Dr. Heck urged better attendthat which best prepares for life and no scheme of education is good that ignores the home en-vironment of the child. We must teach real things and by means of real things. "We must interpret the local environment of the child as a means of education." Nature study should be taught leading to agriculture. All boys should have wood-working and mechanics as a means of training the hand and eye. All girls should study domestic science and home hygiene. The abstract subjects are of little use unless the utilities are learned. Much real value may be added.

twelve men, those men were not infallible. They may have erred. The first jury failed to agree, the second gave Claude fifteen years in the penitentiary. A third jury on a new indictment with the same evidence sentenced him to death. Later on Wesley Edwards and Sidney Allen were each given fifteen years on the first indictment and their cases comproin the penitentiary. If Claude Allen had not been tried when he was no one believes he would have been convicted. Prejudice was strong. The law recognizes this possibility and gives the judge the right to set aside the. verdict of any jury. It goes further than that and says the highest court in the state may er and gives the governor the power to set-aside its verdict by the exercise, of the pardoning power vested in him. Thirty thousand neonle in Virginia believe that Claude Allen should ot die in the electric chair, and have asked Governor Mann to spare his life. I can see nothing inappropriate in such action.

But your correspondent cal s this sentiment, and speaks of Justice versus Sentiment. In this he speaks of the great principle of Justice. In doing so he confuses the verdicts of courts with abstract justice. In many cases they are far different. Juries do not deal out justice; courts do not decree justice. Their verdicts are only approximate justice. They are merely expedients to help protect society. To deal out justice to a man you need to know his hereditary influences, his ancestry, his environment and education, and 'an eye for an eye and a tooth or a tooth." Such is impose ble, hence abstract justice is impossible; we are merely doing what we can to protect society from harmful characters and warn others. To put to death the least responsible of four criminals will not gain these ends, but will make us feel less respect for these courts.

Your correspondent speaks of sentiment as if it were a characteristic of the weak-minded. Sentiment is the most powerful force in human life. Man's being is not chiefly intellectual; it is largely emotional. Consider what part of your life is conpart sentiment is the chief factor in, and you will see how

VIRGINIA'S ELECTRICAL VOTE.

When Virginia's presidential electors met Monday in Richmond and cast the State's twelve votes for Woodrow Wilson for president of the United States and for Thomas R. Marshall for vice-president, this State witnessed an occurrence the like of which has not been witnessed in Virginia for nearly a century.

Not since 1820 has the State cast its electoral vote for a native Virginian. Then James Monroe of Westmoreland county. was chosen president with only offe dissenting electoral vote, which was cast for John Quincy Adams by William Plumer.

No democrat born in Virginia has been nominated since then for the presidency until Woodrow Wilson was chosen at the Baltimore convention in 1912.

Judge R. T. W. Duke was elected to preside over the State's electoral college Monday, and Mr. Jas. M. Hayes, Jr., was made secretary.

Mr. Campbell.

the keynote of his administration | tion? policy in his recent remarkable speech in Chicago. He sounded in the presence of a gathering of the most powerful business me of the middle west, the warning that he has been convinced that there exists a money trust or perhaps, more accurately, a 'credit trust." "We must see to it," said the distinguished speaker, 'that the business of the United-States is set absolutely free o every feature of monopoly. This can mean only this-that natural resources thus controlled must be wrested therefrom and placed under such government supervision as will insure access to them as the right of anyone who desires to use them and on the same terms that are granted to anybody else.

As the president-elect approaches more nearly the time when he is to assume his great responsibilities, he is speaking in more definite terms of what may be expected from his administration of the affairs of the country. His Chicago address was a warning to business monopolists and his Chicago conduct, in keeping aloof from politicians, was a service of notice that politics is not going to be the first business of his administration.

3 per cent, paid on savings account

December 13th.

Dear Friend:

The Best Christmas gift is a bank account. Start your children in the habit of saving before they acquire the habit of spending. No matter what the future holds in store for your little ones the knowledge of the true value of money will do more toward assisting them on the road to success, than any other single thing you can do for them.

It merely requires your first guidance—they will want to increase the deposits and see the account grow.

It is an education in itself.

Yours very truly,

G. RAYMOND RATCLIFFE,

The sleeping porch may be a fad, but moh Hko a detun Writer in a builders' magnizh of the suburban there are houses specially designed toaccommodate sleeping porches, and those who live within are not by any means tubercular. The simplest method of constructing a real sleeping porch in a new house of modest proportions is to construct a generous admer in the roof on the abeltered side leaving it entirely open at the front except to a point about two feet above the floor, to which height it should be boarded up. In this way a room of adequate size is formed without drafts and requiring only a cartain in front to secure privacy.

A good plan is to shingle the roof and sides and to lay a heavy grade of prepared canvas on the floor. This reofing and deck canvas is waterproof, so strong that it may be walked on freely. comes in widths of thirty and thirty-six inches, is imped an inch and a half when it is put down, and it is fastened with tacks not more than an inch apart.
