

FIGHTING TO AVERT SHORTAGE IN FUEL

Supply for Year Estimated at Seventy-five Million Tons Less Than Demand.

With the country facing an estimated fuel shortage in coal of 75,000,000 tons for next winter the federal authorities have for some days been in conferences discussing the outlook and debating methods and means of meeting it.

In the New England states the government has suggested that quantities of fire wood be cut and gathered against a possible coal famine. Similar requests are to go out to other sections of the country.

Within the last few days orders have gone out to dozens among the lesser industries to cut down their use of coal to the last minimum.

State Fuel Administrator H. F. Byrd, who is kept in close touch with conditions throughout the entire country by his frequent conferences at Washington, is very earnest in his appeal to the Virginia domestic consumers that, so far as is possible, they purchase their winter supply during the summer months.

The government through its various states and local fuel administrations, is determined to see that all waste in fuel is from this time on cut out, both at large and small industrial plants.

is therefore among the most vital necessities, particularly with a nation at war.

GIVE PROPER CARE TO ALL AFFECTED

"No Unsupervised Consumption by 1923" is Slogan of Virginia Health Workers.

Richmond, Va., May 8.—The health workers of Virginia have adopted a notable slogan in the great campaign gradually taking form against tuberculosis, the state's most fatal disease.

This is a big job that these earnest and enthusiastic workers have cut out for themselves but they rely upon an aroused public to give the cause of health and life ample moral and financial support.

At the moment this branch of health activity, which is under the direct supervision of the Virginia Anti-Tuberculosis Association, has a new problem on the hearts of its workers.

Some of these cases are entitled to hospital sanatoria treatment at the hands of the Federal Government but the larger part of them must rely upon other agencies.

These men have been communicated with from the office of the Anti-Tuberculosis Association, but up to this time but a small percentage of replies has been received.

Real progress in the war on tuberculosis cannot be looked for until the many thousands of disease foci are under medical and nursing care and education not only to the end that each individual sufferer may be helped to improved health and ultimate recovery, but that he may be taught how to keep himself from becoming a source of infection to others.

Of the cases of tuberculosis in Virginia, numbering at least twenty thousand and probably far exceeding that number, but a small proportion are under supervision, probably two thousand at the most, including those under treatment at sanatoria.

Thoughtful persons see in tuberculosis the most deadly and most merciless foe of the race, yet one which yields only concentrated energy and common sense to cope with it effectively.

NEW FOOD ADMINISTRATOR IN VIRGINIA

Mr. Hugh B. Sprout, of Staunton, Va., took the office of Federal Food Administrator for Virginia May 1st.

WHEAT FLOUR SUBSTITUTES DEFINED.

The wheat flour substitutes allowed by the Food Administration to balance sales of wheat flour to dealers and consumers are none other than the following, to-wit:

- Hominy, sock grits, corn meal, corn flour, edible corn starch, barley flour, rolled oats, oatmeal, rice, rice flour, buckwheat flour, potato flour, sweet potato flour, soy bean flour, feterita flour and meal.

"Other products of a similar nature" are not to be included in sales to dealers or consumers. That latitude is allowed only in sales to bakers.

But there are innumerable brands of cereal foods and the Food Administration does not undertake to familiarize itself with the ingredients contained in them unless the licensee submits a statement of the exact ingredients with the percentages thereof and the process of manufacture.

The Food Administration has ruled that the above list of substitutes is intended to include only substitutes obtainable by human beings, and that unbolled horn meal, unbolled hominy and other products which are suitable only for cattle feed, may not be sold or couched by wheat flour substitutes.

Putted rice, oena flakes, health bran, pancake flour, cream of barley, pea flour, pea potato, frosted oats, rye bran, flaked rye or any other rye product or any mixed cereal product.

FARMERS TAKE ACTION ON FLOUR

At a recent meeting of Orange Union, No. 222, the following motion, made by Robert D. Browning, was adopted:

Whereas, The Farmers' Union is desirous of co-operating with the Government;

Whereas, The Farmers' Union recognizes the absolute necessity of saving every grain of wheat and sense of flour for starving Europe.

