

LETTER OF FOOD ADMINISTRATOR

Asks People to Use Substitutes for Flour, Beef and Sugar—Cut Out All Wastes.

To the People of Prince William County:

The United States Food Administration is using every available means to get before the people of the United States the necessity of food conservation, stoppage of all wastes, and the use of every substitute for flour, sugar and beef that is possible. The Food Administration figures three pounds of sugar per person per month as the right quantity.

Wake up to the existing conditions of the food situation—do not be a slacker—if you can not get just what flour or sugar from the retailer or miller that you think you need, do not criticize the food administration but take your proportion with the proper amount of substitutes and try to do what the food administration asks you to do. If you do not understand the situation, read the papers, ask for literature on the part that you do not understand, ask your retailer, your miller or some one on the local food administrator's staff.

The administration does not want to think that any one will wilfully waste or violate one of the conservation rulings; they put it to every sound thinking man, woman and child to do his or her bit. Ask yourself the question: "Am I using more than my quota of flour? If your quota of flour will not sustain you get some rye flour from the mills and mix it with wheat flour half and half; it makes better light bread than all wheat flour."

Nearly every citizen in the United States has some friend, connection, or loved one engaged in this war in some capacity. Why should not the people, every one as a whole, conserve to feed our soldiers and our allies at this great time of peril? "Join the Service Army. Everybody must pull together—the consumer must help to see to it that the farmer gets reasonable prices for his products; the farmer must help the government to protect the consumer from extortion of unscrupulous and disloyal speculators."

Be contented with simple food, simple pleasures, simple clothes. Work hard, pray hard, play hard. Work, eat, recreate, and sleep. Do it all courageously. We have a victory to win.

The situation has become critical. There is simply not enough food in Europe, yet the soldiers of the allies must be maintained in full strength; their wives and children at home must not face famine; the friendly neutrals must not be starved; and finally, our own army in France must never lack a needed ounce of food.

There is just one way in which these requirements can be met. North America must furnish the food. And it must furnish it from its savings because it has already sent its normal surplus. We do not need to starve ourselves, and it is the first policy of the Food Administration to retain for our people, by its control of exports, a sufficient supply of every essential food-stuff. We want nobody in our country to eat less than is necessary for good health and fall

The allies need wheat and meat and fats and sugar. They must have more of all these than we have been sending, more than we shall be able to send unless we restrict our own consumption. As a nation we are today eating and wasting much more food than we need. The whole great problem of winning the war rests primarily on one thing—the loyalty and sacrifice of the American people in the matter of food. It is absolutely a personal obligation on the part of each of us to some one in Europe whom we are bound to help."

T. O. LATHAM, Local Food Administrator for Prince William County.

VINEGAR FOR WHISKEY

Four Alexandrians Victimized by Washington "Bootlegger."

"Stung"—that is what four young Alexandrians are whispering to each other for the past few days as a result of a trip made by them to secure liquor from a Washington "bootlegger."

According to reports the men went to Washington in an automobile Saturday night for the purpose of securing a supply of red liquor. Each man purchased from the "bootlegger" two half pints, making a grand total of eight half pints. The party did not tarry in Washington, but returned to Alexandria in the machine and upon arriving here, according to reports, decided to "wet their whistle." The party has a sad ending for as each man opened his bottle and took a "nip" the "whiskey" turned out to be vinegar. The victims of the "bootlegger" whispered the story to a few friends and it finally reached the ears of the newspaper man. All four have taken solemn pledges to hereafter sample purchases of "wet goods" made in Washington in the future before paying at the rate of $1 a pint for vinegar. There is no law against bringing vinegar into the state.

Meeting of Civic League.

The Civic League will hold a meeting in the Town Hall on Monday, July 8th, at 8 o'clock.

A number of members of this greatly needed organization have expressed regret at the prospect of its possible disbanding for lack of financial support, stating that they would cheerfully pay their back dues, if they knew the amount.

The officers, therefore, gladly avail themselves of this opportunity to renew the league's activity in getting and keeping the town tidy and sanitary.

Our energetic Mayor has declared that the league had frequently informed him of local conditions, of which he had no knowledge, and enabled him to improve them.

While doing our part in helping the government, the Red

MRS. LYDIA BELL DIES AT ADVANCED AGE

Resident of Virginia for Nearly Forty Years—Husband Died Ten Years Ago.

Mrs. Lydia A. Bell, widow of the late Daniel P. Bell, died at the home of her step-daughter, Mrs. Howard P. Young, Sunday morning, in the eighty-first year of her age. Her death was the result of an injury to her hip, caused by a fall about three weeks ago.

The deceased was born in Warren county, New Jersey; she came to Virginia nearly forty years ago, and since then has resided in this county. She and her husband made their home on a farm near Sinclair's Mill until his death, which occurred about ten years ago. In recent years she has been living with her step-children.

Mrs. Bell was a member of the Methodist Church, and had a large circle of friends who will be pained to read of her death. Her step-children, who survive her are: Mrs. Halpenny, Mrs. H. P. Young, Messrs. G. W. Bell, J. M. Bell and D. P. Bell.

The funeral services were held in Bradley Church at 3 o'clock, p. m., Tuesday, the Rev. Mr. Messick and the Rev. Mr. Burr officiating. She was buried in the churchyard by the side of her late husband.

INDEPENDENCE DAY LAUNCHING

One Hundred Ships Take to Water July Fourth—Speaks Defiance to the Hun.

