LEACHMAN'S BIG PUMPKIN

It Takes Two Gardens to Satisfy a Rapid Growing Vine.

Late last spring Mr. Charles Balthis, of Strasburg, engineer on the Southern Railway, while at the station here gave to Mr. C. C. Leachman a pumpkin seed he happened to have at the time. He promised to give Mr. Leachman a number of the same fine variety, when his train next reached Manassas from his home. Mr. Leachman was unable to meet the train, so he had only the one lonesome seed. But it did its full duty.

After being planted, it started its journey, seemingly trying to get back to Strasburg, its home. It went fifteen feet toward the seven-foot wire fence on the line between Mr. Leachman's and Mr. R. S. Smith's place. It climbed to the top of the fence and went five feet along the top, then shot up Mr. Smith's plum tree. But, it wanted to get to Strasburg, so it came down the tree and went along the fence again. Deciding that the journey to Strasburg was too far it concluded to stay in Manassas and then began to bear fruit, lest it should cumber the ground.

It made two pumpkins, but one rotted. The one that developed gradually grew larger and heavier, so that Mr. Leachman and Mr. Smith arranged a pan on a post to support it. It grew the pan like dough being cooked, and spread outside of the pan, developing until it weighed $6 pounds. One year ago the ring around the bottom of the pumpkin, when it was in our window last week. Mr. Leachman removed it from our office early this week and it is now in whole, or in part, transformed into pumpkin pie. At least we presume so, though we have neither tasted nor seen the pie.

Mr. Leachman may be glad he does not live in Pennsylvania, as there the law would have given the pumpkin to Mr. Smith. We had a tree full of large peaches in Harrisburg some years ago. On the southern side the tree was about half on our neighbor's side, as the tree was near the fence dividing our properties. The southern, sunny side naturally developed more and larger fruit, so that our neighbor got the best in quality, if not the most in quantity, of the peaches that were raised in our ground on a tree that we had trained.

Misses Leachman and Johnson Entertain.

Misses Sarah Leachman and Elizabeth Johnson entertained a few of their friends at the home of Miss Leachman on Saturday, Nov. 23. The playing of games and the delightful refreshments which were served, were enjoyed by those who attended.

The guests were Misses Helen Coleman, Elizabeth Burr, Elizabeth Pope, Lillian Larkin, Marjorie Brower, Dorothy Sanders, Helen Haislip, Jeanette Patton, Catherine Weir, Muriel Larkin, Rose Rice, Lillian Hutchison, and Messrs. Allison Hooff, jr., William Brown, jr., Warren Leachman, Leon Waters, Benjamin Lewis, Marvin Rice, Joseph Lewis, Charles Lawson, George Frazier and Burchell Leachman.

Major Fred M. Patterson is still in Base Hospital in France from serious wounds and is not yet able to leave his bed. He writes his mother in his usual characteristic strain of cheerfulness and better news is hoped for soon.

DOGS, vs. DOGS

Some Are Good Friends—Others Are Dangerous Foes.

In last week's issue of The Journal we printed a sympathetic monologue addressed by Mr. Melvin C. Hazen to "Dear Old Pal," a faithful, intelligent, affectionate dog. This week we record the doings of some of the worthless, doubtless some of the half-fed, half-starved animals that might stay at home if their owners took proper care of them.

The following letter from Mr. E. R. Conner will explain itself: Mr. C. A. Sinclair came to my house about 4 o'clock Friday morning and said some dogs had one of my cows down and she was most dead. I hurriedly dressed and Mr. Sinclair and myself went down to the place where he left the cow. She was down in the ditch, with her head and nose bleeding and a dead dog lying under her head and neck.

Mr. Sinclair had shot in the dark when he first found the dogs with the cow. He evidently had shot him or else the cow had fallen on him in the struggle and killed him. The cow, instead of belonging to me was Mrs. Ed. Bryant's.

Mr. Sinclair and myself finally got her up and drove her home. The cow was injured, but may recover. The same dogs attacked Mr. Sinclair's and Mr. Clark's cattle a few nights ago and worried and bit them severely about the head and neck. Will the owner identify the dead dog and pay Mrs. Bryant for damages to his cow or is the owner an irresponsible person who is indisposed to pay for the damage done and has nothing that could be levied on to make him pay? The law, as it stands now, gives the dog more privilege than the man. A dog can bite your child, but you can not kill the dog. A dog can kill your cow, but you have no redress if the man is not responsible.

Mr. Legislator, can there be no laws made to protect a man against worthless curs?
E. R. CONNER.

THANKSGIVING CALENDAR

Institutions That Were Closed and Those That Were Open.

Banks closed all day. "Banks have lots of holidays," do you say? Well, you benefit, too. If your note falls due on a holiday, you have an extra day in which to scratch around for the necessary cash.

The postoffice and telephone exchange observed the usual holiday hours. The former opened from 9 to 11 and from 5 to 6, as usual on holidays, while the latter opened only from 7 to 8, as on Sunday. Did you feel like kicking? Remember that you possibly make the employees in these offices work for you on Sunday, when you have the day "free from worldly cares and avocations." You also may have had Thanksgiving Day off. Are you not willing to give them some time for home and church? "Church," suggests the usual union service on Thanksgiving Day. None was held this year. If you wish to know why, ask your pastor. Would you have attended in case there had been one? If you wished to worship and you should have felt inclined to give thanks publicly for peace, among other blessings—you could have gone to either the Baptist, Catholic, Episcopal, Lutheran or Methodist, to give them in alphabetical order.

LETTER FROM H. A. LYNCH

Hopes the War Will End, and Cake to Come Soon.

Private Harvey A. Lynch, son of Mr. M. Lynch, writes to his sister, Mrs. Mary E. Pope, something of his experiences as a soldier in France. He had just come out of the trenches, having driven the Germans back about 10 miles. He was anxious that the family should get the card needed to send a Christmas box. He has not seen any one he knows yet, but does not know when he may in the many changes of position. "Mike is on the railroad somewhere, over here—a bomb proof job. He ought to be with me if he wants to fight the Dutchmen. He will get his money's worth here." He says that his letters can't be written frequently or regularly, but he plans to write home as often as possible. He receives The Journals and greatly appreciates them. "Tell Jim 'hello'." They took about 8,000 prisoners in one drive. He hoped the war will soon be over, as it is what Sherman said it was. He is anxious to get some cake, as that is a scarce article among soldiers. He hopes Buck will have luck and not need to go over. He greatly appreciates getting letters when so far from the U. S. A. He claims that he knows only about a dozen French words. The language does not interest him, "as old American is good enough for me." "I would like to see Ollie and Mike. I was close to where Ollie was but could not get over there. Guess I will be there before long, I hope." He closes with the hope that he will hear from home soon.

BIG PINN OAK LOGS

Consigned by Mortop Brothers to C. R. R. of N.-J.

People along the road between Centerville and the railroad siding here near the station were doubtless surprised during the past week to see long oak logs being hauled. These giants, each between 70 and 80 feet long, were taken from the place of Prof. Ormond Stone on Bull Run, in Fairfax county. They were bought by the Messrs. Morton Brothers (J. T. and W. T.), timber dealers, of Remington, and were consigned to the Central Railroad of New Jersey, for use as piling in New York City docks of the railroad. The present contract was for 46 of these mammoths, two being hauled at a time by a four horse team. Three brothers are in the partnership of hauling, they being Luther, Oscar and David Beach, of Centerville. Only one load per day can be made with these logs, but each of the brothers has a team, so three loads are taken daily.

