RAISING CALVES FOR BEEF

The late fall is a good time for calves to drop if we are prepared to give them good shelter during winter, and after much experimenting I have come to the conclusion that a shed with a row of tents or sectional roof with a row of windows in each section is the ideal place for young stock in winter, says a writer in Breeder's Gazette, Chicago. This shed should be connected with the cow barn, and the barn should be warm enough to prevent the chilling of a young calf which may be born during a very cold night. There must be hayracks and little feed troughs in the shed, also water pans and a galvanized or cement trough in which to feed fresh skimmed, warm separator milk, but care should be taken that nothing may hinder drifting in and turning inside with the manure spreader. This makes it easily kept clean, and if there is no manure spreader at present there soon will be. The barn must be provided with several box stalls for the purpose of keeping the cows by themselves for a few days, the nurse cow and her calf and the calf she is expected to raise until the calves are strong enough to be turned out into the shed.

Clover hay fed in connection with the grains named and mill feeds should insure a fairly good flow of milk, but if the corn crop be put in the silo and fed to the cows also it would increase the milk supply very much, and if a little silage be fed to the calves it would make them very sappy and thrifty. With all this ready before the calves are born they should be welcome at any time, and such cows as give the richest milk and are easily milked should be milked by hand, and those with faulty udders, short teats and hard milkers, or with any bad habits, are better used for nurse cows, whether they are heifers or mature cows.

A newborn calf should draw its first drink from its own mother, and it is better to keep it with her a few days, then put it in a sack, hind end first, and let its head stick out and tie the sack so as to give the calf no chance to get out; take it to the cow which is to nurse it and lay it on the floor before her. Of course it will struggle and thus excite the cow, but that is what is desired, for—call it mother's instinct, pity or what not—the fact is she will soon start to lick the calf's head, and you may withdraw your sack, and the battle is more than half won, as most cows do not object to nursing it at once, but if she should kick at it a rope may be tied around her just in front of the udder for a few times to prevent kicking.

It is well to have calves of nearly the same age on the same cow, but a difference of two or three weeks does not hurt. Any cows as calves, or strong enough if she should be turned in the shed after nursing, where she may be fed a little fine clover hay and a little cornmeal, and by degrees with the finely cut oat hay may be added. They should also be taught to drink the fresh milk warm from the separator, and if they at first refuse it a little may be poured over the grain. Care must be taken to clean the trough after each meal. If only one calf begins to drink they will soon start in. A little dried blood meal may be kept on hand to be used in case of scours, and hay, grain, feed and separator milk should be fed in greater quantity as the calves grow, and a little silage may be added if available, but ground spelts, barley and oats need not be sifted any longer.

The pure-bred calves may be raised the same as well as the grades and all should be vaccinated against black leg. They should be ready to be weaned when grass comes. If the grades are for sale they should bring strong prices. The shed should be covered with any of the better kinds of ready roofing, which will make good material for gutters and alleys also. It will cost a little more to raise calves during winter, but if they are handled as described they may be taken away from the cows at five months old and fed separate milk and grain and will be profitable calves can be bought the same cows may raise another crop of them on grass.

Funeral Director—Licensed Embalmer

MANASSAS, VIRGINIA

NOTICE. HORSES WANTED

Address by Mr. Geo C. Round.

[At Reunion May 10, 1906.]

Comrades of the Army of the Potomac: Manassas is known throughout the world; known better perhaps than any other town of our ancient commonwealth—and known because it was the birthplace of the Army of the Potomac. This lofty tableland, red with the iron which nature implanted in every atom of its soil, was crimsoned anew by heroes of the iron heart.

Here, too, on the same terrible day, another army was born, the Army of Northern Virginia. Here both armies received their fiery baptism month before they were even named.

The significance of this remarkable gathering is this: The Army of the Potomac, after forty years' wandering, has come to the place of its birth—and Manassas gives welcome to the men who made her name and her fame immortal.

