ARE YOU IN NEED?

From the Publisher for March.

The only medicine that a mother should give on her own responsibility is castor oil said Lyndon L. Clegg, M. D., 41 years old, even many physicians would call him a quack. The main idea of today's simple remedies is to keep the body strong and free from external annoyances—the purity among infants would be greatly reduced. The young organs of young children are very delicate and when once upset by medicines it is difficult to set them right again.

All sick babies must of course have the benefit of a reliable physician's advice and the sooner one is called the better but there are now, probably always will be, many mothers so situated that they can not secure a good doctor for little nursery ailments, and when such is the case I am sure they will not regret trying the methods advised above in place of relying upon their own limited experience or dosing with remedies suggested by well-meaning but misguided friends.

Of course you know Spangler's is the place to get all kinds of Household and Kitchen Goods. Have you any Pictures or marriage contracts you want framed? If so, just bring them in and have me make you a frame.

They know so much to do you want to protect and make the house safe for the children. If so, why throw away the old fashioned window shades, let me furnish you a 20th Century Shade Hanger, which makes hanging and removing shades so easy and safe. Appropriate at house cleaning time. They also have a large selection for your lawn over top of shade or window. The shade must jump out of this hanger and springs never get broken out of order. They are adjustable and will last forever. They are a just little hooks to fasten it up. That's all. Ask to see it.

Our guarantee of perfection with each barrel we sell.

Ida M. Tarbell on Woman's Place in the World.

From the Publisher for March.

It is not too much to say to day that women in this country can get anything a majority of them really want and the individual can practise any trade of profession or art without hindrance. All this has come about without decreasing the number of marriages, destroying the home—or the club; limiting masculine power or reducing the profits of the dressmakers and milliners.

Established things remain as they were, yet something has happened. It is not mainly that we have utilized in active work the large number of women who heretofore, through a failure to marry—or to succeed in marriage—found themselves with no congenial occupation or interest open to them, and so doomed to lives of inaction, or profitless action, and often of dire poverty? That large class of women who forty years ago were denominated old maids, a class whom everybody pitied or laughed at and for whom there seemed no opening but death, has largely passed away.

ADMINISTRATOR'S NOTICE!

Sensible Living.

From the Country Gentleman.

Dr. Samuel B. Ward, dean of the Albany Medical College, gave some good advice to his classes this year on right living, which is by no means limited in its application to medical students. Here are some of his maxims:

Change is the law of the material world, so it is of the natural. The ground must have the winter's rest if it is to bear the summer's crop, and you must have the rest of the Sabbath to enable you to do well the work for the remainder of the week. Go to church Sunday morning, because after having listened to anatomy, and physiology, and surgery, and obstetrics all the week, nothing could possibly be a more radical or grateful change.

It will pay you well to get plenty of rest every week day also. I well know that it is told of the great Napoleon that he never slept more than three hours. One of the most eminent medical men of the day tells me that for more than twenty years he worked habitually from seven o'clock in the morning until three o'clock in the morning. And an ex-governor of this state for many years slept only four or five hours, and worked hard almost every other minute of the day. I have had no recent opportunity—perhaps it may be considered fortunate—of communicating with the great military chieftain; but each of the other two has told me that he can now do more work on eight or nine hours' sleep than he can on less.

Undoubtedly some of you require less sleep than others; but each of you should find out for himself how many hours it takes to refresh him to permit him to get up wide-awake and feeling like going to work again—and should then habitually allow himself that number. Emergencies will occasionally arise to necessitate your doing with less for a few days. The illustrious Abernethy said that "no man ever died happy with disease below the diaphragm." It might truly be added that no such man ever lived happy. Your liver and digestive apparatus are to be as carefully looked after in a medical way as the devil in theology. Both will offer you all kinds of temptations, and woe betide you if you yield to either. Physical exercise, regularly every day, rain or shine, and plenty of it, will pay you well. The hours devoted to it are not wasted, are not stolen from study. With a proper amount of it you will do more mental work—will accomplish more in the year—and will do it cheerfully and joyfully—that you possibly can without it.

The late Dr. Frank Hamilton used to say that the best thing for the inside of a man was the outside of a horse. In his own case he practiced what he preached, and certainly his mental and physical alertness and vigor at an advanced age bore loud testimony to the truth of his assertion. I agree with him entirely. But unfortunately, for a variety of reasons, comparatively few of us can ride a horse every day, and fortunately "shank's mare" is an excellent substitute.

