fifth Division troops, composed of the selective draft recruits from Virginia, New Jersey, Delaware and the District of Columbia, will be trained, has been named in honor of General Lee. The camp of the Georgia, Alabama and Florida troops at Atlanta, Georgia, is to be known as Camp Gordon, in honor of the Georgia general. Camp Wheeler is the name of the National Guard camp at Macon, Georgia, where the guardsmen of Alabama, Georgia and Florida will train. The National Guard camp at Alexandria, Louisiana, for the Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas guardsmen will be known as Camp Beauregard.

THE EDUCATIONAL OUTLOOK

The anxiety of some of the young men of Virginia who desire to pursue the quest of higher education during the war will be relieved by the announcement that the University of Virginia will reopen in the fall and that the estimated shrinkage in enrollment on account of the war is very small.

Members of the faculty advise the pursuit of study by those who have not entered upon military service. The youth of the country should exert every means at their command to become better fitted for service when they shall be called to follow the flag for Uncle Sam or to take the places of older men in civil life.

BONE-DRY LAW INTERPRETED

An important decision of the Department of Justice concerning the "bone-dry" rider to the post office appropriation bill is given elsewhere in this issue. Twenty-three states are affected by the ruling which virtually prohibits the shipment of liquor into "dry" states under any condition. The Department of Justice holds that an individual cannot carry liquor into "dry" territory either in his personal baggage or on his person for any purpose.

This decree of the Department of Justice withdraws the quart-a-month privilege which a large number of Virginians (judging from the records, of course) have taken advantage of during the eight or nine months since last November. Proper acquaintance with the national interpretation of the new law should reduce perceptibly the number of violations, many of which for the present are expected to come through ignorance, which, however, is no excuse in the eyes of the administrators of justice.

STRANGE GUESTS AT OCCOQUAN

Sixteen militant suffragists of wealth and prominence, hailing from various parts of the country, are the guests of Superintendent Whittaker at a most informal house party at the District workhouse at Occoquan. While Superintendent Whittaker is their official host, the invitation was extended by Judge Mallowny, of the Washington police court, who gave them their choice of $25 fine for each of the ladies or sixty days at Occoquan for forbidden picketing at the White House gates.

Virginians will doubtless own to a fleeting sense of pride that their choice was in favor of the balmy Virginia air on Occoquan run. Whether they are being showered with expressions of sympathy from friends of the "cause"—the militant cause—cannot be stated, but it is only fair to assume that other friends of suffrage and those who turn a deaf ear to the appeal for equal rights will not waste sympathy on their plight.

Their methods of seeking the vote overstep the bounds of sane thinking and cast a cloud of doubt over their ability and fitness to exercise the right of the ballot, which apparently they have placed on a plane above the serious international problems already confronting the nation.

Perhaps prison garb, prison fare and prison work, into which they will enter in common with other prisoners at the workhouse, will convince them of the failure of picketing as a suffrage argument.

Elaborate dinners on railroads, according to announcement from New York, have succumbed to the war situation, and there is to be no more lamb, no more spring chicken and no more young veal on the menu. If you want more butter your check will be higher. Two slices of bread is the limit for a meal.

FARMERS' WIVES

The United States agricultural department has been making inquiries of farmers' wives as to their needs and desires and has received thousands of letters in reply. The burden of these letters is that they are compelled to live lives of drudgery in order that their husbands may "buy more land, to raise more corn, to feed more hogs, to buy more land." In pursuit of this program, the wives claim they are neglected and that the livestock on the farm receives more consideration than they. It is hard to believe such reports, and we would not think of even mentioning it, if it were not in an official report of a department dealing with the farmer.

But we would protest that the information must be from a very restricted part of the country, for what we have seen of farmers' wives they are the happiest part of the population. There are many uncouth husbands, who have no more regard for a woman than they have for a mule, but that is the case in cities as well as in the country. It is the meanest trait of humanity when a husband does not regard his wife as the highest personality within his experience, and this, too, whether on the farm or in the city.—Columbian Journal.

TELL HIM NOW

If with pleasure you are viewing
Any work a man is doing,
If you like him, or you love him—tell him now;
Don't withhold your approbation,
Till the parson makes oration,
As he lies with snowy lilies o'er his brow.
For no matter how you shout it,
He won't really care about it,
He won't know how many teardrops you have shed.
If you think some praise is due him,
Now's the time to slip it to him,
For he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead.
More than fame and more than money
Is the comment, kind and sunny,
And the hearty warm approval of a friend.
For it gives to life a savor,
And it makes you stronger—braver,
And it gives you heart and spirit to the end.
If he earns your praise, bestow it;
If you like him let him know it,
Let the words of true encouragement be said;
Do not wait till life is over
And he's underneath the clover,
For he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead.