Manassas, the place where you were cradled for a single day, was a battlefield from the beginning. The mountain ranges and lesser ridges before you, tell of the great conflicts of nature. From the sandstone flagging underneath your feet, fresh from our quarries, you can read ancient history of death and destruction from manuscripts of geologic ages. In the valley of Bull Run, four miles to the East, near McLean's Ford, there is a quarry where, in the Age of Stone, human beings made hou-ehold utensils and weapons of warfare. I hold now in my right had a battle ax of stone, which I picked up within a half mile of Blackburn's Ford, and in my left I show you an Indian arrow-head found on the Henry Farm—all of which goes to show that Dan Tyler and Longstreet where not the first men who along the line of Bull Run stood in deadly array for what they deemed to be right.

From our Ruffner School tower you can discern the uplands which Washington surveyed, and locate the path blazed through the wilderness by Braddock as he marched the imperial columns of England to defeat and to death. On the Occoquan, in this very county, can still be seen the ruins of the foundry where shot were cast by the patriots of '76, and from which Daniel Morgan marched forth to become "the thunderbolt of Saratoga," and a major general of the American Revolution. Turn still farther to the Southward, and you can hear in imagination the shrieking shells from British war vessels as in 1813 they buried them-selves in Prince William soil. And over, and over again the mar-shals of two hundred campaigns, great and small, of the mighty armies of forty-odd years ago surged back and forth over this Piedmont plateau would be to rewrite the most thrilling chapters of American annals. And time is not all. The nineteenth century had not closed when General George W. Davis marched the Second Army Corps of the Spanish war from Camp Alger, and the twentieth century had scarcely begun when the Blue Army and the Brown chose this ancient battle ground as the area of their maneuvres.

But peace hath her victories no less renowned than war. Look now to the Northward, and you see a medieval tower transplanted from the banks of the Rhine. Just beyond are extended vineyards, a dairy of a hundred cows, and a field white with the fleecy flocks of sheep. Look to the South, and one mile distant stands the orchard that took the prize for apples at the Paris Exhibition. Drive three miles to the East, and you reach the first schoolhouse erected in Virginia under the public school law of the commonwealth. One mile to the Westward you can see the building on the Industrial Farm for colored youth. And on Saturday next, as you will observe from the posters on our streets, our people are to assemble in this very court room to devise methods to further improve our system of public instruction.

With a heroic past and a prosperous present we hope for a future of which none of you need feel ashamed.

State Fair Was a Success.

Senator Daniel's Welcome.

Extract from address at Reunion May 10, 1906.