Mr. J. T. Morton, who was in town on Friday, stated that he would make an effort to have the timber placed on the siding at Rixlew, near the horse show grounds, and thus save the teams several miles of travel. He told of having seen, in the bottom of one of the trenches on the Manassas battle field, a white oak tree 50 feet, which evidently had grown to that height since the war.

We found that Mr. Morton had spent the early part of his life in the railroad business in New Jersey, at Flemington, near our old college town, Princeton. We became friends at once with this Jersey tie binding us. Mr. Morton and brother have been in the timber business in Virginia for more than twenty years. May

PAUL WILLIAMS WRITES

Wounded Slightly Only Although in Some Severe Fighting.

Private Paul L. Williams, located at Base Hospital No. 13, A. P. O. 753, wrote to his mother, Mrs. L. B. Williams, the following letter:

November 1, 1918.
Dear Mother:—I realize that I have neglected writing for some time, but it couldn't very well be helped.

I think the last letter that I wrote was written the latter part of September, shortly after we came from the St. Mihiel drive, in which I enclosed my permit to wear a wound chevron. Please let me know whether it was received or not. It is of no particular value other than as a souvenir.

At present I am in the hospital, recovering from an attack of influenza. I left the Verdun front about the 22nd of last month. There we encountered the stiffest resistance that we have yet met. Chateau Thierry was play compared to some of the fighting we saw on this front. The woods afforded the Boche an excellent place for concealing their machine guns, their pet weapons at present.

Seems strange that I should land in the same Base Hospital that I was in last July, but such is the case.

I was extremely lucky in the Argonne Woods. My gun had two direct hits on it, not the same gun, of course, but the one I was using at that time. I got away with only a few scratches and a small hole in the nose; first aid treatment was all that was necessary and it is entirely healed now.

Send my mail here direct in order to save time travelling back and forth. Love, PAUL.

CHAMP L. JONES KILLED

Exceptional Young Man Lost to Joplin Community.

Private Champ L. Jones, of 10 Prov. Co., A. E. F., was killed in action October 21, 1918, having gone overseas about July 15th. He was 28 years of age Sept. 16, and was drafted May 25. While at Camp Lee he was in 42 Co., 11th Batt.

This neighborhood feels that a true soldier has nobly answered the call of his country, and has given his life for loved ones left behind.

To mourn his untimely death are his mother, Mrs. George Florence, of Bristow, Va., one sister, Mrs. Norman Ginn, of New Mexico, and one brother, Mr. John Florence, of Bristow, Va., to whom the sympathy of the entire community is extended during their sad bereavement.

Private Jones will be greatly missed in the county, where he was so widely known, as he was ever a kind friend, and genial companion, and his memory will ever be cherished as a hero, who helped to make the world safe and win the greatest war in history.

The telegram, announcing his death, came as a shock to the neighborhood; he being the first boy of this neighborhood to die on foreign soil.

He was a dutiful son, affectionate brother and kind friend, whose death has saddened many hearts.

Mr. Howard Akers visited his mother, Mrs. M. E. Akers, during last week.

They remain and be successful twenty years more.

REAPING WITHOUT SOWING ANOTHER SOLDIER KILLED

Possibly Turnips and Pumpkins From Last Year's Seed.

Variety is added to our account of crops by this narrative of many pumpkins and big turnips raised in gardens, without the seed having been planted this year.

Rev. J. Halpenny lays claim to the county championship in pumpkin raising and it looks like we will need to make him president of the Ponderous Pie Pumpkin Producers' Association. He did not plant a single seed in his garden, yet he raised 127 pumpkins, some of them weighing 25 pounds. He merely cultivated what came up from seed that had somehow gotten on the ground from a previous planting and enough had gotten under the ground sufficiently deep to germinate and grow. Mr. Halpenny had 100 pumpkins large enough to preserve for pies. Who else raised 127 pumpkins this year without planting a single seed? Are there any rivals of our ministerial friend in this respect? We don't know whether he plans to have a pie made from the largest pumpkin on Thanksgiving or Christmas, but he lives near enough for us to sample it at either time. Mr. Halpenny is willing to pay five cents for six seeds from Mr. C. C. Leachman's pumpkin, so he evidently plans to enter the contest next year for the honors as a planter as well as a cultivator of pumpkin vines.

Mr. William Keeler, who moved from Pennsylvania to Manassasville two years ago, and bought the farm of Mr. David Carter, supposed to be the poorest farm in that section, has produced some wonderful Purple Top turnips. He sowed the turnip seed in the spring of 1917. Some of the plants went to seed and this spring he plowed the ground for potatoes and the turnips came up among the potatoes. He let them stay and grow. Many of them were remarkably large.

The one in The Journal window weighs 4½ pounds. Last week he took one to a friend in Washington which weighed 5½ pounds—that is, the turnip weighed that much. Can you equal it? Mr. J. S. Lunsford, of Minnieville, kindly brought the turnip in our window to town for Mr. Keeler.

"DAN" REEDER NOT DEAD
A Second Letter Contradicts the Sad Report in First Letter.
On Oct. 28, the following letter was written:
I wish to say to the many friends of D. N. Reeder that he has now finished doing his bit over here. For Somewhere in France, a few days ago, he passed into that dreamless sleep that kisses down his eyelids still. Pneumonia being the messenger that called him from the field of battle.

From his old friend,
JNO. R. CRAIG.
This statement was confirmed by a card sent, on Oct 31, from another Prince William boy. It is from Private Jimmie Keys, and says:
"I am dropping you a line to state the sad news of Dan Reeder's death. It was due to pneumonia. John Craig, Buck and I are still getting along nicely."

A later letter from John Craig states that he has different news about "Dan" and has written "to straighten matters out." From this letter it is evident that our friend is still living.

The Journal—$1—and worth it

Hugh M. Corum Highly Commended by His Lieutenant.

Mrs. Fannie Corum was rejoicing, on Thanksgiving Day, not merely because a righteous war had ended in victory for the allies, but by reason of the fact that, four of her sons, who were fighting for their country and their home, had passed through the contest and were alive.

This morning the sad news arrived that one son, Hugh M., had been killed. The accompanying letter, from Hugh's superior officer, Lieutenant Charles Giles, gives a strong statement of the high character of Hugh as a man and a patriot.

France, October 31, 1918.

Mrs. Corum,

Dear Madam:—It is with a feeling of duty yet one of deep sorrow that I am writing you this date. You have no doubt heard of the death of your son, Hugh M. Corum, and being a member of my platoon, I take the liberty to write you.

Hugh was a man whom every one liked and who to me was as a brother. I have been with this company but three months and in that time took a great interest in Hugh. He was one in whom I could place confidence, to whom I could give an order and know it would be carried out. He was very quiet and reserved. When other men were out from their billets, not always in the most desirable places, I knew where Hugh was and could get him when I wished to see him.

He has often spoken to me of his home life, of his mother, sister and brothers, and I know he loved his home and it was in defense of this home that he gave his life.

Hugh had no bad habits and his speech and mind were free from the taints which so many of us have. I only hope all of us may live as Hugh did, that in the end we may meet in a land where parting and sorrow are not known.

Would like to hear from any of you, if you care to write.

Yours truly,
Lieut. Charles Giles.