Now, Therefore, it is adopted by the Farmers' Union of Orange and Madison counties that its members will try to eliminate entirely the use of wheat flour themselves and discourage its use by others.

PROFIT ALLOWED ON CANNED GOODS

Based upon views of the Federal Trade Commission, the Food Administration announces in cents per dozen the following maximum margins for licensed dealers between cost and selling price, unless of which will be considered unreasonable under the Food Control Act:

Table with 2 columns: Item and Price. Items include Corn No. 2 Standard, Corn No. 1 Best Standard, Corn No. 1 Fancy, Peas Average All Sizes, No. 1 Sub-Standard, No. 1 Standard, No. 2 Standard, No. 2 Fancy, Tomatoes, No. 1 Standard, No. 1 1/2 Standard, No. 2 Standard, No. 3 Standard, No. 10 Standard, No. 12 Fancy.

The fact is emphasized that the margins are maximum figures and must be considered in guide only. They do not change the rules.

Have you ever had our prices on JOB WORK? In these days it is well to know in advance both the quality and the cost. Ask THE JOURNAL.

FARMER WHITE AS A GRAIN DEALER

On May 20, 1917, just one year ago, Col. E. B. White, now a candidate for Congress from this district, appeared before the Committee on Agriculture, of the House of Representatives at Washington.

Col. White appeared for the purpose of discussing the proposition to put a minimum price, or a minimum guarantee of profit, on the products of the farmer. Col. White took the ground that any act of men who had the power to fix prices would undoubtedly do so—"to the danger point."

Just read Col. White's own words—as uttered just one year ago.

But, as I said before, anybody who has the power to do it, as these gentlemen—I am not accusing them of doing wrong, but I am telling you the power they have to do wrong; I would not accuse a man or set of men of doing wrong unless I could prove it—I only tell you what power these men have. When I was in the grain business in St. Louis, it was before the interstate commerce act was enacted into law, and special rates were being given over the railroads to a favored few. I happened to be one of those favored few. I was operating over the Big Four and the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroads to Newport News from St. Louis, and over the Missouri, Kansas & Texas to Galveston.

Those rates were not given to very many; they were given to a few. Those few had some very nice dinners at the club, but there was no combination. There was a general understanding about what ought to be made on those products, and bids were sent out accordingly. I am telling you that myself. I am just like most people, and there are a whole lot of people better than I am, but I have never seen many men who had the power to make a price on the thing they bought or the thing they sold who did not utilize that power to the full extent of their right—to the danger point.

Col. White says he was one of the "favored few" who were given special rates by the Big Four and the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Companies. And night there Col. White made big money in handling the farmers' product by reason of the fact that he was a favorite of the Big Four and the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Companies. It is not necessary to make any charge against Col. White. In the above Col. White, himself, is the speaker.

We wonder if Col. White is still a favorite of the Big Four and the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad Companies.—Culpeper Exponent.

Questions and—Answers That Do Not Accord

Some Questions and Answers from the Loudoun Mirror under caption, "A Few Pointed Paragraphs."

For how long a term will the President elected?

Four years.

Can he succeed himself?

There is no constitutional provision. Both Washington and Jefferson refused a third term, thus setting a precedent that has never been broken.

For how long a term is the governor of Virginia elected?

Four years.

Can he succeed himself?

He cannot under the constitution of Virginia.

For how long a term are congressmen elected?

For two years.

Why did Washington and Jefferson refuse a third term?

Why did the framers of the Virginia Constitution write into it the provision that no governor could succeed himself, and why was the provision inserted in the Federal Constitution limiting the term of office of a Congressman to two years?

To preserve the principles of democracy. Long tenure of office is characteristic of autocratic Germany. Frequent change of representatives is the foundation upon which democracy is builded.

Have France and England hesitated to make changes in even the highest offices and at a time when they were in the midst of war?