I am glad to see among our visitors to-day the face of friends I have met before. There is my brave friend General McLeer, and I will only refer to his experience here to say that I had a great deal rather meet him as I did recently in Brooklyn at the banquet of Grand Post and the Union League, than to meet him as some of us did right here in 1861 and 1862. There is General Curtis, who was in command at Lynchburg after the war. He came to my town—for I was a Lynchburger—just after Appomattox, when our fortunes and feelings were what you might imagine—in the deepest depression. When he left there he was respected as an officer and beloved as a friend, and no man could have administered the delicate and responsible task committed to his hands in a manner more becoming the character of the American soldier and gentleman. Were he to come to Lynchburg nowadays, none would be more welcome. General O. B. Wilcox, of Michigan, who was wounded yonder in the woods on July 1, 1861, was also at Lynchburg, my home, at the same time that General Curtis was, and I can say the same of him. And there is the familiar face of General Louis Wagner. I did not get close enough to see the General when the ill fortunes of war befell him on this field. He was both wounded and captured here. But I did meet him on board the "St. Louis" crossing the Atlantic from Portsmouth in England to New York a few years ago, and I avail myself of his presence as a witness to tell you of a little incident when seeing him recently. We were both presented to the great Chinese statesman, Li Hung Chang, who was our fellow passenger on the St. Louis. It is considered a courtesy in China to ask a man: "What are you worth?" He had put several through this category, but when I was presented his eye caught sight of my crutch, and he fired at me the question, "How did you get lame?" "I had a difficulty with the United States some years ago," I answered, "and got knocked out in battle." "How does it happen then," said he, "if you were against the United States in war, that you are now a Senator?" I recalled the fact that in the Chinese Li Hung had, according to reputation, been pretty liberal in cutting off heads. I never had any admiration for that way of doing business, and seeing a chance to get back at him a little, I answered: "In America, when the war is over, we have begun to make the Confederates judges, representatives, foreign ministers and senators, and very soon you could not tell whether a public official had been a Federal or a Confederate soldier. We do not believe in our country in hanging people or in cutting off heads, and have adopted a much wiser and better plan." The almond eyes of the great Chinaman twinkled, and a look of seriousness went over his countenance, and much to my relief he stopped asking questions, and I have often wondered whether or not he detected the gentle implication that underlaid my observation. We have always agreed with Sir Edward Lytton Bulwer, who says in "Paul Clifford" that the "worst use you can make of a man is to hang him." His country Great Britain has not always known that. The freest man in the republic has always known it, and there is no man in it to-day who is not glad to remember that in all its history no man was ever executed by law for opinion's sake. Virginia, and indeed all the South, to-day are in happy unison with all the people of this great nation. We are in our father's house, and rejoice as you do that it is a household of faith for free institutions and for the earnest cultivation of those strong virtues and amenities which make life worth the living. We join you here not only in the gracious hospitalities which cheer the hour, but as well in paying respect to your brave comrades who fell here and whom you justly and honorably commemorate. We believe as you do that a people who forget the [illegible] who died for them can not be relied on to be faithful to [illegible]

Let me close now, giving to our friends our best wishes for your safe return to your homes. May [illegible] for you [illegible]

MRS. JEFFERSON DAVIS DEAD

President Sends Sympathy.

Mrs. Jefferson Davis, widow of the President of the Confederacy, died Tuesday night at 10:30 o'clock in her apartments at the Hotel Majestic, New York. The cause of death was pneumonia, which followed a cold contracted one week ago. Up to that time Mrs. Davis had been in good health and remarkably active for a woman of her advanced age.

The body left New York on Thursday for Richmond, Va. Mrs. Davis will be laid to rest in Hollywood Cemetery beside her husband and daughter.

Mrs. Davis was unconscious when the end came, and passed away surrounded by relatives and friends. Mrs J. Addison Hayes of Colorado Springs, her only living daughter, was among those with her when the end came.

Mrs. Davis was born in Natchez, Miss., May, 7, 1826, the daughter of Wm. Burr and Margaret (Kempe) Howell.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 17.—President Roosevelt this morning sent the following message of condolence:

"To Mrs. J. Addison Hayes, Hotel Majestic, New York:

"Pray accept the most sincere sympathy of Mrs. Roosevelt and myself.
"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

The President also directed that a suitable floral tribute be sent from the White House conservatories for the funeral.

"Corporal" Tanner, commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, paid the following tribute to the memory of Mrs. Jefferson Davis on being informed of her death:

"I had had the pleasure of meeting Mrs. Davis but once, and that was in Richmond in the spring of 1896. She impressed me as a lady who illustrated all the graces of domestic American life.

"In the time that has elapsed since the close of the civil war she had formed many friendships among Northern people, and I have no doubt that her views regarding those people became much softened and tenderer than they would have been had she passed all her life in the South.

"Nobody who ever met Mrs. Davis but will be glad to know that she reached the ripe old age of fourscore years, and after a life, much of which was passed in the whirl of civil strife, has now entered upon her well earned rest. Peace to her memory."

Letter to B F Hughes

Manassas, Va.