ADIEU TO MRS. GALLEHER

Hickory Grove U. D. C. Chapter and G. H. Club Unite.

The people of the Hickory Grove neighborhood are regretting the loss of valuable neighbors and friends in Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Galleher, long-time residents and well known for their kindness and hospitality.

A farewell reception was given Mrs. Galleher by her U. D. C. Chapter, assisted by the Good Housekeepers' Club, in the afternoon of Saturday, November 23, and all enjoyed not only the meeting of friends, but the abundance of good things which rightfully belong to this time of peace and thanksgiving.

Mrs. Galleher is one of the Good Housekeepers. She has also long been a faithful member of the Eighth Virginia Regiment Chapter, U. D. C., and it owes to Mr. Galleher's liberality and public spirit the site for the hall at Hickory Grove.

Many good wishes follow them to their home in Manassas, where we are glad to think they will be welcomed not as strangers, but by numerous friends and relatives.
A WELL WISHER.

Miss Margaret Entwistle paid Mrs. W. R. Akers a visit last week.

SACRIFICE LIKE SOLDIERS

Buy War Savings Stamps in Large or Small Amounts.

As Foch has shortened to victorious weeks the racking months of our foreboding, faith has been quickened into hope. The fruits we thought to gather are some vaguely-distant harvest are ripening fast. The peace we dared not mention, so remote did seem, is heralding its coming in a thousand, instant sounds. The vengeance of a God of Justice is at hand. The war of righteousness is won.

When we shall see in a signed treaty the evidence of victory and the promise of lasting peace, we shall reckon this war worth all it has cost, and when we shall welcome our boys home, we shall forget the doubts, the numbing darkness and the dread suspense of that grim season of the Hun's advance. What a day will it be when Virginia's veterans return to her! This old commonwealth of ours will rejoice as never it has since that panting rider dashed into Richmond with news that Cornwallis had surrendered. The day of the great review in Richmond will be as memorable as March 25, 1775, when Henry sounded the tocsin of revolution, or April 17, 1861, when the old state put on her armor of self-defense.

But to some the day of our boy's return and every day thereafter will bring the misery of remorse. Some who think that peace will bring reunion will find it brings division and some who would rejoice that seas no longer separate us from our lads will find a wider gulf fixed. For our Virginia soldiers are to return to us in a new knowledge of men and of service and in that knowledge they will judge us. With unerring eye will they measure our manhood. They will know which of us stayed at home because we had a larger work to do. They will discern which of us have served and which have idled. And they will love or despise, honor or detest as they shall find us false or true. Their verdict will be our fate. Denied fellowship with them, we shall have no part in the new age.

The moral equivalent of war is to be found only in constancy of service. No gift from a man's abundance ever exalts; no shrewd investment, in the guise of patriotism ever deceives. No single act of display and no passing share in broad "good works" will raise a man to the place of those who have met the eternities on fields of battle. Those returning boys of ours will mock at us if we claim comradeship with them because we subscribed to a loan, or served on a committee, or made a speech or increased a crop for which we received the highest prices of record. The boys will say, "We spent winter months in the mire of frosty trenches; we faced the week-long bombardment of the Hun; we knew privation and cold and hunger, daily, hourly, incessantly—what did you do?" And we must hold our tongue and lose all claims upon them, even though they be our sons and brothers, unless in our hearts we know that our service was not less constant, if less gallant, than was theirs. The daily discipline of self for country is what distinguishes them. We cannot distinguish by less.

This daily discipline of self, this constancy of service, are virtues not beyond attainment by the true patriot. They must be deliberately sought, yet not ostentatiously expressed. They must be ascetic and yet not Pharisaical. They must, in short, represent a constant effort on our part to forego our pleasure for our nation and to stint our bodies for our souls. To this end nothing is more serviceably useful and few things are more vital than individual self-denial.

the fruits of which are invested in War Savings Stamps.

Does this seem a prosy moral to a lofty tale? Does it seem a ludicrous contrast to the service our boys are rendering overseas? It is, if it be measured in the concrete result, substantial though that be. But it is not this concrete result we need. It is the spirit that yields the result. By drawing one's check of $1,000 against an ample balance in bank, and by purchasing War Savings Stamps with the proceeds, one helps one's country and one's finances but not one's spirit. But by saving $1,000 dollar by dollar, and by investing it in War Savings Stamps, one practices a self-restraint and exhibits a constant thought of country that ennobles spiritually even more than they benefit financially. It is, in short, not what a man purchases, but why and when and how he purchases that give him something of the moral equivalent of war. Withal, virtue is its own reward—if we are selfish enough to claim it—for an investment of one's patient savings in War Savings yield a better return than any security of even relatively the same strength in the world. Ten years ago, so profitable an investment would have seemed unbelievable.

We Virginians have lived for one generation in the memory and under the spell of a great war. To our fathers, fidelity to old Virginia in the sixties has been the consolation of age. To us, it has been the inspiration of our public service. We are destined to survive as the actors of spectators of a drama vaster and even more memorable. We can neither evade present responsibility nor escape future reflection. The one regret of life will be that it was not more fully given to our country in these tremendous times.

Extracts From Letters Written to the War Risk in Regard to Their Allotments.

The following amusing extracts are from letters sent by families of soldiers in answer to questions regarding conditions in the family. Each statement is from a different person. The quotations were furnished by some one in the government employ, who had access to them, and sent them to Mr. G. Raymond Ratcliffe. The latter has kindly allowed us to publish them, after having a number of hearty laughs over them, in order that our 1500 subscribers may share the fun.

I ain't got no book learning and I hope I am writing for inflammation.

She is staying at a disupted house.

Just a line to let you know that I am a widow and four children.

Previous to his departure we were married to a justice of the piece.

He was inducted into the surface.

I have a four months baby and he is my only support.

A lone woman and parsey dependent.

I was discharged from the army for a goutre which I was sent home on.

I am pleading for a little more time.

Please return my marriage certificate, baby hasn't eaten any in three days.

No, Mrs. Wilson, I need help bad, see if the president can't help me.

I need him to see after me.

Both sides of our parents are old and poor.

Please send me a wife's form. Hello, Mr. War Risk Insurance.

How are you. I am well and hope you are the same.

Dear Mr. Wilson, I have written to Mr. Headquarters and received no reply and if I don't get one from you I am going to write to Uncle Sam himself.

We have your letter. I am his grandmother and grandfather and he was bro't up in our house according to your instructions.

You have changed my little boy to a girl. Will it make any difference?

I ain't received no pay since my husband had gone from nowhere.

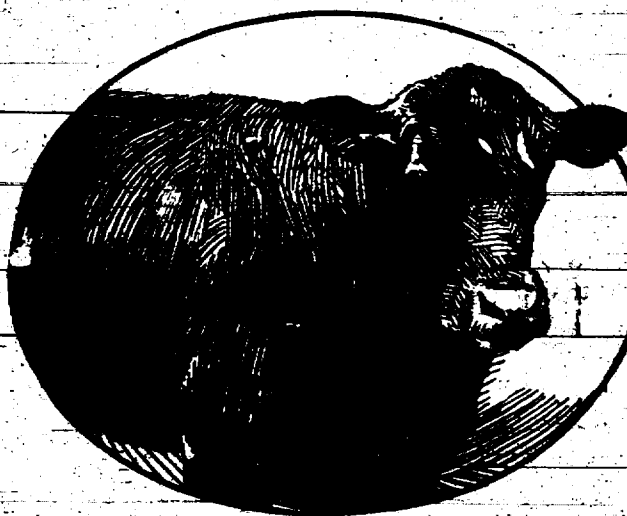

Please let me know if John has put in an application for a wife and child.