"No more defiant answer could be given to the enemy's challenge," said a cablegram received yesterday from Gen. Pershing in reply to one sent by Chairman Hurley, of the shipping board, informing the American fighting men in France that the shipbuilders at home would launch 100 merchant ships on July 4.

"The launching of 100 ships on July 4, is the most inspiring news there has come to us," Gen. Pershing said. "All ranks of the army in France send their congratulations and heartfelt thanks to their patriotic brothers in the yards at home. No more defiant answer could be given to the enemy's challenge. With such backing we cannot fail to win. All hail American shipbuilders."

Hurley to Pershing.

Chairman Hurley's message to the army said:

"Not by delaying a single ship, but by speeding to the utmost the American shipyards will launch nearly one hundred ships on July 4. On this one day, celebrating a nation's independence and backing up the boys in the trenches the men in the shipyards will launch 450,000 dead-weight tons, as much as was launched in six months last year."

"Your inspiring leadership of the American army in France has thrilled the shipyard workers, and if the time comes when you need even the shipyard men over there, they will go to the last man. We want you and the boys in the trenches to know that the men in the yards are going the limit to provide record breaking time the ships that will carry more men, food and munitions to the intrepid American expeditionary forces."

Of the month's output, steel ships totaled 262,900 tons and wooden ships 17,500 tons.

Amazing Growth in Output.

An amazing growth in output was disclosed by detailed figures for June. In the first week six ships of 24,430 dead-weight tons were delivered, the second week ten more of 64,732 tons were added and in the third week the average for the month was made one a day by the completion of five ships totaling 61,260 tons. It was in the last week of the month, however, that the shipbuilders really hit their stride. Deliveries in the last week totaled 129,978 tons, which is at the rate of nearly 7,000,000 tons a year.

The same growth also has been shown from month to month. The output in June was three times that in January, which amounted to 86,507 tons.—Post.

Gen. Pershing Cites Carter C. Seife, of Bristow, for Bravery.

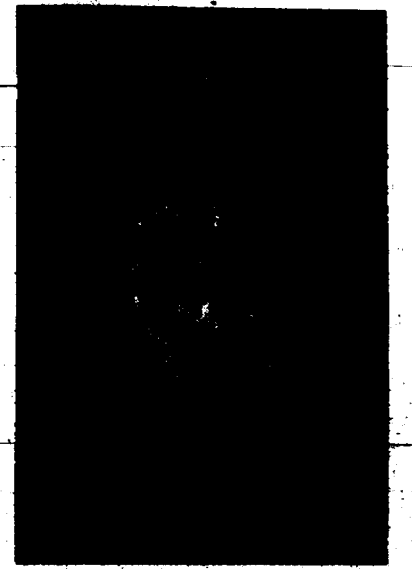

The War Department received from Gen. Pershing the names of thirty-five officers and men who have been cited for bravery in action by the general commanding the French army with which the American unit is serving. The names previously had been carried in Associated Press dispatches from France.

Night additions to the list from Southern states included Carter C. Seife, of Bristow, Prince William County, Va.

THE PASSING OF AN OLD CITIZEN

Mr. William Foote, a Venerable Citizen of Manassas, Dies at Advanced Age.

Mr. William Foote, a prominent and highly respected citizen of Manassas, died at his home Wednesday evening in the 76th year of his age. His death was due to complications appearing after a fracture of the thigh about three weeks ago, as chronicled in The Journal.

WILLIAM FOOTE

Mr. Foote was born in London, England, December 4, 1842. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Clothier of London, July 5, 1863, and had he lived until today would have celebrated the fifty-fifth anniversary of his wedding.

Coming to Canada fifty-one years ago, Mr. Foote went at once to Bethel, Maine, where he resided two years, from which place he came to Prince William County, Virginia, locating first on the farm near town recently owned by Mr. Walter N. Merchant. After a short stay on a farm near Minnieville and at Elliotts, near Richmond, where he was engaged in business, he returned to Manassas in poor health and has been a resident of the town more than forty years, until his death.

William Foote was highly thought of in this section; coming in contact frequently with many of our citizens, his genial manner and unquestioned integrity won for him many friends who found pleasure in his association. His religion was stern like that of the puritan, which could brook no innovations from modern "higher criticism"—"the old time religion was good enough for him."

Born and reared in a foreign land, Mr. Foote was thoroughly American in thought and deed; he was a naturalized citizen, and loved his adopted country as though native to its soil.

The deceased was a life long member of the Presbyterian church; he was an elder and trustee in the church and superintendent of the Sunday School for many years.

He is survived by his wife, four daughters and one son. His children are: Mrs. H. C. Linn, of Alexandria; Mrs. D. H. Prescott, of Medford, Mass.; Mrs. D. R. Lewis, of Manassas; Mrs. C. G. Griffith, of Washington, D. C., and Mr. Wm. H. Foote, of Washington.

The funeral services will be held from the Presbyterian Church Sunday at 3 o'clock p. m., the pastor, Rev. Alford Kelley, officiating; the burial will be in the cemetery near town. Manassas has lost a good citizen, whose death will be mourned by the community at large.

GERMAN MILITARISM

(By Walter S. Smoot.)

What is militarism? Is it not the having of an army? What matters the size of a country's army so long as, collectively and individually it is held in subordination to the civil authority of the people? Militarism essentially consists in the exaltation of the army to the chief place in the state and the subordination to it of the civil authorities. Inseparable from this is the reliance upon military force in every dispute.