They have not.

Does Mr. Carlin formulate or has he ever drawn any of the important administration war measures? If he has we have never heard of it.

What did he do?

Voted with the majority of the democrats and republicans. Is there any criticism against him for this?

None.

Does he deserve another term after having served 10 years for doing what 96 per cent of the members did on supporting Mr. Wilson's policies?

Not at all. Anybody can drift with the tide, but it takes pluck to breast the current.

Is there anything to the argument that this is not the proper time to make a change?

If Mr. Wilson has ever depended upon Mr. Carlin for formulating his war program or shaping the administrative policies, the papers have not recorded it. Sad as his defeat in August will be, and will inevitably come to pass, we venture the prediction that Mr. Wilson will write just as able a message to Congress when the next session convenes as he has in the past, that the administration bills for the proper conduct of the war will be correctly drawn and passed and that Mr. White's votes will be just as patriotic as Mr. Carlin's.

We venture a further prediction that if any resolution is offered to investigate any trust handling the foodstuffs that the people must have and in which the producers and consumers are interested, Mr. White if a member of the committee, would not hesitate to use all his influence to have it reported out favorably and without delay.—Loudoun Mirror.

A FALSE REPORT

Minnieville, Va., May 8, 1918.

We are publishing through the Manassas papers for the benefit of our kind friends who have not been absent-minded in circulating a false assertion about our son, Private John T. Clarke's conduct while at Camp Lee, and who is now somewhere in France.

We hope the following letter from his Captain, S. J. Raymond, will thoroughly convince his

The same Questions with Answers slightly altered, in accordance with another point of view.

For how long a term will the President elected?

Four years.

Can he succeed himself?

There is no constitutional provision. Both Washington and Jefferson refused a third term, thus setting a precedent that has never been broken.

For how long a term is the governor of Virginia elected?

Four years.

Can he succeed himself?

He cannot under the constitution of Virginia.

For how long a term are congressmen elected?

For two years.

Why did Washington and Jefferson refuse a third term?

Why did the framers of the Virginia Constitution write into it the provision that no governor could succeed himself, and why was the provision inserted in the Federal Constitution limiting the term of office of a Congressman to two years?

Washington had served the Colony of Virginia in the French and Indian War, and later in Colonial Conventions and Congresses; he had given his services to the Colonies in the long drawnout Revolution; he was then President of the United States for eight years, and retired for a well earned and well needed rest. Also it may be remarked that the Monarchical form of government was favored by many at that time, and Washington himself had been approached in regard to the acceptance by him of a kingly crown. To discourage such notions, and to dispel any idea that he entertained aspirations of this nature or had such ambitions, he said it would not be wise for him to accept another term as Chief Executive.

In regard to Jefferson, his second term was of a stormy nature. Political feeling was bitter, and passion ran high. Mr. Jefferson left office very much disgusted with politics. He seldom afterward went far from his home in Virginia, and in his epitaph he did not even mention the fact of his having been President.

Frequent change of representatives is not the foundation upon which democracy is builded. Frequent elections of representatives may be, so that the representative in office may be brought before the people in order that the electorate may decide whether he has been faithful to his trust. The representative of the eighth Virginia district, Hon. C. C. Carlin, has been before the people every two years since his first election, and they have approved his conduct by returning him.

Have France and England hesitated to make changes in even the highest offices and at a time when they were in the midst of war?

We of the eighth congressional district of Virginia will certainly not attempt to criticize or direct the policy of England or France; we have a job of our own, but we know of no removals except in cases of army and navy officers, and ministers belonging to the Executive department of the government.

Representatives in the Legislative bodies cannot be removed by newspapers or any other power but by the people, or the assembled legislative bodies to which such representatives may belong.

Does Mr. Carlin formulate or has he ever drawn any of the important administration war measures?

What did he do?