I am writing to ask you why I never received my allotment. His money was kept from him for the allotment which he never received.

You have taken my man to fight and he was the best thing I ever had.

My boy has been put in charge of a spittoon (platoon). Will I get more pay?

What Determines Meat and Live-Stock Prices?

Some stock men still think that Swift & Company—and other big packers—can pay as little for live-stock as they wish.

Some consumers are still led to believe that the packers can charge as much for dressed meat as they wish.

This is not true. These prices are fixed by a law of human nature as old as human nature itself—the law of supply and demand.

When more people want meat than there is meat to be had, the scramble along the line to get it for them sends prices up. When there is more meat than there are people who want it, the scramble all along the line to get rid of it within a few days, while it is still fresh, sends prices down.

When prices of meat go up, Swift & Company not only can pay the producer more, but has to pay him more, or some other packer will.

Similarly, when prices recede all down the line Swift & Company cannot continue to pay the producer the same prices as before, and still remain in the packing business.

All the packer can do is to keep the expense of turning stock into meat at a minimum, so that the consumer can get as much as possible for his money, and the producer as much as possible for his live-stock.

Thanks to its splendid plants, modern methods, branch houses, car routes, fleet of refrigerator cars, experience and organization, Swift & Company is able to pay for live cattle 90 per cent of what it receives for beef and by-products, and to cover expense of production and distribution, as well as its profit (a small fraction of a cent per pound), out of the other 10 per cent.

YOUR JOB

No doubt you are formulating in your mind a just punishment for those responsible for German atrocities, and particularly, for the ex-Kaiser. That is not your job.

It is difficult, if not impossible, not to feel deeply resentful of the unspeakable barbarities practiced by the Huns; and it is but natural to desire their adequate punishment.

But the heads of the allied forces to be represented at the coming peace conference are charged with the duty of determining just what this punishment shall be, and the duty of seeing that this punishment is fully meted out to the offenders.

It is not a national matter, where the individual citizen feels fully at liberty to advise his congressman; but it is an international matter, to be disposed of in serious conference by the representatives of the allied forces.

In the meantime, every citizen of this country has a serious job of his own on his hands.

The period of reconstruction—or readjustment—after a great war, always brings its own problems and troubles.

Just now the trouble maker is busy, very busy.

Sometimes he is called a red revolutionist. Just now, the popular name for him in Europe is Bolshevik. In this country he has been conspicuous by the name of International Worker of the World, or I-W-W.

But by whatever name he may be called, he is a menace to organized society—more so than were the German militarists. And this period of unrest and uncertainty which follows a great war presents to him an opportunity of stirring up trouble of the most serious character.

Already he is at work in Virginia.

You will have no share in the work of punishing the Kaiser; your job is to devote every ounce of your energies to the support of the forces of law and order. Back up your government, national, state and local, cordially and fully. This is the surest way to head off the mischief maker.

TWO CONGRESSES?

Diplomatists and officials here, viewing broadly the diversity, as well as the magnitude of the problems arising out of the world war—economic, financial and territorial questions—foresee a prolonged session of the peace conference or, alternatively, a speedy agreement upon the most urgent questions, with the academic and idealistic problems possibly postponed to a future world's congress.

Precedent for the latter contingency, and it is at this time to be discussed only as a contingency, is furnished by history. After Napoleon's first defeat peace between France and the powers was effected by the treaty of Paris, May 30, 1814. The thirty-second article of that treaty provided for the assembling of a congress to "complete the provisions of the present treaty."

Thus came about the congress of Vienna, at which the powers divided parts of Europe at their leisure.

Diplomatists here point out that the first work of the coming Paris conference will be to agree upon terms of peace to succeed the armistice upon which the world is now standing. All nations want to get back to work, return to the task of productivity to fill the appalling gaps created by the waste of the war. If it be possible to make one bite of the cheery suffice, so much the better, it is said.

Pointing out a few of the many problems to be presented to the conference and upon which action must be taken before peace can be proclaimed and men may go to their work without keeping one eye upon the shotgun on the antlers over the door, the opinion is ventured that the first great question to be taken up will be of reparation and indemnity. Germany, Austria, Hungary, Bulgaria, and Turkey must make amends for the frightful property losses inflicted upon innocent victims. Germany, the chief offender, must pay the heavier price. German territory will be occupied until the debt is discharged.

Germany established a measure of payment to be exacted from a defeated foe in her dealing with France, after the Franco-Prussian war. It is certain that the scale will not be diminished by the allies, but more likely increased. There is evidence conclusive in the data now in the hands of the allies, bearing date antecedent to the war, that Germany, if victorious, proposed to exact from the vanquished terms which "would stagger humanity." By a coincidence, the day's dispatches quote the late Herr Ballin, former ship magnate, as outlining the magnitude of Germany's intended exaction, which in effect meant the annexation of the continent of Europe. A mere trifle, just by way of an appetizer, so to speak, before entering upon the general germanizing of the world.

Thus far there has been on the part of the allies no spirit of vindictiveness, despite the monstrous aggravation, but there is existent a terribly stern sense of outraged justice and an inflexible determination to hold the aggressor to account in material ways—ways which the Prussian makeup can appreciate more than a scrap of paper. Indemnity and reparation first in order and adequate in character is the schedule of the peace congress, it is declared here.

Many are the territorial questions to be settled by the congress, including Poland, western Russia, the Ukraine, Hungary, Bosnia, Herzegovina, Serbia, Bulgaria, Rumania, Slovakia, Albania, Greece, Turkey, Italy and even Palestine and Armenia. Territorial questions that have been festering more than a century, whose poison has infected Europe from time to time and finally precipitated this war, will come up for settlement.

President Wilson early forecast the necessity of dealing with all these questions in a spirit of justice which will leave no sore spots to break out in future times, the result of injustice inflicted now. Some of the greatest peace conferences heretofore have violated this principle, and the world is now paying the penalty for it.

Fortunately, the statesmen of England, France, Italy and Belgium are in accord with this spirit, which promises to make for fairer dealing among the nations assembling at this conference than was ever witnessed before. Prussia will have to be amenable to the decision whether the Prussian mind agrees with the principles of justice or not.

In the first determination of territorial questions, consideration of Germany's proposed expansion of population through the absorption of the German inhabitants of present Austrian territory will come up. English statesmen have already pointed out the danger of a greater Germany to be erected in that proposed wing of extension. At every peace conference, beginning with 1814, in which Prussia has figured, that nation has aggrandized itself territorially and to the subsequent detriment of the rest of Europe. Repetition of these successes is to be guarded against very carefully.

Italy's rights and aspirations are to receive fullest recognition in the congress at the outset and be maintained throughout, it is said, in all diplomatic and official circles here. Italy's claims, more than a century old, are based upon history and sustained through blood descent in many generations. In some previous congresses Austria held the role of dictator of terms relating to the disputed territory; now Austria is to receive terms and friends and allies of Italy will give them out.

Germany's colonial possessions and disposition of the great naval base of Helgoland will be two difficult problems for the congress, it is thought here. Diplomats generally expect England to demand either possession of Helgoland or its dismantling. Ever since the British, in a moment of temporary aberration, separated themselves from Helgoland it has been a tender subject. The belief is strong at Washington that the allies will hold a pretty stiff hand on Germany regarding her retention of former colonial possessions.

