HON. E. WALTON MOORE SPEAKS

An unusual ovation was given Representative E. Walton Moore, the new Congressman from the Eighth Virginia district, when he concluded a 45-minute address in the House Friday upon the part that Virginia had played in the organization of the first Constitutional Convention and in the formation and adoption of the Constitution itself. When he had finished, the entire membership rose to its feet and applauded the Virginian for many minutes.

The House had met an hour earlier than usual to hear addresses from Mr. Moore and Representative Townier, of Iowa, incident to the anniversary of the adoption of the Federal Constitution. The celebration was originally scheduled to take place Wednesday, but was postponed because of the Pershing parade.

Both orators were heartily applauded, the special tribute being paid to Mr. Moore because of the fact that it was the Virginian's maiden speech. At the conclusion of it Minority Leader Kitchin declared that it was "one of the most interesting, instructive and elegant speeches I ever heard in the House. So far as I can recall Moore is the only new member since I have been in Congress who brought the entire House to its feet in applause and approval at the conclusion of an address."

Mr. Moore stated at the outset that as the Governor of Virginia had asked the people of the state to observe the anniversary of the signing of the Constitution, he would in his remarks outline the part played by Virginia in the adoption of the Constitution. He then went step by step to show how Washington and his followers realized the weakness and inadequacy of the confederation; how the confederation failed after the revolution; how at Washington's suggestion, the Annapolis meeting was called and how Virginia was the first state to accept the recommendation of that meeting and appoint delegates to the Philadelphia convention.

"The light began to break," Mr. Moore said, "when all of the states but one had followed the lead of Virginia." He went on to show that the document drafted by the Philadelphia convention encountered fierce criticism and was in grave danger of being wrecked. But the action of Virginia was pivotal and decisive: Her ratification led to similar action by other commonwealths.

The orator called the roll of great men who sat in the Philadelphia convention and described the proceedings as a battle of giants. He discussed the attitude of Patrick Henry, James Madison and other leaders in the debates.

"Everything had depended upon Virginia," he said. "New York had looked to her and New York and Virginia having acted, eleven states ratified the instrument. The darkness was gone and the country stood in the light of a new day."

In conclusion Mr. Moore grouped together the great statesmen of the revolutionary period, who were identified with his own district of Virginia. He mentioned Washington, Madison, Marshall, Mason and Monroe. The speech was frequently applauded, but at no point was the cheering more pronounced than when the Virginian referred to Light Horse Harry Lee, who took part in the Constitutional Convention, and whom Mr. Moore said sired that "wonderful soldier and stainless gentleman, who, in the troubled times nearer our own led the armies of the Confederacy."—Exchange.

That Virginia farmers have not heeded Commissioner Komer's advice to use serum as soon as hog cholera is threatened is evidenced by the Commissioner's announcement that there is more hog cholera in the state today than Virginia has known in several years. Farmers, it may be, do not understand that this serum is a great preventive as well as a cure, and although a dollar today seems to be worth about fifty cents an ounce of prevention is still acknowledged to be worth a pound of cure.

Virginia's roll of honor in the war against Germany shows 2,513 stars that have turned from blue to gold. Nine hundred and thirty-seven officers and men were killed in action, 101 were killed by accident in France and 634 died from disease.

When the ninety-fifth session of the University of Virginia opened last Thursday, all available dormitories had been assigned and indications pointed to an enrollment of 1,500.

SCOUT COMMITTEE ENROLS MEMBERS

Plans being made for Organization Meeting Here on Tuesday, October 7.

"The county committee for the extension of the Boy Scout movement in Prince William county has set Tuesday evening, October 7, at 8:30 p. m. in Connors Hall, for a general rally and organization of the citizens movement for the Boy Scouts of America," says an announcement from the committee, which is composed of Mr. W. I. Steere, Mrs. W. L. Saunders, Mr. R. O. Bibb, Miss Lillian V. Gilbert and Mr. Ralph Larson.

"All who have become associate members of the National Council, numbering now nearly fifty in Manassas, are earnestly requested to be present and answer to the roll call, and all other citizens in and around Manassas are invited.

"This call is also to any in other parts of the county who are interested in this important work. Especially we request those who were asked to canvass for associate members to report a good list at this meeting and be present themselves if possible.

"An inspiring and instructive program will be arranged to the end that we all may become better acquainted with and more interested in this great work. The chief address will be given by a field agent of the Boy Scout work, whose headquarters is in Washington and whose name will be given next week with the completed program, which will include music, readings, etc., by local talent. It is expected the Boy Scouts and the Girl Scouts of Manassas will appear in uniform.

"Following the literary program the associate members of the National Council, with any who will join them on that occasion, will organize a citizens' council whose purpose is to foster and extend the Boy, Scout and the Girl Scout work in our community."

FOR DISCHARGED SOLDIERS

Red Cross Will Answer Questions Through Department in Journal.

Questions of discharged soldiers on government insurance or any other topic will be answered weekly through The Journal by the Home Service Section of the Prince William Red Cross. The names of soldiers making these inquiries will not be published. The questions and answers of the week follow:

Q. If a man receives payments of insurance as a result of total and permanent disability, is the payment of his insurance at his death affected?
A. No, not if he continues to pay his premiums.

Q. Why should I carry insurance?
A. For many reasons:

1. If you have dependents, you owe the protection to them. They are worth it just as much now as they were during the war.
2. It is a means of regular saving.
3. It is a good business investment.

Q. Can I ever borrow on my insurance?
A. Yes, to the extent of 90 per cent.

REFUSE LICENSE TO "DOCTOR"

Fredericksburg Citizens Object to Dispenser of Chinese Remedy.

"Doctor" Van Sangen, who has, with the assistance of two minstrel men, a stage and one or two dollars worth of drugs, been able to accumulate a good sum each night by selling his "Famous Chinese Remedy," will not do business at his usual stand tonight," says the Fredericksburg Free Lance. "Complaint was made to Mayor J. P. Rowe by Mr. J. B. DeBnam, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and several others that the "Doctor," besides selling some simple drugs for a dollar to those he succeeded in convincing by his street corner talk, was somewhat crude in his language and discussed tobacco subjects freely. Mayor Rowe refused to authorize renewal of the license."

It is probable that "Doctor" Van Sangen is the same Chinese medicine man who carried a considerable sum of money out of Manassas several weeks ago, attracting crowds to his show on the vacant lot opposite the hotel and selling his "famous" remedy for one dollar a bottle.