Mr. Carlin voted with the majority. If the majority was right, why not? Any sensible man will gladly drift with the tide, if the current leads in the right direction, but only a fool will attempt to breast it, when by so doing he finds himself spending his strength to reach an undesired goal. According to the Mirror, there are brainy men in congress to the extent of 96 per cent.

Glorious and decisive as the victory of Mr. Carlin in August will be, and it will inevitably come to pass, we venture the prediction that Mr. Wilson will write just as able a message to congress when the next session convenes as he has in the past, and the administration bills for the proper conduct of the war will still be correctly drawn and passed, and as we do not figure that Mr. White's vote will be just as patriotic as ever.

We venture a further prediction that if any resolution is offered to investigate, in the interest of the people, any trust handling the foodstuffs that the people must have, Mr. Carlin, if a member of the committee, will not hesitate to use all his influence to have it reported out favorably and without delay.

for, Mr. Carlin is a man "of the people; for the people," and he will be elected "by the people."

CANTEEN WORKERS CATER TO POILU'S APPETITE FOR OYSTERS AND SALADS

Eleanor Robson Belmont, Home From Europe, Tells of Her Unbounded Faith in the Red Cross.

By ELEANOR ROBSON BELMONT.

WHEN I left for Europe a few months ago I had no cast-iron reverence for the Red Cross. When I returned from Europe I brought home with me unbounded belief in the organization. I had seen enough to make me realize that this was the best method of serving the soldiers and sailors. We are waging an economic war. Therefore the surest and most effective way to help is through the established channels selected for that purpose by the government.

The main work of the American Red Cross, however, is, of course, carried on in France. The policy of those heading this work is to back up the French in their own efforts and to help them develop along their own lines, not to root out French institutions and transplant American ones. Whether we work, then, in canteens, in warehouses, in dispensaries, for poilus or for refugees, in Paris or in huts used for this purpose are little alleys marked "Paris," "Dijon," or "Lyon." These little alleys are laid out with bunks filled with sleeping men.

If a poilu is going to Paris, he throws himself down in the Paris bunk, serene in the knowledge that he will be called in time for the Paris train.

In some of the canteens the lights have to be dimmed on account of aeroplanes. Often the lights are covered with colored muslin shields which make a rosy glow that is very home-like. One of the canteens has been decorated by some of the best camouflage artists in France, who have taken great delight in covering the walls and even the ceiling with their pictures. The canteens are open day and night for the benefit of the men at the big junction points.

Do More Than Feed Men.

The women in the canteens do more than feed the men. However, important as that is, poilus leaving their families are naturally depressed and need sympathetic listeners. Some one to admire his wife's picture, some one to laugh over the baby's latest sign of genius, some one to tell him that the oldest boy is the image of his handsome father—this is as real a need in the poilu's life as salad or soup. In fact the presence of these fine women is such an influence for good that officers say the morale of the army is distinctly higher wherever the canteens are. This causes great rivalry among the canteen workers. Each one wants her canteen to be the best and most popular in the service.

Besides this direct personal service to the soldiers the Red Cross is doing a kind of John the Baptist work with dispensaries. We have fifteen dispensaries scattered through districts where war has been or is likely to be. France had mobilized 18,000 of her 24,000 physicians, leaving about 6,000 for the whole of civilian France. Sometimes you will find one old doctor taking care of several villages with no means of transportation except occasionally an aged, overworked horse. Here is a chance for the Red Cross to step in and help. There is a syndicate of physicians to which the Red Cross applies to find out if a certain village has a medical adviser; if not we establish a center and operate in a given section around the center.

Bathing a Luxury.

A Red Cross doctor and nurse go out regularly to the villages in their section. Each village is informed when they are coming so that all who want medical advice or treatment can meet together in one spot and save unnecessary calls. Of course, if any one is too ill to come to the doctor, the doctor goes to him. The worstes carry among other things shower baths for babies. In many regions of France, owing to lack of facilities, bathing is a luxury, so the superstitious has grown up that it is dangerous. Now since the mothers are convinced that their children will be neither killed nor injured, but on the contrary benefited by baths, they do look forward to them!