But in this latter case, as in the affairs of all the smaller nations with acute boundary issues, President Wilson and the American delegates to the congress will urge that the settlement be upon terms calculated to result in the least bitterness and friction for the future. Whether it will be possible for the Germans to disengage themselves from the Prussian habit of demanding everything before being satisfied is questionable. At any rate they will not get everything this time.—Washington Star.

AMERICAN CASUALTIES

The most reliable estimates now available, in the absence of complete tabulation, place the total casualties of the American forces in this war at 100,000. This will include all men killed in action, wounded, died of wounds, disease and accident, as well as the missing. Something over 70,000 names have been tabulated to date, and it is not expected that those yet to be reported will aggregate more than 30,000.

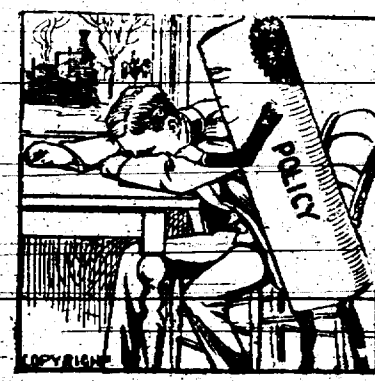

It is believed that when all the facts are at hand it will be found that a greater percentage of the wounded have been saved than in any other war. This doubtless is due principally to excellent hospital facilities, but there are contributory reasons, such as improved equipment and the advantages of modern science. In some actions it is reported that as high as 85 per cent of the wounded who passed through the hospitals were able to return to the line. The percentage of salvage among victims of gas attacks also was high. American doctors soon learned the most effective methods of treating gas cases, and were able to save a vast proportion of those who were brought in.

Probably not for several weeks will the records of casualties be complete, but it is not thought they will total more than the figures stated. Considering the number of troops engaged and the hard fighting they have seen, this record is considered very satisfactory.—Post.

Mr. Geo. S. Cornwell has just received a message that his son, Med Cornwell, has died in France from wounds received at the front about the first of this month.

One of Mr. W. S. McCoy's wood trucks got too near the dangerous ditch between the Catholic Church and the railroad tracks on Wednesday, resulting in a complete upset.

Reginald R. Lewis, of Washington, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Lewis, spent Thanksgiving at home with his parents. He is looking well and has grown considerably since he left Manassas.

A Thanksgiving service was held at Grace Methodist Church yesterday, conducted by the pastor, Rev. H. Q. Burr. An offering amounting to $6.20 was taken for Armenian and Syrian Relief.

The case of J. P. Leachman, Treasurer vs. Board of Supervisors, was argued in the Supreme Court at Richmond on Wednesday by Judge C. E. Nicol for the plaintiff and Mr. H. Thornton Davies for the defendant.

The Supreme Court this week denied a petition for a writ in the case of J. E. Gray vs. Annie E. Gray. Messrs. C. E. Nicol and Robt. A. Hutchison also are a scarce article. Sturges represented Mr. Gray and Mr. H. Thornton Davies Mrs. Gray.

The circuit court decided in favor of Mrs. Gray, so that its decision now stands.

A large variegated woolen knitted lap robe is shown in the drug store window of Dr. C. R. Johnson. It was made by the members of the Boys' Knitting Club, under the direction of Miss Isabel Hutchison.

A former well known face in Manassas has been seen again, since last Saturday, in the person of Aviator Lyman Patterson, who has been greeting friends, who were pleased to meet this genial young man, with his old time courtesy and heartiness.

There will be a meeting of the Manassas Ministerial Association tonight at 7:30, at the Episcopal rectory, for the annual election of officers and the transaction of any other business that may be brought before the Association.

Miss Mary Olive Hornbaker, who is a nurse student at the Sibley Hospital, is again at home in Manassas, as the hospital officials will not permit her to work yet. She recently had a severe attack of influenza and is still convalescing.

Colonel R. H. Jordan, brother of Mr. J. E. Jordan, of Haymarket, who has been Acting Chief of Embarkation, has received the distinction of being detailed to accompany the President's party to France, as Disbursing Officer.

Don't forget the Big Four Minstrels at Bethel High School Saturday, Nov. 30, at 7:30 p. m., for the benefit of the school. There will be the best of fiddling and banjo picking, with other music, fun and refreshments. Admission, 25 and 15 cents.

Rev. Westwood Hutchison preached the sermon at the Baptist Church yesterday morning at the Thanksgiving service. In addition to the pastor, the other ministers taking part were Rev. O. Grey Hutchison, Rev. J. Halpenny and Rev. Alford Kelley.

Mr. Thos. H. Lion, while pushing an automobile last week, strained a ligament and broke a small blood vessel in his foot between the heel and the ankle. He is limping along slowly, as it is necessary for him to be about, although his physician advises quiet.

Misses Miriam Buckley and Sarah Crewe, of Clifton, came through to Manassas on Tuesday night from Washington, where they are employed in one of the government departments. Both young ladies came on a business errand, while Miss Buckley added a social call at the manse on Miss Kelley.

Word was received in Manassas on Tuesday, through the Red Cross that Sergeant Wayne M. Bennett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Bennett, had been wounded in action in France on Nov. 1st, having been struck in the breast with shrapnel. The sergeant is a member of Company F, 60th Infantry, 5th Division, A. E. F.

Private A. L. Rollins, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Rollins, of Bristow, left Manassas on Oct. 21, among the last of the Prince William boys to be mustered into service. He was sent to Fort Washington, where he has been ever since in the Supply Division. He was given a furlough over Thanksgiving Day, which he spent with his parents.

The college boys, who are members of the S. A. T. C., appeared in uniform this week. They were obliged to pay for them at the rate of $30 per outfit. Some paid $40 or $50 for these.

The outfit includes a dress suit. The outfit includes a dress suit. The outfit includes a dress suit. The outfit includes a dress suit. The outfit includes a dress suit.

Mrs. Margaret Lewis, who has been in Philadelphia for several months, was at her home on West street several days during the past week. She will be in Manassas permanently after tomorrow. This news will greatly delight those who have been patiently, or impatiently, waiting to enjoy her cozy home and excellent meals, the food of which is both palatable and plentiful.

Private Eugene Davis, son of Mrs. Ada Davis, of Manassas, who has been fighting in France, sent home two Hun helmets as relics of the battlefield. One is on exhibition in the store window of Messrs. Hibbs & Giddings, where Mr. Davis was employed before joining the army. The other helmet was sent to his brother, Mr. Raymond J. Davis, and is now to be seen in The Journal window.

Private Kemp Williams, of Joplin, one of our soldier boys, died in France, a victim of the "flu." This makes the second young man, from Joplin, to die in the service, Private Champ Lee Jones having been killed in action. The information regarding both of these soldiers came through the secretary of the Red Cross, Miss Mary Larkin. Joplin, though a thinly settled community, has lost heavily by the war.

On Sunday a week our old friend, Mr. R. S. Smith, who is over three score years young, celebrated the 74th anniversary of his birth. He has sent us word that, though he is still far from well, he observed the day "by eating strawberries and cream out of his own garden." That is, the strawberries came from his garden, of course. The cream came from the place of our other friend, Mr. F. E. Saffer.