Since the dawn of history in western Europe the Germans have been the military school-masters of the continent. More than two hundred years ago, under the Great Elector, Prussia aspired to become a great power through the might of her army. Frederick the Great was the supreme military genius of the eighteenth century. Through the means of "the nation in arms" Bismarck and Emperor William I secured an effective army of over 400,000 men. With this force they defeated Austria in 1866 and waged the successful war of 1870 against France which secured Prussia Alsace-Lorraine and a staggering indemnity and united "the Germanies" into the present German Empire with the King of Prussia at its head. Thus was Bismarck's "blood and iron" policy justified. Bernhardi speaks thus in his famous book "Germany and the Next War" (1911): "The Great Elector laid the foundations of Prussia's military power by successful and deliberately incurred wars. Frederick the Great followed in the footsteps of his glorious ancestor. . . . None of the wars which he fought had been fore-ed upon him; none of them did he postpone as long as possible. . . . The lessons of history thus confirm the view that wars which have been deliberately provoked by farseeing statesmen have had the happiest results."

War became the national industry in Germany in the period between 1871 and 1914. The present Emperor, William II, thus expressed his position: "It is the soldier and the army, not parliamentary majorities and votes that have welded the German Empire. My confidence rests on The Army."

It seems to us who are filled with the spirit of militarism that war is a holy thing, and this high estimate of war in its turn makes an essential ingredient of the military spirit. There is nothing that tradespeople complain of so much as that we regard it holy." (Werner Hombart, Handler und Heiden, 1915, p. 88.)

"Must Kultur rear its domes over mountains of corpses, oceans of tears, and the death rattle of the conquered? Yes; it must. . . . The might of the conqueror is the highest law before which the conquered must bow." (Karl A. Kuhn, Die Wahren Ursachen des Kriegs, 1914, p. 11.)

"Whoever cannot prevail upon himself to approve from the bottom of his heart the sinking of the Lusitania, whoever can not conquer his sense of the gigantic cruelty to unnumbered perfectly innocent victims . . . and give himself up to honest delight at this victorious exploit of German defensive power—him we judge to be no true German." (Pastor B. Baumgarten, Deutsche Reden im Weltkrieg, 1914-15.)

"I am going to pronounce a blessing on this war, the blessing which is on all lips, for we Germans, no matter in what part of the world we are, all bless and occasionally give his answer to some of the charges published in The Journal, that your readers generally may know that "there are two sides to a pancake." Whom did Mr. Carlin support for governor? Did he use his influence for or against Mr. Davis? If such questions are "saucy for the goose" they are "saucy for gander." So far as White's position toward Wm. J. Bryan is concerned, that will not hurt him with many of us poor fellows who were tied to the tail of Bryan's kite, and before we dropped him, we found that we might as well try to follow a feather in a whirlwind as to follow Bryan in all of his wild dreams.

These are the ideals of Prussianized Germany. The corresponding position of America and the Allied nations toward war and militarism was thus expressed two hundred years ago by Milton in his great epic "Paradise Regained":

They err who count it glorious to subdue
By conquest far and wide, to overrun
Large countries, and in field great battles win,
Great cities by assault; what do these worthies
But rob and spoil, burn, slaughter, and enslave?
Peaceable nations, neighboring or remote
Made captive, yet deserving freedom more
Than those their conquerors who leave behind
Nothing but ruin wheresoe'er they rove
And all the flourishing works of peace destroy.

LETTER FROM HOADLEY

Hoadley, July 1, 1918.
Manassas Journal Co.,
Gentlemen:—In the editorial columns of The Journal of June 21, appears the following paragraph:

"Col. White held the position of food administrator and resigned it to enlist in the service of Col. White."

I desire to state in behalf not only of myself, who am an ardent supporter of Mr. White, but of many others who are subscribers to The Journal, and also supporters of Mr. White, that we take issue with this statement of The Journal. Mr. White is a candidate for Congress because he has been solicited by voters from all over the district, who are dissatisfied with Mr. Carlin, to become the people's candidate. Every one acquainted with conditions in this district knows that there has been for some time a constant and growing dissatisfaction with Mr. Carlin's course in Congress. Mr. White's candidacy is the outgrowth of this sentiment.

Such uncalled for and unbecoming expressions as the one we are criticizing from The Journal does injustice to a high-minded and honorable man, who is conducting a clean campaign, does injury to The Journal, a paper circulating among a large number of Mr. White's friends, a paper that we supposed incapable of descending to such a level.

In The Journal for this week comes out another attack on Mr. White, on the supposition that he did not support Mr. Davis for governor. I would like to know what that has to do with this contest. Did The Journal and Mr. Carlin support Mr. Davis? If The Journal wishes to be fair why not give Mr. White's article in the Loudon Mirror of June 25th upon that subject. The fact is that Mr. White's strength is not simply in the fact of his ample qualification—ability to attend to the farming interests of the district, but in the decided feeling in the minds of hundreds of voters throughout this Congressional District that the time has come to "Swap Horses." I have rode horseback hundreds of miles and I have never hesitated to make a "swap" whether in the stream or out of it, if I found that the horse that I was riding was not safe, but was continually floundering around, turning with every wind and current to "run with the hare and hold with the hounds."