MOTHERS DON'T TAKE ALCOHOL

Mortality Among Children of Mothers Who Drink

NON-ALCOHOLIC REMEDY ENDORSED

The awful mortality among babies of drinking mothers and mothers who use alcohol is appalling and recent figures show that 21 mothers lost 55.2 per cent of their 126 babies whereas twenty-eight relatives of these same women drinkers who were non-users of alcohol lost only 23.9 per cent of their 138 children; 4.1 per cent of the babies that lived were epileptic and the children of users of alcohol as mentioned above and called "moderate children" (those who drank daily no more alcohol than corresponds to one glass of beer) about 4 per cent.

The amount of alcohol in an ordinary glass of beer is little less than will be found in some doses of alcoholic remedies and when the Ferrodine Chemical Corporation warns against the use of alcoholic iron remedies containing too much alcohol, the mothers, parents and physicians of families should note carefully on every bottle of medicine they buy the percentage of alcohol, which always appears by order of the government as a protection to the public.

When one's system needs a tonic and you feel tired, worn out, run down and the appetite, energy and vitality are at a low ebb don't take alcohol which has only temporary effect upon the digestion and a detrimental effect upon the kidneys, stomach, nerves, brain and liver. Take a natural non-alcoholic iron (not patent medicine) and tone up and stimulate the appetite and energy, naturally and permanently.

Acid Iron Mineral (Natural Iron) may be secured at any drug store in either fifty or dollar sized bottles for home use. It is powerful and goes from two to ten times as far as other and weaker preparations and unlike many, it does not injure stomach, cause constipation or blacken the teeth.

Large bottles sent prepaid on the receipt of $1.00. Ferrodine Chemical Corporation, Roanoke Virginia.

ALL AROUND THE FARM

LEGUMES ARE VALUABLE.

Furnish Nutritious Feed For Animals and Also Enrich the Soil. (Prepared by United States department of agriculture.)

Farmers have known for centuries that the clovers, alfalfa, beans and peas enriched the soil, so that wheat, corn, cotton and similar crops gave better yields when following them than when planted after the grains or grasses. The reason for this fact, however, is of more recent discovery than the fact itself.

The soil enriching, leguminous plants possess normally nodules attached to their roots. These are due to the presence of great numbers of bacteria, minute living organisms which enter the roots from the soil. To us their importance lies in the fact that they possess the power of absorbing nitrogen from the air as it circulates in the soil and turning it into compounds which are readily utilized in the growth of the plants. Plants to which these bacteria are not attached derive the nitrogen required for their growth from the soil alone. In consequence leguminous plants in general contain more nitrogen than the nonleguminous. They are therefore richer feeds, and if they are returned in whole or in part to the soil they increase its nitrogen content and thus promote the growth of the following crop. A third advantage in their use is the fact that when fed to live stock the resulting manure has an unusually high fertilizing value.

Under ordinary circumstances the best way to dispose of these crops is to feed them to live stock. All kinds of stock will benefit from them. Alfalfa hay can be substituted in part for such concentrates as wheat bran and cottonseed meal for both dairy and beef cattle. Red, alsike and sweet clover and field peas are less nutritious, but they are nevertheless more valuable than timothy, redtop, orchard grass or other nonlegumes.

Furthermore, the fertilizing value of a leguminous crop need not be lost when it is fed. From 75 to 90 per cent. of this fertilizing value can be given to the soil if the manure from the live stock is spread promptly and properly. The small percentage that is lost is insignificant in comparison with the gain to the live stock.

For various reasons, however, some food and some had, the farmer does not always keep sufficient live stock to furnish enough manure for the requirements of the soil. Under such circumstances a substitute must be found, and the most available one is a leguminous crop, called, when grown for this purpose, a green manure crop. By plowing under this crop humus is added to the soil in much the same way that it is by applications of manure. Because they also add nitrogen legumes are more desirable green manure crops than nonlegumes.

Plowed under crops, however, obviously produce no direct return, and for that reason it is desirable whenever possible that the same land should produce during the season one crop for harvest and one crop for green manure. In the southern part of the northern states grain, early potatoes and a number of other crops are harvested sufficiently early for them to be followed by a catch crop, as a crop following the main one is called.