Among those, who enjoyed the fine oyster and turkey repast at the New Prince William Hotel on Thanksgiving Day, were a dinner party, consisting of Mrs. Clara P. Cushing, Mrs. Fannie R. Coles, Miss Mollie E. Rixey, Miss Isabel Kelley and Rev. Alford Kelley. They sent a letter, signed by each, to Prof. and Mrs. O. W. Mosher, Asheville School, Asheville, N. C., regretting that they could not be present on the festive occasion.

In our last issue we read the manuscript, in writing, of a letter in regard to Private Bryan Rust, son of Mr. Ashby Rust, of Loudoun county, and understood that he was described as lieutenant. First Lieutenant Marshall Rust is the only heir of the late Dr. Charles Rust. He has not been heard from for some months and the family fear that he has been captured or killed. Both soldiers are the nephews of Capt. J. R. Rust, of Haymarket.

We occasionally have subscribers, who not only pay in advance for many months, as everybody should do, but they settle for more than one year ahead.

Two bright, polite boys, Richard and Paul Fleming, about 12 and 10 years, old, whose father died seven years ago and whose mother is now living at Remington, were in town Wednesday and yesterday endeavoring to get some work in a store or on a farm.

The Council of Defense have asked Mayor W. C. Wagener to request all merchants not to handle any fireworks during this Christmas season. The use of explosives is always a useless expense.

Did you notice those three strawberries in our window last week? They were raised by Mr. S. Hynson, who picked a quart on Friday of last week.

Mr. B. H. Potts, of Gainesville, lost his house by fire last Sunday night. Neighbors noticed the fire and ran to the rescue about 11:45.

Rev. Alford Kelley and sister, Miss Isabel Kelley, engaged to rent the manse only for November. Mr. Kelley expected to have his resignation accepted at Clifton and then leave Manassas about the first of December.

In the Clerk's Office of the Circuit Court of the County of Prince William, on the 22nd day of November, 1918. Delaware Davis, Plaintiff, vs. Annie W. Davis, Defendant. The general object of the foregoing suit now pending in the above named court under the style given above is to assert the equitable interest of the plaintiff in a certain tract of land lying in the county of Prince William, near Haymarket, known as "Woodlawn," which was assigned to the said Annie W. Davis in chancery suit lately depending in said Circuit Court under the short style of Norris, etc., vs. Davis, etc., by certain decree therein rendered, May 12, 1890, assigning to the said Annie W. Davis by metes and bounds 306 acres of the Woodlawn tract, embracing the dwelling and other improvements. The said Annie W. Davis being only entitled to Five Thousand Dollars out of the proceeds of sale of said land and the plaintiff entitled in equity to the residue thereof. And an affidavit having been made and filed that the defendant, Annie W. Davis, is not resident of the State of Virginia, it is ordered that she do appear within fifteen days after due publication hereof, and do what may be necessary to protect her interest in this suit. And it is further ordered that a copy hereof be published once a week for four successive weeks in The Manassas Journal, a newspaper published in the county of Prince William, and that a copy be posted at the front door of the Court House of this county on or before the 25th day of November, 1918, that being the next succeeding rule day after this order was entered. DON'T LET STOCK ROAM

Strict Laws and Care Raise the Standard and Protect It.

The necessity for conserving all food values has not ended with the war. Mr. Hoover is now in Europe studying conditions in allied and enemy countries with a view of supplying their inevitable shortage during the coming months and possibly for a year or more.

The Virginia Council of Defense is co-operating with Councils of Defense elsewhere in the country and principally throughout the Southern states to aid the Food Administration to prevent one easily avoidable element of waste, the unnecessary killing of food animals along the railway rights-of-way.

Wherever there are rigid stock laws and great care in the preservation of cattle the standard of the stock almost automatically rises. It does not pay any state to breed scrub stock, and yet the custom of permitting stock to roam at will and to take no precaution against its killing inevitably results in the lowering of the standard.

It is an effort which must appeal to the patriotic and intelligent citizens of Virginia, and it is receiving warm support of the most progressive counties in the state. There are of course objections raised, but these come notably from those counties where the standard of the various kinds of stock are notoriously low.

So far as fencing is concerned, the railroads are compelled under the law to fence where the individual owner does his part of it, and there is no disposition on the part of the Council to shield the railroads or help them to avoid any damage suits for negligence.

Keeping Household Accounts

In an Oregon county where 710 women enrolled in the classes and clubs organized by the home demonstration agent 233 household account books were placed as a result of the activity of the agent in creating interest in the art and home management

SUDLEY CHARGE DIVIDED

Revs. Sutton and Bell the Two Ministers on the Field.

Twenty years ago the Sudley charge of the M. E. Church, South, was served by Rev. C. B. Sutton, who has been living at Leesburg, since he retired from active service. Recently, to the great pleasure of the church members, he was called upon to take up again the work at a part of the charge—the churches at Sudley, Gainesville and Fair—the year by fire, areshrdlucmfw view.

The Sudley congregation, having lost their church early in the year by fire, are planning to rebuild. The former church was on the side of a hill. The ground has been leveled off, the dirt from the upper side being brought forward and dumped on the lower side.

Members of the church and congregation have been giving time to hauling and grading, in order to save as much money as possible, and this co-operative work will continue until the church is finished. Mr. Charles R. McDonald, who is identified with and efficient in so many financial, educational and religious interests, is the leading spirit at Sudley.

Rev. Jesse M. Bell, our local preacher, who adds ministerial work to his many accomplishments, will take the other churches on the charge—Bristow and Woodlawn. Mr. Bell was a licensed minister for two years when connected with the Manassas M. E. Church. He was recently given his license for the second year as a local preacher of the M. E. Church, South.

Mr. Bell has been serving the Bradley Church monthly, as has the pastor, Rev. H. Q. Burr, who goes on the first and fifth Sundays in the afternoon, Mr. Bell going on the third Sunday in the morning. Last spring Mr. Bell began work at Bristow, holding a service monthly. He will now preach twice each month at both Bristow and Woodlawn.

The quarterly conference of the Sudley charge, which will include all five of the above churches, will be held on Monday, Dec. 2, at 11 a. m., in the Gainesville church, when the district superintendent, Rev. B. W. Bond, D. D., will be present.

In cooperation with the Concrete Ship Department of the Shipping Board, the laboratory of the Bureau of Public Roads of the U. S. Department of Agriculture has made several series of tests in order to obtain desired information looking to the safer design of concrete ships, a part of America's war program

Electrical Needs

Anything you want in the way of electrical equipment—motors, fans, heaters, irons and the most up-to-date lighting fixtures. Our wiring and installation of fixtures is approved by the Board of Underwriters. And you don't have to pay a big price for our good work. Let us give you an estimate.

G. L. ROSENBERGER MANASSAS, VIRGINIA

—Co-operative buying has been introduced throughout the country. Washington has recently adopted it. Possibly Manassas and other towns in the county may take it up. The Post Office Department in Washington has allowed the motor truck service there to be used in buying eggs, and other commodities will be purchased in the same way. A carload of potatoes has been secured. They will be disposed of at $1.44 per bushel, or $1.54 delivered. This is a saving to the consumer of 25 cents a bushel. Orders have been taken for a carload of apples and it is arranged to get canned goods also in carload lots. Thanksgiving turkeys were planned for in a similar manner.

KANN'S—FOURTH FLOOR

ADDRESS OF PROF. DUN-
GAN McKINSEY, V. P. I.

