

WARTIME PROFITS

Swift & Company has the following to say in regard to wartime profits:

We have been at war for over a year. Gradually but surely each individual and organization is accommodating itself to wartime demands. This means sacrifice, Service, Thrift.

We have many varied and conflicting interests to serve and satisfy.

The service of supplying food to the fighting forces is a privilege.

The satisfying of the producer of live stock and the consumer of meat, an unenviable requirement since the interests of each are in opposite directions, is part of our duty.

We have since November 1, 1917, been operating under a license from the United States Food Administration. Rules have been made which require that we so conduct our meat food business that our profits in these departments, which represent about 70 per cent of our business, will amount to not more than 9 per cent on the capital employed, (including surplus and borrowed money), or to not in excess of two and one-half cents for each dollar's worth of goods sold.

In the business of certain other departments not meat food, such as soap, commercial fertilizer, etc., which comprise about 7 per cent of our business, we must not make more than 15 per cent of the capital employed.

This control of profits is in the interest of the American Public and the Allied Governments. We have accepted it willingly and are so conducting our business as to come within the limits prescribed. That these limits are not excessive we think any fair-minded person will allow.

Swift & Company has other activities than those mentioned above, such as plants in foreign countries, and investments in stock yards. These activities have no bearing on food or livestock prices in this country and the Food Administration of the United States quite properly has omitted them from its control.

At the end of our present fiscal year, we propose to show in detail what profits we have made in each of the groups mentioned above. Heretofore, in the statements published to our stockholders and creditors, we have shown our profits in totals only, although we have, on occasion required, given to the cattle, hog and sheep producers information regarding our profits in our respective lines. We feel, however, that in these times frankness is peculiarly desirable.

Our organization is being used, first and foremost, for the successful prosecution of the war. All other business has been made subsidiary to this principal idea.

We are observing rules laid down for us by the Government.

We propose to show the producing and consuming public in actual figures what relation our profits have to them.

The Federal Trade Commission released for publication Thursday, August 8th, a Summary of their Report on the Meat Packing Industry.

We invite inquiries concerning our business.

CLOSING IN ON THE ENEMY

The enemy is now palpably suffering from internal convulsions. They are unerring indications of demoralization and harbingers of defeat. The collapse may not come soon, for the fabric of German militarism is both extensive and tough, but the fact is now recognized throughout the world that the German system is doomed. Miscalculations, adverse circumstances, and the growing strength of the allies have combined to deal deadly blows at the Germans, and matters have reached such a pass that not all the intellect and force at their command are sufficient to repair the breaches. The German armies are overmatched; German intrigues in the Balkans is outmaneuvered; German influence in Russia is waning as the allies gain momentum; the German people are restive, despondent and menacing.

The gigantic shadow of the coming catastrophe has thrown all Germany into darkness. The emperor and his satellites are in a semipanic. The chancellor is being down by conflicting currents, yet he must wield the emperor's authority for a while, as there is no stronger hand. The emperor throws out sops to public opinion, while withholding any definite assurance of relief or liberalization of political powers. He says he wishes to give the people greater participation in the direction of government; but he stops with the pretended wish. His empty phrases are just the kind that are uttered by tyrants before their fall, when they are blinded by folly and cannot see the prison bars or the grave at the end of their road.

Mittel Europa has been disemboweled by the collapse of Bulgaria. It is more destructive of Germany's vitality than Russia's defection proved to be to the allies' strength. The allies virtually traded off Russia for America, but Germany cannot find another road to Turkey. Without Bulgaria Turkey is lost, and without Turkey the Hohenzollern and Hapsburg empires stand surrounded with crushingly powerful enemies. Turkey's loss means Russia's recovery through allied assistance via the Black Sea. It means also a direct attack upon Austria's weakest flank by a combination of powers supported by both land and sea transportation. It probably means, also, the early clearing of the Adriatic and hence the closing of the Mediterranean to every hostile submarine. This, in turn, would mean the immediate strengthening of the allied forces from Gibraltar to Odessa and Archangel.