Dear Sir:—A Pound of good meat and no bone is worth more than a half-pound of meat and a half-pound of bone; but there are as you say, a great many people who won't pay more than a certain price by the pound. Give 'em bone; that's right; give 'em plenty of bone!

There are people who won't pay more than $1.50 a gallon for paint; give 'em bone!

There's no better school than experience, cost is high, but the lesson is never forgotten.

Let a man paint two houses alike in name; one Devoe, the other that $1.50 paint. He buys 10 gallons of each, and puts $5 a day for labor—$3 a day is $3 a gallon, easier reckoning.

He has to buy two gallons more of the $1.50 paint; and has two gallons left of Devoe: 12 gallons $1.50; $18; 8 gallons $1.75; $14; $4 more for "cheap" paint.

He pays $25 a gallon for painting: 8 gallons $24: 12 gallons $36: $12 more for painting "cheap" paint.

He'll buy the less-gallons paint after that. If people are slow to learn, it's because they keep on buying bone meat. Give 'em plenty of bone.

Yours truly

A DREAMING OF JOHN.

While nobody has been bold enough or mean enough to attempt to foreclose on John's shoes, while he is rejuvenating on Colorado, there has been a-nudging of political elbows and a-buzzing of bees and a-watching of fences throughout the eighth congressional district.

Congressional aspirants who have not wanted to cross swords with the valiant, long headed John are having vague and uncertain dreams that he may retire on account of his health or weariness in sitting on the knittering, spluttering lid and then the chance will be "our'n."

We congratulate all of these gentlemen on their astuteness in waiting; but if there is any thing turbulent to behold, restrained by the bars of opportunity, it is a menagerie of congressional aspirant, and "we've got 'em." Certainly a round up half a dozen of them; and there may be more whose dreams have not reached the whispering stage.

Who are the leading suspects?

Well, we can only be guided by certain political rumblings, as we have had no conference with any of them, but it looks to us like Lindsey Gordon of Louisa, C. C. Carlin (or Col. Carlin, we believe) of Alexandria, Judge White of Fauquier, John Ryan of Loudoun, Walton Moore of Fairfax and Judge Nicol of Prince William.

It has been suggested in other counties that Mr. Thornton of Prince William was an aspirant. We are not authorized to speak for him—do not remember to have discussed it with him within the past two years; but we have every reason to believe that his ambition is solely in his profession, where he is rapidly attaining distinction; and frankly we do not believe he has the remotest idea of it. Nor do we believe Col. Harper of Loudoun will enter the race. The phenomenal success of his Washington banking interests have probably absorbed his attention and we doubt that he even dreams now of a political career.

And who, if the great race ever comes off with these entries, are likely to get the ribbons?

Well, Mr. Rixey is a long ways from being to the end of his career. As a fence-builder he has never known an equal in this district. Patient, tireless, astute, methodical he is about the biggest man that ever held the lid on in Virginia politics. John is all these and more. He is at heart a splendid man, a great "mixer" and a magnificent business man. Every inch of him is a success; but if he ever decides to abandon "his cruelty to animals" and gets off the "lid" there will be something doing."

It is probable that Judge White is the choice of the powers that be. He comes nearer having full gup on the pass-word of any man [illegible] talks the language of the [illegible]

But that is only the beginning, and what a trouble this would be to the Winter [illegible] Just think of confronting him with his two old friends [illegible] of Fairfax and Ryan of [illegible] then his own district [illegible] man.

Frankly, in naming these men we would have to go to the woods.

Telephone Combination in Virginia.

An effort, it is stated, is being made to combine all the independent telephone companies doing business in Virginia into one company and a meeting of representatives is now in progress in Richmond.

A state organization has been formed with the following officers, Albert Bartlett of Bristol, president; Frank F. Marbury of the Home Telephone Company of Alexandria, first vice-president; W. A. McAnge of Suffolk, second vice-president, and H. F. Fisher of Rocky Mount, secretary and treasure.