I write this article not only for myself but by request of a number of your readers. We do not question the right of The Journal to take a position in this caravans, and also to defend its course, but we do believe that knowing that a large number of your almost life-long subscribers are not in harmony with this position, you should at least treat our candidate with respect.

and occasionally give his answer to some of the charges published in The Journal, that your readers generally may know that "there are two sides to a pancake." Whom did Mr. Carlin support for governor? Did he use his influence for or against Mr. Davis? If such questions are "saucy for the goose" they are "saucy for gander." So far as White's position toward Wm. J. Bryan is concerned, that will not hurt him with many of us poor fellows who were tied to the tail of Bryan's kite, and before we dropped him, we found that we might as well try to follow a feather in a whirlwind as to follow Bryan in all of his wild dreams.

CRITICIZES OUR POLICY

In another column of this paper will be found a letter from Hoadley, attacking, violently, the editorial policy of The Journal. We publish it, knowing full well that it is harmless; a microscope could find nothing in it but words; words, old and new; a flux of words, but a famine of fact.

The Journal will attempt no detailed reply; the letter itself will be found sufficient, in the minds of most readers, to nullify any intent, on the part of the alleged writer, to injure The Journal or to aid Mr. White. The opinions of thinking people are founded upon facts, and they are not likely to be influenced by such wondrous conceptions as have taken place in the mind of the sage of Hoadley.

We might say, in passing, that the editorials of The Journal, as well as the matter selected from and credited to other papers and placed on the editorial page, in regard to the campaign now on, have been based almost entirely upon what Col. White has said himself, and if Col. White has not seen fit to "take issue with The Journal" on questions of fact, why should our friend from Hoadley worry?

TILLMAN

Senator Tillman of South Carolina was one of our public men whose removal even his self-respecting enemies will regret, because he was a warrior without fear and without concealment. From the sin of hypocrisy and double-dealing—which is one of the chief sins of this age of political uplifting—he was refreshingly free. His heart and his faults were always on public view; he never pulled down the blinds nor shunned inspection; nor did he care a tinker's dam whether his moral and political wares were popular or unpopular. A fierce, fiery-hearted, uncompromising product of a volcanic commonwealth, he was gifted with a magnificent capacity for honest scorn and hate—something that is beginning to be a rare quality among men, and abhorred of an age in which idealism and sweetness are the chief virtues. "Pitchfork Tillman" well described him in the earlier stages of his career—a figure suggesting sulphur and brimstone and baleful flames, one to make the political orthodox shudder and lament.

South Carolina felt herself disgraced and her shrines dishonored when this strange Tarzan of the Apes first profaned the ground hallowed by her great and knightly sons. She learned not only to forgive him but to prize him, and today she is the chief mourner at his bedside. He seemed in the beginning to be only an uncouth and rough demagogue, dialy to the higher unwritten law of Carolinian tradition and honor, and he turned out in the end to have all the qualities of straightforward manhood and to have in him the stuff of which his state could be proud. He fought his own people tooth and toenail at the outset, but he fought for them afterward like an untamed and untamable tiger-cat.

Truth to tell, Tillman did what comparatively few men ever do who have a talent. He threw away most of the bad in him and retained mainly only the good. He issued a revised and improved second edition of himself which lacked nothing of the fire of the first, but was instinct with greater breadth, patriotism and understanding. At his best he was not a great man or a great statesman, but he was honest and loyal through and through, and he had in him the Roman spirit of independence and courage which characterized the senate in the ante-war period, and which is now so conspicuous by rarity.

Senator Tillman has been struck down at a time when South Carolina needs him most, when she is threatened again with the menace of the unspeakable Blease. Let us hope that whatever befalls her she may escape the humiliation of being misrepresented in the senate by the South Carolina Bolshevik politician, who appeals only to class hate and bitterness, and whose only stock in trade is a secondhand assortment of low-grade demagogism.—Baltimore Sun.

THE HUN MUST PAY

The submarining of the Canadian hospital ship Llandovery Castle off the Irish coast without warning and evidently in an effort to leave no trace constitutes the latest exhibition of German barbarism. By all the laws of civilized warfare and humanity this ship was sacredly immune from molestation. She was engaged solely in the business of transporting sick and wounded soldiers. Of the 258 persons on board, all were either doctors, hospital attendants, nurses or members of the crew. She carried no weapons; she was steaming along through the night with every light burning, the red crosses on both sides highly illuminated and a great electric sign showing above the bridge. There was no possibility of a mistake. The character of the vessel was known to the murderous band which sent her to the bottom. The boat in which the captain, the ship's officers and some of the medical officers escaped was overhauled by the submarine, whose commander interrogated them. He did not even pretend to be unaware of the character of the vessel he had sunk, but feeling obliged to make some sort of excuse he accused Capt. Sylvester of carrying eight American flight officers.

This was a lie, and the German U-boat commander knew it was a lie. Capt. Sylvester indignantly denied it. American combatant officers would scorn to avoid the dangers of transatlantic travel by seeking the safety of a hospital ship, a mock safety that no longer exists since Germany disregards the rules of war and makes hospitals the special object of her attacks.

A Canadian medical officer was taken aboard the submarine to be interrogated, and he was so roughly handled that a bone in his foot was broken. Here was another breach of the rules of war. Captured officers are entitled to courteous treatment by their captors. Shifting to another alibi, the submarine commander declared that the hospital ship carried explosives, as he had heard an explosion on board after the torpedo had hit. This was the noise of the boilers exploding. Later Capt. Sylvester and his companions heard the U-boat firing shells, and as the Llandovery Castle had gone down and there was no other target for the Germans than the lifeboats containing survivors, it appears certain that the submarine was engaged in sinking them.