The psychological condition of Germany is as bad as the political and military conditions. The failure to break down the allies in March, April and June caused widespread depression in Germany. It has been intensified and made universal by the failure of the army to withstand the allied onslaughts. Nothing so strongly proves the changed temper of the Germans as the language now employed by the German emperor. He is compelled to appeal to the people to modify their anger and grant the government another chance. His words reveal that the people are in an ugly mood.

The allies are redoubling their efforts to break down the enemy system, now that it is badly battered. Every possible effort should be employed at this time. The activities of the people, their armies and their rulers should be incessant and most carefully directed to the great end in view. The enemy will not fail to seize every possible expedient to wriggle out of disaster. He has shown that he can act with lightning quickness. He is capable of immense mischief and was never as dangerous as at present. If the allies should relax their vigilance or their effort in politics and on the battlefield, the enemy would be enabled to prolong the war and possibly gain advantage in the hour of surrender.

While Foch's hammer is battering down Germany's main strength in the west, the allies should strain every nerve to beat down and annihilate the enemy elsewhere as well. After four years of failure the allies now have the upper hand in the Balkans. They will have only themselves to blame if the enemy should elude their grasp and again outwit them as he did in 1914, 1915, 1916 and 1917.—Washington Post.

NOW IS THE TIME TO PREVENT SMALLPOX

Cold Weather and Shortage of Physicians Double Reason For Vaccination.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 4.—Two years ago it cost a certain county in Southwest Virginia six thousand dollars to stamp out an epidemic of smallpox. And all this expense and suffering might have been avoided by vaccination—a sure preventive—had those in authority seen fit to urge this simple precaution. But they had been lulled into a sense of security by the fact that their county had previously escaped the disease, and so it was assumed that this immunity would continue indefinitely.

As a matter of fact, smallpox may always be looked for in neighborhoods where vaccination is neglected or opposed. While the dangers from this loathsome disease are noticeably lessened by warm weather, it is almost certain to reappear in the fall or winter. Nor does it confine itself to any particular section. Last March, for example, nineteen counties reported eighty-three cases.

This year, in view of the shortage of physicians on account of the war, it would be the part of wisdom to take time by the forelock and begin forthwith the work of vaccination. In fact, a number of local school boards, realizing that the menace of the disease is constant, already have authorized vaccination of children in their districts, and will see that every measure is taken to prevent the appearance of smallpox. Their example should be followed everywhere, and this is made the easier by the fact that vaccine is readily procurable at cost prices from the State Board of Health. The folly of injection smacks of the tragic when one contemplates the ravages of the disease and the simplicity of the guaranteed methods of prevention.

Of course, even at this late date when over a century of experience and observation has demonstrated the efficiency of vaccination, the voice of ignorance may still be heard in occasional protests against this method of prevention. But those who hearken to such protests, aside from neglecting a serious duty to their fellowmen, are subjecting themselves to a danger which they little realize. In the county already referred to there was a merchant who took it upon himself loudly to decry vaccination, and as if in punishment for his blatant incredulity, the disease came to him in most virulent form. How much wiser it is even for those who have their honest doubts to "play safety" and take the simple precaution which has meant the saving of so many thousands of lives in the past.

