VARIETY.

MORNING.

—With quicken'd step
Brown night retires: Young day pours in apace,
And opens all the lawney prospects wide.

THOMSON.

Riding on a golden cloud,
Blushing like the rosey spring,
Young eyed dawn, a cherub fair,
Spread his dew besprangled wing.

Light, first made of heaven, descends
Softly from the realms of day,
Bidding hence the haggard night,
Stars, and Luna's borrowed ray.

Night obeys the starn command,
Weeping quits the wide domain,
Shedding tears of rich perfume
O'er the flower enamell'd plain.

Stars go twinkling to their rest;
Luna, weary, sick and pale,
Mourning that her face is run,
Slinks behind her dusky veil.

Thro' her dappled cloudy shade
Peeping with her velvet eye,
Chaste Aurora wakes the morn,
Scatt'ring roses thro' the sky.

In a gold-embroider'd robe,
Morn resumes her orient pride,
Haste to meet the bridegroom sun,
Blushing like a virgin bride.

Now she treads the azure sky,
Waves aloft her purple wand,
Health sits smiling on her brow,
Pouring plenty o'er the land.

Thro' his gorgeous palace gates,
Seated in a sapphire wain,
Sol, great Sultan of the east,
Comes with triumph in his train.

Tinging deep the glossy mass,
Bright with his refulgent ray,
Now the monarch of the stream
Darts upon his destined prey.

Vegetation's numerous tribes
Springing from the teeming earth,
Meeting glad their parent sun,
Hail the power who gave them birth.

O'er the vast aerial waste,
Zephyr waves his wanton wing,
Fringing from his spicy grove
All the balmy sweets of spring.

Breathing on the humid bowers,
Bearing all their sweets away,
Wafting Fragrance to the air,
Breezes thro' the valies play.

Puddling in the puddled pool,
Calling round her callow brood,
See the gaudy checkered duck
Early seeks her slimy food.

Shepherds, roused by Chanticleer,
Calling up his wanton wives,
Pasture and their folded flocks—
Labour o'er the land revives.

Peeping from the humble shed,
Chirping sparrows call aloud;
Round the tatt'ring hoary spire,
Chatt'ring daws in Senate crowd.

Arching neck of snowy white,
Swelling in her plumy pride,
See the silver-crested swan
Swift the watery surface glide.

Freely ranging, harmless bees
Wander gay the jes'mine grove,
Ramble aromatic woods,
Or thro' fragrant vallies rove.

Cackling o'er the blooming wild
Gabbling geese together stray,
Fowls in friendly concert feed,
Driving dove cot foes away.

Lowing joy at her approach,
Rising from the silken glade,
Cows their milky stores resign
To the welcome peasant lass.

Warbling pleasure thro' the glade,
Swelling notes of grateful praise,
Flirting pearls on Flora's lap,
Birds their heaven-taught mattins raise.

Morning, sun, birds, beasts and flowers,
Springing from the Ripen'd sod,
Hush at Man's ingratitude,
Whilst they adore their maker—GOD

I Sec. 1. Be it enacted, that where it has not been already done, it ſhall be the duty of the commanding officers of companies to proceed forthwith to divide their companies into divitions by ballot from one to ten, for the purpoſe of a regular rotine of duty, when called into actual ſervice; and to return a roll of each diviſion, and its number, in relation, within fifteen days thereafter, to the commanding officer of his battalion, who ſhall forthwith tranſmit the ſame to the commanding officer of the regiment, who ſhall direct the ſame to be recorded in the clerk of the County of enquiry.