German frightfulness seems to have sounded the very depths of depravity and cruelty. It is impossible for the human mind to conceive of more heinous deeds than those which the Hun has committed. The plank-walkers of Capt. Kidd and the eccentricities of the Barbary pirates no longer represent the acme of barbarism, for they pale into insignificance when compared with the twentieth century kultur of the German. But the Hun will pay. No man or government can outrage human nature and not pay the price. The avenger is on the way.—Washington Post.

HOW TO GET AT THE PROFITTEERS

They Must be Punished if Found Guilty of Fraudulent Returns—Excess to be Taxed.

If the Federal Trade Commission's charge that some of the profiteering which it says has taken place since this country entered the war is attributable to "bare-faced fraud" can be sustained, then it is altogether inadequate to talk of increased excess profits taxes as the remedy. The men responsible for the fraud should be sent to the penitentiary. If, however, the large profits have resulted from practices not considered illegitimate and not illegal, then increased taxation may be the proper remedy.

Some of the concerns mentioned in the commission's report have made statements in reply. An official of the American Metal Company, which paid salaries to certain of its officers running as high as $264,000 a year, says that this method of distributing its profits has been in existence for many years and was not devised to hide excess war profits. That answer is good, as far as it goes, but it does not go far enough. Was or was not an excess profits tax paid on the proportion of these salaries which in reality represented dividends rather than salary? Were the facts fully stated on the income tax return of the corporation? These are the pertinent questions. A system of dividing profits that was all right before the excess profits tax law was passed might very readily have become all wrong after that law was passed.

There are many corporations, whose stock is held largely or entirely by its active working officials, which before the passage of the present law paid little or no salaries to those officials. It made no difference to them whether they got their return in the shape of salaries or dividends. With the passage of the law, however, it did make a difference, and they were allowed by the Treasury Department to pay themselves reasonable salaries and by so much reduce the amount of profits subject to the excess tax. It is a poor rule that does not work both ways. The passage of the excess profits tax law very clearly put upon those corporations which distributed profits in the shape of salaries disproportionate to the value of services rendered the duty of making all the facts known to the government. If they failed to do this, they cannot excuse themselves with the plea that they have merely been doing what they always did.

The reply of Armour & Co. is equally unconvincing. They say that they make a profit of only a quarter of a cent on a pound of product and if that constitutes profiteering there is no honest business in the world. We have no idea what constitutes a reasonable profit on a pound of beef evidently in a business like the meat industry, which makes a large share of its profits out of by-products, it would depend largely upon what profits are made out of those by-products—but if a quarter of a cent a pound profit enables a company to increase its total profits from a pre-war average rate of 6.2 per cent. to a 1917 average of three or four times that amount, and if the pre-war rate was a reasonable one, then the quarter of a cent a pound profit is an unreasonable one and constitutes profiteering.

For cases of this sort, however, where apparently no fraud or criminality is charged, the corrective would seem to lie in an increase in the excess profits tax rate. Any legislation or regulation aimed solely at the big corporations would likely put the small corporations out of business and decrease production at a time when increased production is urgently demanded. If the small concerns are allowed to make a reasonable profit, that means that the big concerns will probably make enormous profits. The remedy is for the government to take away a goodly share of those enormous profits after they are made.—Sun.

Director Thanks Helpers.

To all who assisted in our recent War Savings drive and who previously assisted in the sale of War Savings Stamps, I wish to thank each and every one of you for the valuable service you have rendered our government in the past few months in the sale of War Savings Stamps.

The people of Prince William county, through your efforts, are coming to see the necessity for conserving labor and material for war purposes and the desirability of investing their savings in War Savings Stamps. I believe that the people are now ready to obligate themselves to save and invest definite amounts during the remainder of this year.

Prince William's quota of $30 per capita has not yet been reached and this is to request you, who have done such noble work, to continue in the good cause and let this campaign go on as vigorously and as earnestly as the boys in France perform the duties assigned to them.

While we can hardly compare the service we are rendering to that of the soldier who lays down his life, still in doing this work and pledging the people of this nation to save and economize and invest in War Savings Stamps, we are backing up the boys in khaki and rendering a service second only to that of the soldier who goes over the top.

Very sincerely yours,
G. RAYMOND RATCLIFFE,
 Director for Prince William County.

Sow Wood's Cow Peas
 After Harvesting Grain Crops

Farmers should make every preparation to sow all the COW PEAS possible after harvesting grain crops this year, so as to increase the fertility and productivity of their lands for crops to follow.

The Sowing of Cow Peas at the Last Working of Corn is also to be strongly recommended. Farmers who have practiced this claim that the sowing of Cow Peas in corn increases the yield of corn, and at the same time it makes a most desirable soil-improving or forage crop.

Rev. Geo. W. Crabtree, assisted by Rev. W. R. McElroy, of University, Va., the evangelist of Potomac Presbytery, has just concluded a two-weeks' series of evangelistic services at Jehoash Chapel, near Catlett.

There were seventy-six professions of faith, about half of them adults. Of this number, forty have already joined the Presbyterian church. Those who are to join by letter will be given an opportunity a little later. It is altogether probable that about sixty will be on the petition to Potomac Presbytery the first of September to organize this chapel into a church at once.