OLD WRITINGS BROUGHT TO LIGHT THROUGH THE COURSE OF EVENTS

(Washington Star.) Among the many prophecies brought from their hiding places by the war, there are two or three which, from the course of events, are attracting unusual attention. And these in some form tell of the defeat of Germany, with astonishing detail as to successive events, battles already fought and calamity awaiting the Hun. Probably the most astonishing prophecy is the one known as "Brother John's Prophecy," which first became known to the public about two generations ago through the efforts of the French writer, M. Adrien-Peladan, who, it is said, received it from a certain canon of St. Michel de Frigollet, near Tarascon, who had been given it by an Abbe Donat, a learned priest who died at Beaucaire at an advanced age. The author of this prophecy is said to have been a Roman Catholic monk, who lived about 1600, and was known to his cotemporaries as Brother John (Frater Johannes). The prophecy is as follows: "The real Antichrist will be one of the monarchs of his time, a son of Luther. He will invoke God and give himself out as his messenger (or apostle). "The prince of lies will swear by the Bible. He will represent himself as the arm of the Most High, sent to chastise corrupt peoples. "He will only have one arm, but his innumerable armies, who will take for their device the words 'God with us,' will resemble the infernal legions. "For a long time he will act by craft and strategy. His spies will overrun the earth and he will be master of the secrets of the mighty. He will have learned men in his pay who will maintain and undertake to prove his celestial mission. "A war will furnish him with the opportunity of throwing off the mask. It will not be in the first instance a war which he will wage against a French monarch. But it will be one of such a nature that after two weeks all will realize its universal character. "Not only all Christian and all Mussulman, but even other more distant peoples will be involved. Armies will be enrolled from the four quarters of the globe. For, by the third week, the angels will have opened the minds of men, who will perceive that the man who is Antichrist, and that they all will become his slaves if they do not overthrow this conqueror. "Antichrist will be recognized by various tokens; in especial he will massacre the priests, the monks, the women, the children and the aged. He will show no mercy, but will pass torch in hand, like the barbarians, yet invoking Christ! "His words of imposture will resemble those of Christians, but his actions will be those of Nero and of the Roman persecutors. He will have an eagle in his arms, and there will be an eagle also in the arms of his confederate, another bad monarch. "But the latter will be a Christian, and will die from the malediction of Pope Benedict, who will be elected at the commencement of the reign of Antichrist. "No longer will priests and monks be seen confessing and absolving the combatants, because in the first place the priests and monks will be fighting with the other citizens, and, further, because Pope Benedict, having cursed Antichrist, will proclaim that those who fight against him will be in a state of Grace, and should they die, will go straight to Heaven, like the martyrs. "The bull which will proclaim these things will create a great sensation. It will receive the courage of the foes of Antichrist and cause the death of the monarch who is his ally. "In order to conquer Antichrist it will be necessary to kill more men than Rome has ever contained. It will need the energies of all the kingdoms, because the cock, the leopard and the white eagle will not be able to make an end of the black eagle without the aid of the prayers and vows of all the human race. "Never will humanity have been faced with such a peril, because the triumph of Antichrist would be that of the demon, who will have taken possession of his personality. "For it has been said that, twenty centuries after the Incarnation of the Word, the Beast will be incarnate in his turn, and will menace the earth with as many evils as the Divine incarnation has brought it graces. "Toward the year 2,000 Antichrist will be made manifest. His army will surpass in number anything that can be imagined. There will be Christians among his cohorts, and there will be Mohammedan and heathen soldiers among the defenders of the Lamb. "For the first time the Lamb will be all red. There will not be in the whole-Christian world a single spot which is not red; and red also will be heaven and earth, and water, and even the air; for blood will flow in the domain of the four elements at once. "The black eagle will hurt itself upon the cock, which will lose many feathers, but will strike heroically with his spur. It will soon be exhausted but for the aid of the leopard and its claws. "The black eagle, who will come from the land of Luther, will make a surprise attack on the cock from another side, and will invade the land of the cock up to one-half. The white eagle, who will come from the North, will fall upon the black and the other eagle, and completely invade the land of Antichrist. "The black eagle will find itself forced to let go the cock in order to fight the white eagle, whereupon the cock will have to pursue the black eagle into the land of Antichrist to aid the white eagle. "The battles fought up to that time will be as nothing compared with those which will take place in the country of Luther; for the seven angels will simultaneously pour out the fire of their censor upon the impious land. In other words, the Lamb ordains the extermination of the face of Antichrist. "When the Beast finds himself lost, he will become furious. It will be necessary that for some months the beak of the eagle, the claws of the leopard and the spur of the cock shall bury themselves in the flesh of the Beast. "Men will be able to cross the rivers over the bodies of the dead, which in places will change the courses of the streams. Only the bodies of the most noble, the highest captains and the princes will be buried; for to the carnage of the battlefields will be added the destruction of myriads who will die from hunger and pestilence. "Antichrist will sue for peace many times, but the seven angels, who march before the three animals, defenders of the Lamb, will have proclaimed that victory will not be given except on condition that Antichrist shall be crushed like straw upon the threshing-floor. "Executors of the justice of the Lamb, the three animals will not be permitted to cease fighting so long as Antichrist has soldiers. "That which makes the decree of the Lamb so implacable is that Antichrist has dared to claim to be a Christian and to act in the name of Christ, and if he did not perish, the fruit of