More Profit in Pork Than in Any Other Form of Livestock—
How to Raise Pigs.

We give below a full outline of the address of Prof. McKinsey, of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, Va., as delivered at the recent county fair,
on "Hog Raising."

1. The national situation as to need for meat products, stated
briefly, is as follows:

We must feed our own army and 130,000,000 of allies. We have now added 125,000,000 enemies—Germans, Austrians, etc.
The enormous shortage in meat and fats in Central Empire and neutral nations will increase the demand. All supplies must come from America, as there is no other source.

2. Reasons for pork raising in preference to other livestock:

The more rapid increase of the stock. The more economical use of concentrates, as grain makes more meat in pork than in any other animals. Pork has a highest dressing percentage; beef dresses 60 per cent, sheep 60 per cent and pork 85 per cent. Pork is more adaptable to the use of waste products, as pigs eat nearly everything. A larger percentage of essential oils and fats are furnished by pigs. Pork is more easily cured and transported than other meat animals.

3. Desired increase:

The number of pigs now per farm is three. The increase asked for is 10 per cent—one sow for every ten now kept.

4. The present supply is inadequate to meet the demands:

The exports for October, 1917,
were 52,000,000 pounds of pork products. In 1918, 130,000,000 pounds; in November, 1918, 98, 000,000 pounds. The demand for November, 1918, was 170, 000,000 pounds. We can not meet this demand as made by the Food Administration. The increased demands of allies is continuing, and they are proof of the necessity of an increase of production. Even stronger demands for pork products will be made, now that the war is over.
No alarm is warranted. Some people have hurried their pigs to market, fearing a fall in the price. This is a mistake. The greater demand will increase the price, as the United States is the main source of supply.

5. Profit:

There has been a better margin of profit than ever before.
In 1918 corn was $1.25 per bushel and pork was 6 cents per pound. In 1918 corn was $1.75 per bushel and pork was 18 cents per pound. That is, while corn, in the 10 years, increased 40 per cent pork increased 300 per cent.

6. Prices:

At a conference, in Washington, of the Food Administration, packers and hog raisers, it was decided that, when the price of hogs is held to the price of corn it is a disadvantage. It was agreed, therefore, to fix the price each month, the object being the stabilization of the price of live hogs to secure fair returns to hog producers and to insure a future supply. The agreement follows:

In view of the undertakings
on the part of the Food Administration with regard to the co-ordinated purchases of pork products, it is agreed that the packers participating in these orders will undertake not to purchase hogs for less than the following agreed minimum for the month of November, that is a daily minimum of $17.50 per hundred pounds on average of packers' droves, excluding throw-outs.
"Throw-outs" to be defined as pigs under 130 pounds, stags, boars, thin sows and skips. The average of packers' droves to be construed as the average of the hogs for a given day. All the above to be based on Chicago.

This plan does not limit top prices. It will narrow margins necessary to country buyers. It should work out close to $18 on the average or $16 in Manassas.

7. The special problem now is the care of fall litters:
Farmers should raise every pig born. This can be done with proper food, care and attention.
Secure freedom from dirt, disease and parasites. Proper shelter from cold, rain and snow is necessary. Proper care plus proper feed in the first three months is the secret of success
in raising young pigs to maturity—and money.

8. Feeding the sow:

The sow needs feed for her own maintenance, the growth of her own body and the nourishment of her unborn pigs. Corn lacks bone and muscle formers and it is too concentrated for sows. Middlings, bran, tankage, skimmilk, soybeans, clover and alfalfa are good supplements.
The best ration is corn 45
pounds, middlings 50 pounds,
and tankage 5 pounds.

9. Care of the sows:

Provide suitable food. Keep her in good condition but not too fat. Make her exercise. Keep a dry, warm bed in a well ventilated shelter. Kill lice and worms; you can't afford to feed parasites. Use crude petroleum by sprinkling with a stiff broom, rubbing it on or spraying. Also spray the houses and burn the bedding. Avoid constipation.
Be gentle with her.

10. Farrowing:

Stay with the sow. Dry each pig and get it to sucking five minutes after birth. Do not, disturb the sow for twelve hours.
Give the sow only water during the first 24 hours, then soft food.
Feed lightly first three days, giving her no corn. Gradually increase to full feed by the 10th day. Thereafter feed abundantly. This treatment will produce more milk and, therefore,
bigger pigs.

11. Weaning:

Cut the feed down to stop the milk flow. Take the sow from the pigs, instead of the pigs from the sow. Let the pigs get accustomed to their "home." Have a creep for the pigs, so that they can get all the feed they want,
by making a frame set on posts,
so the sow can't get in. Feed the pigs rye meal, middlings and tankage. Have clover hay in racks like sheep racks for the pigs. Let the pigs on pasture as soon as possible—rye and rape pastures are the first to come in the spring. Use them. Keep the pigs growing at the rate of one pound each day at the least,
the diet for the sow being a good one for pigs, in order to make them add one pound daily from birth.

12. Pastures:

Clover, alfalfa and rape are the "Big Three." Pasturage rations include rye; rape; clover or alfalfa, which come at the same time; soy beans or cowpeas;
then the second crop of clover comes in.
It will now be marketing time,
when the pigs can be sold.

A VENTURE WITHOUT RISK
Big Business Grows From Big Advertising—Try It.

When a man says he can't afford to advertise, only two conclusions can be drawn from his attitude. Either something is wrong with his wares, so that those who buy them once will never buy them again, or he has not enough business acumen to justify him in continuing in business. The first principle of business is that capital must be invested before profits can be realized. It would be just as logical for a dealer in worthy goods to argue that he could not afford to lay in a stock as to assert that he could not afford to invest in the certain means of moving that stock into the hands of consumers.

Advertising in a regular newspaper is not an enterprise that requires a large outlay of capital. Small business can be adequately exploited in small space, regularly used. Returns follow close upon the heels of publication. Good advertising automatically increases the business and leads to the use of more advertising in a larger number of mediums and the employment of larger space. The big advertisers of today had small beginnings. Their faith in their wares and in the power of publicity to market them, made them leaders in their respective lines.

Anybody can afford to advertise who can afford to deal twice with the same customer, or who can expect those who have once patronized him to speak well of him. The only risk he takes is the selection of an uninfluential medium or the use of inferior copy. This risk is eliminated by the business man who uses a good paper and seeks its advice as to the nature of the appeal to be addressed to the homes of the prosperous territory it covers.—

GOOD ROADS NEEDED

Food Products Must Have Free
Access to Foreign Lands.

Highways transport facilities
at the farmer's gate and at every farmer's gate—must immediately suggest the initial phase of overseas distribution; must make a picture in the farmer's mind of the movement of the products of his soil and labor from his own gate through to the distant points of the world; to Europe, to Algiers, to Athens,
and the Orient.

The highways transport service is the first step in the great system of transportation to the sea and then on the merchant marine to the far points of the world.

Food must begin to move soon from every hill, through every valley of the great country behind our shores, down to the shipping points before we can start our ships from the ports and fulfill our duty; and with the promise of the war's end before us, the Highways Transport Committee throughout this land could and should render a peacetime service by stimulating highways transport of nourishment
and supplies so badly needed.
Routes and channels from shipping points must be opened up and efficiently maintained, and our merchant marine must be built up to meet the demands for distribution overseas.