Mr. Crabtree organized his Sunday School the last of December. The enrollment is now more than one hundred. Rev. A. R. Bird of the second Presbyterian Church, of Washington, came down last week and dedicated the chapel. Revs. J. R. Cooke, of Greenwich, John A. Bowman, of Mealeton, and L. F. Hatcher, of Herndon, attended the all-day meeting Sunday. Mr. McElroy will go home for a few day's rest and then hold a tent meeting just outside of Washington.

Bonar Law to Commons.

Andrew Bonar Law, chancellor of the exchequer, speaking in the house of commons today, said that one would have thought that nothing new as regards German brutality could have happened but the sinking of the Canadian hospital ship Llandoverly Castle was an unspeakable outrage.

HOSPITAL SHIP SUNK BY HUNS

Fleishish Treatment of Survivors by Submarine Commander

A German submarine 70 miles from the Irish coast on the night of June 27 torpedoed the 11,000-ton hospital ship Llandoverly Castle, which had been chartered by the Canadian government and had been in the service of carrying wounded and sick from England to Canada for many months past. The ship was then on her way to England. She had on board 258 persons, including 80 men of the Canadian army medical corps and fourteen female nurses.

Up to the latest reports only 24 of those on board, including the captain, have survived the treacherous attack, which came without warning.

False Charge by Hun Captain.

The submarine commander, who ordered the captain of the Llandoverly Castle, several of his officers and Maj. Lyon, of the medical corps, aboard, declared that he had sunk the ship because she was carrying American aviation officers and others in the fighting service of the allies. He added to this later by asserting that the vessel was carrying munitions stores, because of an explosion which had occurred aft.

All lights were burning when the Llandoverly Castle was torpedoed. These included a huge electric cross over the bridge and strings of white and green lights on either side. The red crosses on the sides of the vessel also were illuminated by electric lights.

Many Killed in Engine Room.

According to Red Cross information many were killed in the engine rooms. There is hardly any doubt of this as there was no response to Capt. Sylvester's signals from the bridge after the torpedo struck. As the engine-men were either killed or left their posts, there was no one to shut off the power, and the ship kept on her way, notwithstanding the great holes torn by the torpedo, not beginning to slow down until the water rushed into the boiler room, extinguishing the fires.

This added to the confusion in launching the lifeboats. There was no panic, however, and by the time the Llandoverly Castle lost her momentum most of the boats were over the side. Those above decks began climbing into them in good order. But many were unable to reach the boats, and the ship was sinking rapidly. They jumped into the sea, and a few of them were picked up.

Threatened to Shoot Major.

According to information received by the Canadian Red Cross here, Maj. Lyon, from the Llandoverly Castle, was forced to stand in the conning tower, despite an injured foot, while the German submarine officers questioned him. The Germans insisted that Maj. Lyon was an aviation officer, notwithstanding the officer's strenuous denials. The Germans even threatened to shoot Maj. Lyons, contending that he was an officer of the fighting unit, not a medical officer.

Probably Shelled Nursing Boats.

The admiralty report on the sinking describes the cruel treatment of Maj. Lyon, and declares that the submarine, after sinking the vessel, shelled an unknown target, which the reports indicate might have been the missing boats.

The captain's boat, containing the survivors, was picked up by the destroyer Lyzander, the commander of which has reported that he had found no trace of the remaining five boats.

Text of Admiralty Statement.

The admiralty statement on the sinking of the hospital ship follows:

"Germany's awful debt to the world continues to grow. Another hospital ship has been torpedoed, this time seventy miles from the nearest land, and her people turned adrift in their boats to sink or swim, as best they might.

"And although, as it happened, she was a Canadian hospital ship returning from Halifax, with no wounded aboard, the tale of crime reveals wanton deliberation on the part of the submarine commander and almost suggests the hope on his part that he would find her full of injured and helpless men.

"The Llandoverly Castle, R. A. Sylvester, master, was chartered by the Canadian government to convey their sick and wounded from England to Halifax.

"The Llandoverly Castle had on board a total of 258 persons, including 80 Canadian army medical corps men and fourteen female nurses. One boat, containing 24 survivors, has reached port so far.

Could Not Mistake the Ship.

It was during the night of June 27, toward 10:30, that the crime occurred. The Llandoverly Castle, steaming on her course at some fourteen knots, showed the usual navigation and regulation hospital ship lights. Under the overcast sky she was plain to see and could not be mistaken for anything but what she was—a ship immune by every law of war and peace from attack or molestation.

"No one on board saw the wake of the torpedo. The first intimation of the presence of a submarine was a jar and the roar of an explosion from aft. Then the lights went out.

"All that followed, save when a dim light was obtained from an emergency dynamo, just before the ship foundered, took place in the darkness. The engines were rung once to stop, then full speed astern. But from the engine room came no answer.

Crew Assembles in Darkness.

"The rehearsed routine of the ship, however, held good. With the German enemy, one must be prepared for every emergency like this, and along the darkened decks the crew groped to the boat stations and stood by for orders to leave her.

"From the bridge the captain's megaphone, loud in the night, bade them hold until way was off the ship. The carpenter was aft making an examination of the damage.

"In the wireless cabin the Marconi operator was trying in vain to transmit the ship's position. His key gave no response; the spark was gone.