It is proposed to unite all the small companies, dozens of which are scattered throughout the state, and to connect the gaps in the lines between the different sections of the state, in order to give a general service. It is claimed that this combination will cover the greater part of Virginia.

Suggestion from the Marshal.

A number who intend to meet the New York excursionists at Wellington to-morrow have asked me a question in my independent way would be a reasonable charge for transporting passengers. After consulting with others, in whose judgment I confide, I suggest the following as reasonable: 25 cents each from Wellington to Groveton, the same to return, and $1.00 from Groveton to Manassas, stopping at the Henry house farm.

Some may be willing to charge less and others may think it right to charge more. I urge, however, that it is for the interest of our community to maintain our reputation for charges which are not exorbitant.

Of course, I can not insure a load to anybody, but as three hundred dinners have been engaged, it is, I think, reasonable to suppose that there is a fair chance for everybody.

The train is expected to reach Wellington at 9:30 a. m.

PORTION OF R. J. REYNOLDS TOBACCO COMPANY'S PLANT 1906

The Largest, Best-Equipped and Cleanest Flat Plug Tobacco Manufacturing Plant in the World

The Reynolds factories, equipped with [illegible] of everything that any other kind, every modern appliance for producing the best chewing tobacco by a clean, sanitary and healthful process, under the direction of men who have made the business a life study, are located in the centre of the Piedmont tobacco belt, known to the world as the best productive soil for tobacco with an aroma so delightful, pleasing and appetizing that it created and popularized the fondness for chewing tobacco.

Only choice selections of this well-matured, thoroughly cured leaf are used in SCHNAPPS and others of the high-grade Reynolds brands, and expert tests prove that this tobacco requires and takes a smaller [illegible] of manufacturers making imitations claimed to be just as good as SCHNAPPS than any commodity manufactured; yet there are more pounds of SCHNAPPS chewed than the total amount of all imitative brands, or tobacco of similar appearance.

and has a wholesome, stimulating and satisfying effect on chewers.

SCHNAPPS is the brand that made the Reynolds factories famous as the manufacturers of the best and most popular brands of chewing tobacco, and made necessary the enormous growth from a small factory in 1875 to the largest flat-plug factory in the world.

The men who started the Reynolds Co., in 1875, are directing it to-day.

Oakland, Cal., June 20, 1906.

"Our Williams was burned in the big fire. We have been using another machine, but want to get back to the Williams as soon as possible, so send us over a No. 6 as soon as received.

Just before the Quake our old No. 4 Williams was printing pale and snowy ink didn't seem to help, and we thought we had a kick coming, when I discovered that we were still using the original pair of pads, bought with the machine four and a half years ago. A new pair put us all right again. Total cost for ink and repairs four and a half years, $1.00. So you see the Williams does after all cost something to operate and maintain, viz: about 20c. a year. At least that is our experience.

JOHN J. FELTON CO.,
A. E. Shattuck, Mgr.

P. S. "And our machine is hard worked—averages about 50 letters per day."

This record can be equalled by no other typewriter on the market! You know this. And when you consider that during the whole time better work was secured than can be done by any other typewriter, you can not afford to have your work done on any other machine. We guarantee cost of maintenance to not exceed $1.00 a year.

Death of Howard Wagener.

Howard, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Wagener, died on Saturday afternoon last after an illness of four months, in his sixteenth year.

Soon after he was taken ill he was carried to a Washington hospital where he was treated for several weeks for gastritis; but it was evident that the results were not favorable and he was brought home where in spite of the best medical skill and attention he passed away just as the golden summer of life was dawning fair.

His funeral was held on Sunday afternoon, Rev. Dr. McGill conducting the services, and his remains were laid to rest in the cemetery near town.

It is inexpressibly sad to see one of so much promise of all that is best and brightest in life gathered to the harvest of the great beyond. Those who knew him well know to what a high standard his youth gave promise. Gentle and modest of demeanor, studious and courteous to all, few in the early summer of life had made so many friends among those whose friendship is a prize to be esteemed. In him were all the promises of a courtly gentleman.