When there is no time to grow a second crop before cold weather, legumes may still be used as winter cover crops. These serve three purposes—first, to take up available plant food that might otherwise be leached from the soil and lost; second, to protect the land against erosion; third, to supply winter pasture. In the spring they should be turned under for green manure. Red clover, crimson clover and hairy vetch make good cover crops in the north. A common practice is to mix hairy vetch with rye.

Feeding the Cow.
The dairy cow must have a ration from which she can produce milk if you expect her to make a profitable return for the food.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

- Do not encourage visits to your barn from the neighbor whose stock is always ailing.
- There is a theory that the way to keep a pig is to keep him and his food and surroundings clean. Worth trying.
- When the duck has been eating roots the change to the fresh grass is not so relaxing.
- Some five dollar calves may grow into hundred dollar cows; don't seed them to the butcher.
- The pigs need shade in the pasture. There should be trees as well as shelter.
- Do not let the little pigs hang over a high trough or they will grow crooked in the backs and be spoiled.

MONEY IN HOG RAISING.

Next to Poultry Swine Are Most Profitable of Farm Animals.

The meat supply of the country can be increased more quickly by the hog route than by any other. The country's need to augment its supply is great, but prevailing high prices alone should be sufficient inducement to farmers to raise more hogs. The prospect of success never was brighter. The high prices ruling in all markets show that the demand for pork is in excess of the supply.

Hogs fit into the modern scheme of farming on nearly every farm and are one of the most important animals to raise both for meat and for money. They require less labor, less equipment and less capital, make greater gains per hundred pounds of concentrates fed, reproduce themselves faster and in greater numbers and give a quicker "turn over" of money than any other animal, except poultry.

The hog has no rival as a consumer of byproducts, and but for him numerous unmarketable materials might be wasted. Kitchen refuse, not only from farms, but also from hotels and restaurants, when cooked before feeding makes an excellent diet.

The value of skim milk as a hog feed is known on every farm, though not always fully appreciated. In the neighborhood of large dairies pork production is a very prominent and lucrative supplement to the dairy industry.

The hog is also a large factor in cheapening the production of beef. Hogs following steers have in many cases increased the profit per steer by from $8 to $9. But hogs should not be allowed to follow dairy cattle, for the cattle are known to be free of tuberculosis, owing to the disease danger.

KILLING CUTWORMS.

An Effective Remedy is Poisoned and Sweetened Bait.

Few are the gardeners who are so fortunate as never to have seen their young plants destroyed by cutworms. It is perfectly possible to destroy these pests, however. A common and effective remedy is the poisoned bait, which is mixed and applied as follows: Take a bushel of dry bran, add a pound of white arsenic or paris green and mix it thoroughly into mash with eight gallons of water, in which has been stirred a half gallon of sorghum or other cheap molasses. (Arsenic and paris green are deadly poisons, handle them with great care.) This amount will be sufficient for the treatment of about four or five acres of cultivated crops. After the mash has stood for several hours, scatter it in rumps about the size of a marble over the fields where the injury is beginning to appear and about the bases of the plants set out. Apply late in the day so as to place the poison about the plants before night, which is the time when the cutworms are active. Apply a second time if necessary. Keep children, live stock and chickens away from the bait.

Planting Small Potatoes.

Not many years ago I had seventy barrels of potatoes, all about the size of a small hen's egg, writes a New York farmer in American Agriculturist. The buyer did not want them, so I sorted out a load, and they were planted in the same way as others. The small potatoes were busheted up at digging time and the best sorted out for big seed. These potatoes all were planted June 12. The field of two acres yielded 300 bushels to the acre. I prefer a potato of natural size. I cut the potatoes into four pieces. When whole potatoes are planted they start earlier than the cut ones.

Dairy Stable Floors.

Only concrete floors should be permitted in a dairy barn. They cost more, perhaps, originally, but they are the cheapest in the long run. For one thing, they make it possible to save some of the liquid manure, a very valuable

Fill Your Silo With The PAPEC Ensilage Cutter

Mr. C. H. Robinson, North Franklin, Conn., who operates a 18-in. 2-knife Papec cutter with an 8 H. P. gasoline engine, writes:

"In one case there were 21 men and 6 two-horse teams, and I was without corn about one-third of the time. Another case—'B' a harvester and two extra men and they could not keep me busy. Filled five silos with the silage in five days. Have had mower wheel running as low as 250 revolutions without a stop."

The fast-cutting and unusual elevating ability on little power makes the Papec economical and popular. That's why more Papecs are sold each year. There is a Papec for your needs.