The carpenter's report was that No. 4 hold aft was blown in and that the ship could not remain afloat. The order was given to lower away the boats on both sides and abandon ship.

Medical Force Reported Out.

"The officer commanding the Canadian army medical corps on board reported that his people were out. This is important in view of the fact that no boat but the captain's has been picked up.

"Save for any of the ship's company or the engine room crew who may have been killed by the explosion of the torpedo, it is clear that every one got away. One of the small boats, called accident boats, was held back for those last to leave the ship. But when all the others were away, the captain went to his cabin for an electric torch, and, on returning to deck, found that this also had gone.

"The submarine hailed the boat in English: 'Come alongside,' it ordered.

"Threatens Death to Rescuers. 'The boat was pelling down to pick up a drowning man. The second officer stood up and shouted back: "We are picking up a man from the water."

HOSPITAL SHIP SUNK BY

"Come alongside," repeated the brusque voice from the submarine.

The boat held on its way and forthwith two revolver shots were fired at or over it.

"Come alongside. I will shoot my big gun," shouted the submarine commander. The boat lay alongside the submarine and the captain (probably the man picked up) was ordered on board. In case he should be made prisoner and kept on board, he gave the second officer, who remained in the boat, the course to steer. He was then taken to the conning tower of the submarine where two officers awaited him.

No American Officers Aboard. "The commander asked him sharply: 'What ship is that?'"

"It is the hospital ship Llan-dover Castle," answered the captain.

"Yes"—the commander did not attempt to appear surprised—but you are carrying eight American flight officers."

"We are not," replied the captain. "We have seven Canadian medical officers on board. The ship was chartered by the Canadian government to carry sick and wounded Canadians from England to Canada."

"To the submarine commander's reiterated: 'You have been carrying American flight officers,' he added, 'I have been running to Canada for six months with wounded. I give you my word of honor that we have carried none except patients, medical staff crew and sisters.'"

"The commander then demanded if there were any Canadian medical officers in the boat and he was told there was one.

He ordered him to come aboard.

"Where are our other boats?" asked the captain. The submarine commander did not answer. He was watching the Canadian medical officer being roughly hauled on board and thrust along the deck. This was done so violently and with such plain intention to injure the Canadian, Maj. T. Lyon, of the Canadian army medical corps, that he actually had a small bone in his foot broken by the handling he received.

"There was another German officer in the conning tower, the second in command, who had not yet spoken. In reply to the captain's question he motioned over his shoulder with his field glasses northward.

"Maj. Lyon was interrogated, after protesting as a medical officer and ordered back into the boat. The captain also was allowed to go. The boat was cast off, and pulled away from the submarine.

"The submarine began to circle around the wreckage at full speed. Several times it shaved the boat narrowly, once swinging past within two feet of it; once it stopped and again took the second and fourth officers aboard and questioned them.

Invents a New Excuse. "By this time the submarine commander invented a new excuse. He stated that there was a big explosion aft as the vessel sank, and that, therefore, she must have been carrying ammunition. The second officer explained patiently that this was the explosion of the boiler and the falling of the funnel. They were allowed to return to their boats, which then made a full and proceeded.

"Again for a while the submarine circled and threatened her by sweeping close to her; then moved off and seemed to come to a stop. From this position says the captain's official statement, she opened fire at an

SOLDIER'S STORY OF GREAT BATTLE

Marine From Quantico Camp Wounded in Battle at Front Tells Graphic Story.

What is probably the first soldier's story of the opening of the marines' big smash around Chateau Thierry is told by Corporal Mall Galloway, wounded when he went over the top in the first American attack on June 8, in a letter to his sister, Miss Elsie Galloway, war worker at the Department of Agriculture. Galloway lived here prior to enlisting.

Corporal Galloway, who trained at Quantico before going over was hit by a machine gun bullet below the right eye, having several of his teeth knocked out.

"Sis, it was some battle," he writes from the base hospital. "Wish I could tell you all about my experiences. Would make Empey ashamed of himself. Was wounded about 6:30 June 6. Machine gun bullet entered just under right eye, knocking out several of my upper teeth, tearing away a little of the palate on the left side; most of my fillings are lost, too. We were in the thickest of the machine guns and in the first wave that went over. We knew only 40 minutes previous that we were going over. You should have seen the spirit of the boys.

Life Saved by Pack. "Hurriedly rolled and slung packs— assembled— every one anxious to go. No one seemed the least bit excited. It certainly took nerve to advance into what we did, but the marines were right there and needed no urging. I fell just in the rear of my lieutenant and at practically the same time. We are in the same hospital.

"Elbert Brooks helped carry our lieutenant in. He was scratched just a little, but not enough to count. Revolver and canteen saved him.

"After abusing my heavy pack as much as I have, it saved my life, I suppose. After I regained my senses I started forward but was waded down, unslung my pack and placed it just in front of me. You could hear the bullets play a tune on it and my helmet. Lay there until after dark and crawled into a little hole where there was a wounded comrade.

Many Comrades "Went West." I bandaged him in two places with my first-aid. Shells were bursting everywhere until about 10:30 p. m. Then I crawled to a first-aid station where I was bandaged.

"At morning I was carried away in an ambulance. It is simply wonderful the way I have been treated since. Uncle Sam certainly has this system in good running order.

"Saw some horrible sights. Lots of my comrades went 'west' and lots more came to 'Blighty' with me, but you should see what we did to Heine. He won't forget that dose for a long time."