Untimely sad and as his death is to the bereaved family and friends an untarnished memory remains, and in that beautiful rest all must be well.

The Monument Dedication.

The dedication of the 5th, 10th and 14th New York monuments has been fixed for Saturday, Oct. 20.

Conveyances will probably be needed to carry 2000 or 300 passengers from Wellington to Groveton. After the exercises are over the excursionists will need conveyances to carry them to the Stone House and Henry House and thence to Manassas, where the greater part of them will take the train at 8 p. m.

The program, which is not people can show the visitors will be appreciated by a wide and influential circle and by no one more than your fellow citizen who has been honored by being designated marshal for this interesting occasion.

NORFOLK, VIRGINIA.

Rev. Sam Jones Is Dead.

Rev. Sam Jones, the noted evangelist, died in an Oklahoma, Choctaw and Gulf train near Little Rock on Tuesday.

He was traveling from some point West of Little Rock, and his destination was Memphis. The body was found in his birth in the sleeping car and was taken off the train at Little Rock.

Mr. Jones's home was at Carterville, Ga.

Samuel Porter Jones was born in Chambers county, Ala. Oct. 16, 1847. He moved to Cartersville, Ga., in 1859 and ten years later was admitted to the Georgia bar. His health broke down, and he began to drink wrecking his career as a lawyer. In 1872 he professed religion and became a evangelist in the M. E. Church, South.

Subsequently he devoted most of his time to evangelistic work, holding revival services in almost every city in the United States. His success as a revivalist was marvelous. His power over his audiences was that of a man inspired.

SAM JONES'S APHORISMS.

His unconventional style of speaking is shown in some of the following aphorisms, which have made his sermons famous.

We see God all around us. The mountains are God's thoughts upheaved. The rivers are God's thoughts in motion. The oceans are God's thoughts imbedded. The dewdrops are God's thoughts in pearls.

I believe that the whale swallowed Jonah, and the only reason I don't believe that Jonah swallowed the whale is because the Bible doesn't say so.

Some people believe what they don't understand. Do you understand why some cows have horns and some are muley?

You don't believe what you don't see. Did you ever see your back bone?

The hardest things for me to believe are the Ten Commandments and the sermon on the mount.

Custom is the law of fools and is running this country.

God pity the man who can't run his head without a deck of cards. He ought to have been in hell long before he had children born unto him.

I used to dance, but when I wanted a wife I went to the prayer meeting.

If any man don't like what I say let him come to me afterward and say so, and I'll—forgive him.

You dance with this world and you'll go to hell with this world.

Some men think they have backbone but it is nothing but a cotton string running about inside.

There is more religion in laughing than in crying. If religion consists in crying I have the best boy in the world.

God bores through the top of a man's head to his heart and on down to his pocket.

The lawyer who knows as little about Blackstone and the supreme court reports as the average Christian does about the Bible would never have but one case. The sheriff would be his next client.

Red liquor and Christianity won't stay in the same hide.

The devil is too much of a gentleman to stay where he is not welcome.

The back door of the church ought to be opened once a year and give all who have not lived up to its rules an opportunity to pass out.

Whiskey is a good thing in its place, and that place is in hell. If I get there I will drink all I can get, but I won't do it here.

"THIS IS A HORSE"

ONCE there was a small boy who wrote "This is a Horse" after trying for hours to draw a copy on his slate of a thoroughbred racer. He admired the horse, wanted it, but had neither the ability nor the experience to get him. He therefore tried to draw one. When his labors were complete, he looked first at the original, then at the miserable artistic failure, and after long, deep study wrote "THIS IS A HORSE," realizing his failure and inability to reproduce the genuine, and he knew without [illegible] artistic genius, he could not [illegible] but he tried.