After all this inspiring activity of the Red Cross on the other side, to me in the midst of the drudgery and tragedy, I expected the work here to be an anti-climax. I was amazed, then, when I returned to see what we were accomplishing at home.

ELEANOR ROBSON BELMONT, the devastated districts, for the children or for the aged, it is always on the same plan of backing up the French if they have any organization or plan.

Poilus Like Oysters and Salad. The canteen work is one of the most gratifying ways of helping the men. To see those poilus enjoying the first delicacies they have had for days is a soul-satisfying sight. The English and French maintain canteens where they dispense soup, hot coffee and cocoa, tobacco, chocolate, etc. But the American Red Cross canteens serve real dinners at cost or under. The poilus are inordinately fond of oysters and salad; when they can order a plate of oysters or a dish of salad in an American canteen they are as happy as children. We have six canteens in the French zone for the French army—France is, of course, divided into zones. In one line of communication canteens we serve from 4,000 to 8,000 men a day. These canteens are near the railroad stations for the benefit of the men going to the front, being transferred to some other section, or going home on a furlough. In one section the

THE RED CROSS

By EDGAR A. GURSE.

I am too old to share the light;
Too many years have come and gone
Since first I saw the morning light,
My youth has been and traveled on,
I am too old to join the line,
Far-fung today that truth shall live,
Lamp not die for what is true,
But I am not too old to give.

I am not yet so old that I
Have drifted from the world apart,
I still can hear the helpless cry,
And mercy still can reach my heart,
I still can share from day to day
The burden that our youth must bear,
And I thank God that I can say
The Red Cross is my symbol there.

I am too old to bear a lance,
Across the shell-born Flanders' field
I may not go where troops advance
And death's grim terrors are revealed,
But I can hear the helpless call,
And I can serve them while I live,
And I thank God that through it all
I shall not be too old to give.

TYPHOID VIA FINGERS

Habit of Putting Them in One's Mouth May Convey Disease.

Richmond, Va., May 8.—The State Department of Health was recently able to announce a gratifying reduction in the incidence of and casualties from certain children's diseases following the campaign it launched in the fall of 1916 against the putting of the fingers, pencils, and other substances in the mouth by school children.

That typhoid fever is often contracted by this same habit is very clearly brought out in a discussion of the subject in the Department's War Manual of Public Health. It treats of the matter in the following fashion:

"Now and then a case of typhoid fever occurs under circumstances that baffle physicians. Flies, food water and direct contact may be eliminated as possible means of infection. The ordinary precautions have all been taken—yet the man has typhoid and it is vital to know how he contracted it.

"Quite often the simplest answer is the one most overlooked. The man very probably got the disease by handling infected filth and by later putting his hands into his mouth. This is so common a performance, where filth is scattered widely, that it must be reckoned one of the most important factors in the spread of typhoid. A hoehandle, a tool, a plow—anyone of a score of things that a man touches in the course of a day may have been soiled with filth that contains the germ of disease. As long as men are careless in putting their dirty hands in their mouths, there is danger.

"Yet there is a rule of prevention on this point almost as old as history itself—a rule that has the sanction of divine law and appears in the Masonic code. It is the rule of demanding that men wash their hands before they eat their food. Extended to all acts that bring a man's hands into contact with his mouth, this rule would suffice to prevent much of the typhoid that annually occurs in Virginia. Keep your hands from your mouth as much as possible; never put them to your mouth without washing them thoroughly; never eat without washing your hands. These are simple but vital rules."

The large letters displaying the slogans, "Only Safe and Certain Line," and "No Detention from Ice," have reference to the fact that to take the trains of the rival line it was necessary to travel by boat from Alexandria to Aquia Creek, and thence to Richmond, then the gateway for all travel between Washington and the South—Alexandria Gazette.

SUMMER BULLETIN OUT
Publication Full of How-to-Keep Well Information.

The "Virginia War Manual of Public Health," the State Health Department's summer edition of its bulletin, has come from the hands of the printer.