Corporal Galloway is with the seventy-ninth company, Sixth regiment of marines, stationed at Quantico and known to many Washingtonians.—Washington Post.

The Haymarket Branch of the American Red Cross now has a membership of 180, which includes new members and those who have renewed their membership for 1918. There are still quite a number who no doubt consider themselves members and intend to renew.

The attendance at the surgical dressing work room is very good; 2,500 dressings were made in June, and a large shipment of the same, as well as bedshirts and knitted articles, will be made, as soon as division headquarters are located in their new quarters.

Mr. E. R. Rector has kindly donated the use of two nice rooms over his store building for the use of the Haymarket Branch. One of which will be used exclusively for surgical dressings, the other for hospital supplies, sewing, knitting, etc.

The use of the rooms supplies a long felt need, and will add a great deal to the convenience and comfort of the workers.

CLIFTON

The Children's Day service in the Presbyterian Church Sunday night was quite a success; the program was mainly patriotic in its nature. Nine boys gave the history of our flag and then saluted the U. S. flag and Christian flags carried by two boy scouts. In connection with this a reading entitled, "Your Flag and My Flag," was given; the Star-Spangled Banner and the Red, White and Blue were sung.

Miss Dorothy Haycock recited "A German-American" in a creditable manner.

Rev. Aford Kelley made the address.

Collection was taken for the Sabbath School Missions.

The Service Flag given by the Aid Society to the church was presented by Mrs. M. E. Quigg, the president of the Aid Society, and was received by Mr. W. H. Richards, one of the elders of the church and father of two of the boys represented by stars on the flag. Mrs. Quigg also had a son represented.

The flag contained eleven stars and represented the following boys and young men, given according to their enlistment into the service.

George Everett Poindexter, enlisted in July, 1912; honorably discharged in 1915; reentered the army in 1916.

Leo Harold Poindexter, enlisted in U. S. Navy March, 1916.

Walter and Loedwig Fowler joined the National Guards of D. C. June, 1916; inducted in U. S. Army Oct., 1916; mustered out of service in March, 1917; recalled in April to the army.

Dr. W. E. Ford, enlisted in the W. Va. National Guards from Keyser, W. Va., during spring of 1916, going to camp at once; inducted into the regular army during summer; if he was discharged at all, it was only for a very short time like the Fowler boys. Sept., 1917, he was sent to Camp Shelby, Miss., where he is yet, unless he has sailed for France; is now captain of his company.

J. Garland Spaker, enlisted in the U. S. Navy April, 1917, and is now aboard the Louisiana.

Lieutenant Walter A. Richards, entered training camp at Ft. McPherson, Ga., May 15, 1917; received his commission as 2nd lieutenant during summer; was promoted to 1st lieutenant and acting adjutant Jan., 1918; sailed for France April, 1918.

Chas. Woods Adams, enlisted in U. S. Navy Sept., 1917, was put on S. S. Pittsburg about Jan. 1, 1918, and is now on the water.

Elmer Thomas Ayre, enlisted in the Naval Reserve Force Jan., 1918, and is still doing clerical work in Washington, but expects soon to be called out for active service.

W. M. H. Richards, enlisted in Aviation Corps and is studying meteorology in Texas University and expects to go to France in a short time as scientific observer of weather conditions for the aviation service.

Lastly, we have Lewis D. Quigg, who has gone to Camp Lee within the past week.

Owing to the rain, the audience at the missionary meeting last Wednesday was small, but all who came were highly repaid for coming. Mrs. Radcliffe gave us an excellent talk on seed, in the morning, and in the afternoon Miss McCuen gave an excellent talk on Japan; she had been a teacher in Japan for several years and knows many things of interest. She had a Japanese ladies' costume had dressed up Miss Ruth Richards as a model, showing how difficult it is to put on and wear the Japanese dress.

The ladies from Washington returned on No. 10 and the ladies from Manassas on 21.

Mr. Spraker has sold his binder to Mr. Barrett, of Ivakota farm.

The weather keeps very cool for this season of the year; cool nights with very windy, dry days, making hard weather for corn and gardens.

Mr. S. A. Smith was partially paralyzed last Friday and is still confined to the house, although he is slightly better than at first.

Miss Sara Crewe spent the night in the village Monday on her way home from Pender.

The School League meets with Mrs. Montaply Friday, July 5, at 8 p. m.

WATERFALL

Miss Flora Smith, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. E. Pickett, of Landover, Md., has returned to her home here.

Miss Ethel Simonds and Mr. Holmes Levi motored from Washington for the past week-end and were guests of relatives here and at Wootsey.

Mr. Fenton Foley, of Marshall, visited recently at "Poplar Hill," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Omar Kibler.

Rev. T. D. D. Clark, of Manassas, was a guest at Oaksdale, the home of Mr. G. W. Shirley, on Thursday night of last week.

Miss Frances Kibler returned on Saturday from a visit to relatives in Washington.

The regular June meeting of the Community League was held at the school building on Thursday evening of last week. A most interesting address with "Patriotism" as the subject, by Rev. T. D. D. Clark, was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Two recitations, "Why a Boy Leaves the Farm," by Nomie Gossom, jr., and "The Waterfall Community League," by Stanley Bell, were also much enjoyed, the latter being composed by Miss Lotta Brooks, of Washington. All present joined in singing a number of old songs, after which ice cream was sold.