Another most important habit for you to acquire is that of mental concentration. Sitting at a table with a text-book open before you and running your eye along the lines, while your mind is occupied with recollections of the good times of yesterday, or plans for those of tomorrow, or day-dreams of what your best girl may be doing at that moment, is not study. If you do not already know how, you should learn to so exclude all outside thoughts and so fix your attention, by a determined effort of the will, on the page before you, that reading it once, or twice at most, will put you in possession of every fact there recorded.

I hope that there is no need of impressing upon you the fact that any man who goes to a gambling house "to try his luck" is a natural-born fool. The men who run those establishments are not in business for the benefit of their health, but the game, even when you are sure that it is conducted with perfect honesty, is so arranged every time to a mathematical certainty, that the lamb is bound to be fleeced in the end; and no one will despise your lack of ordinary intelligence more thoroughly than he who takes your money forever having thought that you could possibly win.

There is no possibility of denying that gambling—playing games for gain, and not for amusement or recreation—is for many men a perfectly infernal, horrid fascination, which leads them to their ruin. I recollect on one occasion to have seen five hundred dollars on the table, the ownership to be decided by the superiority of a single hand, when there was only one man at the table who had an income exceeding five thousand dollars a year, and thirty-one other who did not have a wife and family to support. Now, gentleman, in all reason, can you imagine a more silly, irrational, idiotic, wicked performance than that? If you get into the habit of playing for money at all, the temptation to take unwarrantable risks, which has proved too strong to be resisted by many and many a man of just as much firmness and principle as you think that you have, may prove your undoing. There are hundreds of perfectly safe ways of getting amusement and recreation; therefore I advise you not to play games for money, on the same old ground—unless it does not pay.

I am not going into any long scientific discussion as to whether alcohol is to be classified as a food, a stimulant or a narcotic. In point of fact, its varied action depends on two things—the condition of the man who takes it, and the dose. If intended as a food directly or indirectly, or as a narcotic, it will be prescribed for you by some one else when you are ill, and then you will take it, of course. On the other hand, I want to warn you also that when you are not seriously ill, but so far as you know in your ordinary good health, the injection of quite an ordinary amount of alcohol—say a couple of glasses of beer, or an ounce of whiskey, diluted with water—an amount which would ordinarily produce no other effect than one of a mild exhilaration—may prove decidedly intoxicating.

No one who ever takes a drink at all can be sure that the next one will not have far more effect on his brain action than he desires or has reason to expect.

It would, of course, be perfectly superfluous for me to enter into argument against the continuous and excessive use of alcohol. You have all of you seen, or will see, in the autopsy room its effects on the blood vessels, the kidneys and the liver. The number of lives that are ruined, and the poverty and distress brought upon whole households, by excessive indulgence in alcohol, are such common matters of record that they have unfortunately almost ceased to have any effect upon us.

Wireless Heat, Light and Power from the Business Sun.

The experiments of Mr. R. B. Garfield of Ansonia, Conn., like Poulsen, suggest a wider application of the principle of wireless telegraphy than has yet been made. Etheric waves, not unlike those utilized by Marconi for messages, can be utilized also, it is shown, to operate incandescent lamps and that, too, at considerable distances. If lamps can thus be made to glow at places far removed from the source of etheric vibrations, why may not power be similarly transmitted? And if power and light, why may not heat be sent without wire or other conductor? All that is needed, it seems, for this purpose is the generation at the starting point of vibrations of the ether of great frequency, and the presence at the receiving point of an apparatus contrived to take up the vibrations.

Poulsen, the Danish physicist, recently in London, showed how vibrations of enormous frequency readily light incandescent lamps brought within their reach, or fuse a copper ring. Persons in the lecture room where Poulsen made his demonstrations were unaware of the presence of the noiseless, invisible and continuous waves he was producing by his oscillating circuit, yet they were at the time being penetrated 1,000,000 times a second by his etheric waves. The lamps were more sensitive than the audience to the bombardment both were undergoing.

The experiment was suggestive. The sun is supposed to radiate not simply the etheric waves which we know as heat, light and actinic rays, but also rays comparable with the Marconi vibrations, or the more frequent Poulsen vibrations. These, reaching our atmosphere, produce it is said, the aurora borealis and other phenomena. It is not improbable that many meteorological phenomena, unintelligible by any theory that takes only air, moisture and the sun's heat into account, will ultimately be shown to owe their origin to obscure etheric impulses received from the God of Day. Particles are shot out also, it is said, by the radium in the sun, not to mention the fine dust, such as floats about comets and other heavenly bodies and is driven outward by the impact of the waves of sunlight.