It is packed from cover to cover with information as to methods to be followed in reducing the activities of disease germs such as commonly afflict the people of Virginia, and of mastering the menaces of the disease-bearing insect-pests.

A postal card to the State Department of Health will bring a copy of this valuable publication promptly to any interested person, and if the good advice is followed the simple expedients described in this booklet are generally adopted, it will prove a large contributing factor in preserving the lives and health of the people of Virginia this year.

RAILROADING OF OLD

Orange and Alexandria Road in the Early Fifties.

The Southern News Bulletin recently printed an interesting old advertisement which gives a striking picture of railroad conditions of sixty-four years ago. The Orange and Alexandria Railroad was one of the first roads built in Virginia and is now part of the Southern's Washington division, over which trains now operate on modern double track protected by the electric automatic block signal system. Antiquated wood-burning engine with a funnel-shaped smokestack, a baggage car and a coach about the size of the caboose now in use made up a passenger train in 1854 as shown by the picture. The advertisement read as follows:

Orange & Alexandria R. R.
Only Safe and Certain Line!
No Detention from Ice!!
Commissaries leave Washington City, at 6 a. m., on the arrival of the cars from Baltimore, to convey passengers to Alexandria, where they can breakfast and take the cars of the Orange & Alexandria Railroad, and arrive at Gordonsville by 11 o'clock.

The trains of the Virginia Central Railroad connect at Gordonsville, and will convey passengers to Richmond, Charlottesville and Staunton; reaching the former place by half-

HAYMARKET

Mrs. H. R. Bragg is spending this week at the home of her sister, Mrs. T. E. Garnett.

Mr. and Mrs. James Hulfish of Alexandria were the week-end guests of Miss Ruth Hulfish.

Miss Caroline Tyler has returned from Floral Bluff, Fla., accompanied by Miss Bettie Jane Ballantine and Master Norman Ballantine.

Mr. Felix Kloman of the Episcopal High School, Alexandria, spent the week-end with friends here.

Miss Lillian Hutchison, who is a member of the Girl Scouts of Manassas, won the distinction of selling twenty Liberty Bonds, double the number required for the award of the badge of honor.

Mrs. Sarah Moonie Gill, wife of Mr. Robert Gill, died at her home near this village on Tuesday evening. Her funeral took place on Thursday, the interment being in a family burying lot near Thoroughfare.

Mr. Simpson Buckley has left for government service at the Remount Camp, Jacksonville, Fla. His mother, Mrs. M. E. Buckley, had a sale of her household effects on Saturday and will live with her daughters in Washington. Mr. Buckley is the third of his family "with the colors."

Mr. Thom Williamson, Miss Anne Walke Williamson, Mrs. Roswell Baird and little Roswell have joined the family at "Shirley" for the summer.

The work of the Haymarket branch, American Red Cross, for the last four months, beginning January, 1918, is reported as follows: Hospital supplies—

236 bed shirts, 25 comfort bags (not filled), Knitting—sweaters, 44; socks, 42 pairs; helmet, 1; muffler, 1. Surgical dressings, 5,073. All the knitted work, three boxes of hospital bed shirts, and two boxes of surgical dressings, have been shipped. The materials are all purchased from headquarters at present rates each sweater costs about $2.80; socks $1.00 a pair; shirts, 50 cent each. The work has been done by comparatively few, and not from the abundance of leisure, but in time taken from the busy routine of home duties.

On account of very limited finances it has not been possible to order large supplies at a time, and there has been unavoidable delay in having orders for wool filled, so our knitters have not accomplished as much as they would have done. We are glad to state that Haymarket is fast becoming a Red Cross center, and it is hoped that the activities of the branch will be greatly increased in the next few months.

CHERRY HILL

On Saturday, April 26, Mrs. Harry Maddox was fatally burned by the explosion of kerosene oil with which she was attempting to kindle a fire at her home near Indian Head, Md. She lived only a few hours. The body was nearly cremated.