Resistance in any form to the free movement of farm products
must be reduced and eliminated,
and the most efficient utilization of man-power must be introduced wherever possible.

The United States Shipping Board urges that this message be carried through you and your Regional Chairmen to the State organizations and on down through your great body of patriotic men whose visions can well embrace the crying need of their brothers in other lands for help.

CATHARPIN

Dr. Bond, the presiding elder, will preach at Groveton school house Sunday, at 11 a. m., and at Gainesville in the afternoon. The children of Catharpin school, eager to do their bit to help the boys, collected $4750 for the Y. M. C. A. drive.

Mr. Roland Jones, of Alexandria, Va., is visiting at the home of his uncle, Mr. L. K. Lynn.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Brower, jr., and small daughter have returned to Round Hill, Va., after a visit to relatives and friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. R. McDonald, Misses Sanders, Metz and Trainham, Messrs. F. H. Sanders and Luther Allison attended Sunday School at Fairview Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Stockton, of Washington, D. C., are guests at the home of Mr. A. W. Smith.

Mr. Leslie Hoffman, who is stationed at Norfolk, Va., has been granted a thirty-day furlough and is now at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Hoffman.

Ensign Frank Brower has returned to Norfolk, after a visit to his parents, Dr. and Mrs. C. F. Brower.

Mr. E. N. Pattie visited Alexandria and Washington this week.

Mr. Paul Wilson visited friends and relatives in this locality on Sunday.

CLIFTON

Rev. Alford Kelley preached an excellent sermon on "The Great Salvation" Sunday at 11 a. m. He went to Washington on the afternoon train to preach in a church there, of which he may take charge for a time during the absence of the pastor, who is in ill health. Owing to the uncertainty as to the future, Mr. Kelley would not make an appointment for next Sunday, but will be with us on his usual Sunday, the 8th of December.

Mrs. J. L. Fristoe, who has been in Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, for some time, convalescing after a serious operation, returned home last week. She has not been quite so well since being home, but her friends hope, after she is rested from her long trip, she will feel better and will regain her wanted health in time.

Rev. W. L. Naff, Messrs. S. A. Ayre, Frank Ford and D. W. Mathers are on the sick list.

Miss Holmes was too ill Monday to teach her pupils, but was able to resume her classes Tuesday.

Among the Clifton visitors Sunday were Miss Elizabeth Swartz, of Legato and Washington, and Mr. Moncure, of Bealeton, who is a student at Eastern.

Rev. V. H. Council is here for a hunt.

Mr. R. L. Poindexter came in Tuesday with four wild turkeys. Mr. Poindexter seems to be the champion hunter.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Richards are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a very young granddaughter. The young lady is the daughter of Lieutenant Walter A. Richards and wife. Lieutenant Richards is in a hospital in France recovering from a wound in the shoulder received while he was at the front fighting.

Mrs. Fannie Whaley has returned to the city after a visit to her sister, Mrs. Lucy Payne. Miss Mollie Cross spent a few days in Washington while Mrs. Whaley was here.

Mrs. Beagen celebrated her birthday in the hospital a few days ago. Mr. Beagen and Miss Reed came from Chester to spend the day with her. This is the second celebration they have had since Mrs. Beagen went to the Alexandria Hospital with a broken arm and hip. The first was the 58th anniversary of Mr.

and Mrs. Beagen's marriage, which was soon after her accident. Miss Cross went to see her while in Washington. She also saw Ray Davis, who is in the same hospital, recovering from an accident having his foot nearly severed, while sawing wood. Miss Cross reported both patients cheerful and seemingly doing well.

Mr. Clyde Mathers is kept busy sawing wood for the community.

Mr. R. R. Buckley is on the jury, which is to decide the fate of Lou Hall, the woodchopper being tried in Fairfax Court House this week, for the murder of Eva Roy at Burke several months ago.

Mr. W. B. Doak compromised his case with Kendrick on the charge of killing a dog belonging to the latter.

Mr. Andrew Robey has returned from his southern trip and is working on the farm of Mrs. John Detwiler.

Irvin M. Quigg spent Tuesday night in the city.

Misses Sarah Crewe and Miriam Buckley spent last Friday night in the city.

The Misses Elgin entertained their friends last Saturday night.

While Mr. Bell says his is already sweetened; Unless we can taste it will sure be a tie.

Mr. Everett Harris and little daughter Frances, spent the week-end visiting in Washington.

Several of our good people are on the sick list this week.

A fine son was born to Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Keys on Thursday last.

From the buzzing of Mr. Cooksey's wood saw, around the village last week, we think our boys from "over there" will at least get a warm reception when they come home.

Mr. Samuel Fogle and family, of Washington, visited Mrs. Fogle's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cooper, here this week. They were accompanied by Miss Sallie Cooper.

FORESTBURG

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Dunn and daughter Dorothy, were in Manassas Monday on business.

Mr. Charles Davis, of Forest View, spent Sunday in Washington.

Miss Violet Abell, of Oak Hill, returned to her home there after a week's visit with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Miles Abell, of St. Elmo.

Mr. Frank Lee was the guest of Miss Elsie Davis Sunday.

Mr. Jesse James Gregory called at the home of Miss Etta Tapscott Sunday at Oak Grove.

Mr. and Mrs. Grover Abell and daughter Grace, called Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Abell's.

The Journal—$1.00 a year—and worth it.

NOKESVILLE

The first Civic League meeting of the Nokesville public school was held on Nov. 27th. There was election of officers. A good program rendered.

The wee Widower of Nokesville has been hunting a Cook for the past two months, and "believe me," he found one Thursday morning cooking breakfast for him in his own home. May she prove a good one in every sense of that term.

At the Methodist parsonage on Wednesday, November 27, at 8 p. m., by Rev. C. W. Mark, Mr. A. Armstrong was married to Miss Fannie Cook, of Greenwich. The bride wore a traveling suit of blue with hat to match, and the groom was attired in the conventional black.

Mrs. Charlie Walters and her daughter, Miss May, will spend Thanksgiving and week-end in Washington.

Several of the Nokesville hunters have had the good luck to kill wild turkeys this season. Among them are Bob Jones, R. W. Free, jr., Jim Bettis, Rev. C. W. Mark and Will Green.

CHRISTIANS QUICKENED

Converts Added and Prayer Meeting Started.

A special series of meetings of two weeks duration closed at the Buckhall Methodist Church last Monday night. This meeting was conducted by the pastor, Rev. H. Q. Burr, the visible results being a church greatly revived, twenty-two to confess Christ, eighteen of whom united with the church. Of the eighteen accessions to the church, eleven received the Sacrament of Baptism. A remarkable feature of this meeting was the number of adults professing faith in Christ, many of whom were heads of families.

The success of this meeting was made possible by the cooperation of the Christian people of the community. As an illustration of the earnestness of the old as well as the new members of the church a prayer meeting has been organized to meet on Thursday night. The influence of this meeting will long abide. The pastor will preach again the second Sunday in December. At this service new members will be received, and the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered.

Community Christmas Tree

On Monday night Mrs. Spies and Miss Gilbert went before the Town Council to interest them in the Community Christmas Tree. They were cordially received and the Council encouraged them to proceed with preparations and promised to furnish the lights and night watchman during Christmas week. There will be carols and songs and appropriate addresses and no doubt many will join in the festivities natural to the happy, sacred time of Christmas. The tree will stand on Mr. Lipscomb's lot as it did last year. X.