The tails of comets are now thought to be composed of fine particles of their substance, which, when of a certain degree of fineness, are driven by the sun's light more than they are attracted by his mass. If, as some physicists contend, sunlight and heat are electric phenomena, our world is evidently affected in many different ways by electric impulses derived from the solar orb. Not only is everything about us penetrated and conditioned by invisible etheric waves direct and indirect, but our own bodies are constantly being shot through and through with minute missiles. We are composed of cells which may be resolved into molecules, the molecules into atoms, the atoms into electrons and the electrons into aggregations of ether. So small are the electrons that they are no more obstructed in passing through a human body than is a comet in traversing the solar system.

We are too coarsely constituted, it is held, to be appreciably affected by the movements of the infinitely fine particles which do the work of the universe. To them we are a gauzy, vaporous material, less substantial than a vanishing wisp of cloud, so that etheric forces traverse us without injury to us or loss of their own power. From the industrial and commercial point of view large consequences must result from a development of wireless heat, wireless light and wireless power. Where economy is not an object wonderful applications can be made.

A waterfall or coal mine in the wilds of West Virginia may conceivably be employed to serve, for example, the convenience of Baltimore, and not only Baltimore, but of all the region within the radius of Baltimore. No expensive copper conductor would be needed, but light, heat and power would come to us magically through the air, to the just and the unjust—to anyone who had the proper receiving apparatus. It was a gun could be fired from a distance or a torpedo propelled through the water. A hundred applications suggest themselves for a power which can be made to operate secretly and efficiently from a distance.

Schnapps Tobacco is Made ENTIRELY from Flue Cured Tobacco Grown in the Piedmont Country. The Imitation Brands Have Schnapps Quality Only On the Outside Of the Plug

Hundreds of imitation brands are on sale that look like Schnapps tobacco. The outside of the imitation plugs of tobacco is flue cured the same as Schnapps, but the inside is filled with cheap, flimsy, heavily sweetened air cured tobacco. One chew of Schnapps will satisfy tobacco hunger longer than two chews of such tobacco. The color, size and shape of the tags, plugs and packages of certain imitation brands of tobacco have been made so much like Schnapps that they have often been accepted by buyers under the belief that they were getting Schnapps. Sufficient proof has been secured to establish the fact that certain brands are infringements and in violation of the trade mark laws, yet the trade will continue to be imposed upon by these infringers until the suit already entered and now pending to protect Schnapps is decided. A great many of these imitations are claimed to be "just as good" as Schnapps, but there is only one genuine Schnapps. Be sure the letters on the tag, and stamped on the plug under the tag spell S-C-H-N-A-P-P-S and then you have it—the most wholesome tobacco produced, with just enough sweetening to preserve the mild, juicy, stimulating quality of the leaf tobacco. Expert tests prove that this flue cured tobacco, grown in the famous Piedmont region, requires and takes less sweetening than any other and has a wholesome, stimulating, satisfying effect on chewers.

If the tobacco you are chewing don't satisfy you more than the mere habit of expectorating, stop fooling yourself and chew Schnapps tobacco. Schnapps is like the tobacco chewers formerly bought costing from 75c. to $1.00 per pound; Schnapps is sold at 50c. per pound, in 5c. cuts, strictly 10c. and 15c. plugs.

THE COST OF MAINTAINING A

WILLIAMS TYPEWRITER

Read This From the Earthquake City:

5010 San Pablo Avenue,
Oakland, Cal., June 20, 1906.
"Our Williams was burned in the big fire. We have been using another machine, but want to get back to the Williams as soon as possible, so send us over a No. 6 as soon as received. Just before the Quake our old No. 4 Williams was printing pale and more ink didn't seem to help, and we thought we had a kick coming, when I discovered that we were still using the original pair of pads, bought with the machine four and a half years ago. A new pair put us all right again. Total cost for ink and repairs four and a half years, $1.00. So you see the Williams deserves all cost something to operate and maintain, viz: about 20c. a year." At least that is our experience.

JOHN J. RULTON CO.

A. F. Shattuck, Mgr.

"P. S. "And our machine is hard worked—averages about 50 letters per day." What we need can be equalled by no other typewriter on the market! You know that. And when you consider that during the whole time better work was secured than can be done by any other typewriter, you can not afford to have your work done on any other machine. We guarantee cost of maintenance to not exceed $1.00 a year."
