Problems of Dress

From the Dissector for April. Though one may be a very good seamstress the perfect knowledge of the latest styles and the latest fashions is always attractive, no matter how garbed, but even youth can not afford to gratify taste in colorings carelessly of individuality. The red-haired girl will not choose the shades of blue, blue, or blue, because the contrast will only intensify the red in the hair. The genuine blonde, however, and the fair brunette will prefer such shades as yellow, green, and purple. The yellow, however, will be the most effective tints to both the blonde and the brunette. These should be chosen in the form of tints, while the true brunette will be a beauty in blue, green, and purple. Half cuts and heavy tints will be the coming color for the coming year. The true blonde and green is the coming color for the coming year. The true blonde and green is the coming color for the coming year.

Taking Care of the Trust. From the Alexandria Gazette. In discussing editorially the outlook for the military peace and the reduction of military armaments in Europe, the New York Sun takes an optimistic view of the situation, believing that the understanding which now exists between the various governments of the Old World is such as to allow apprehension and to promise well for the discussion of the disarmament question at the coming Hague conference. But it is already known that the American delegates to the conference will oppose disarmament because the steel trust which supplies armor to the battle ships will be put out of business.

A COMMUNITY OF INTEREST. The Railroads and the People.

By W. W. Finley, President of Southern Railway System. It is a common saying that the railroad is the backbone of the South. It is true, but it is also true that the railroad is the lifeblood of the South. The railroad is the only means of transportation that can carry the products of the South to the markets of the world. It is the only means of transportation that can carry the people of the South to the markets of the world. The railroad is the only means of transportation that can carry the people of the South to the markets of the world.

The tremendous energy of the Southern people, awakened by the new social and commercial conditions, could never have been developed if circumscribed by local limitations or confined to local markets. The necessity and the demand of the new life of the South were for an opportunity to compete in commercial markets and supremacy, not in the markets of a state, but in the markets of the world. The opportunity could only be afforded by means of transportation that would admit them into these world markets under conditions of fair competition.

It is in the iron furnaces of the South to be established, transportation of their product was necessary, and it was necessary that the South should be able to reach the markets of the world. It is in the iron furnaces of the South to be established, transportation of their product was necessary, and it was necessary that the South should be able to reach the markets of the world.

Unless the prosperity of the country is to be retarded large sums should be expended for railway extension and betterments, and the funds needed must be obtained from private investors. In the early days of railway construction, when communities were vying with each other to secure roads, governmental aid in various forms was given by the nation, by the states and by municipalities. In almost every case, this policy was pursued to a greater or less extent, some of the states and cities going so far as to undertake the ownership and operation of railway lines.

The South's industrial development could not have proceeded so far as it has without the aid of the railway. In almost every case, this policy was pursued to a greater or less extent, some of the states and cities going so far as to undertake the ownership and operation of railway lines.

BUY US! WE WILL DO YOU GOOD.

He must have been familiar with Crawford comfort. Are you? The marked increase in the sale of Crawfords, we believe, is due entirely to the fact that our policy has been to embody in them only the best materials in leather and findings, and employ only the highest grade of skilled workmen. Doubtless you are familiar with the advance in cost of all the material which enter into the manufacture of footwear. In order to maintain the same high standard of quality but which we have established our reputation it has been necessary to advance the price of the shoes. The name Crawford is too valuable to be used on shoes of inferior grade. Therefore, UNDER NO CIRCUMSTANCES, WILL WE CHEAPER THE QUALITY OF OUR PRODUCT.

The many of our local agent appears below. In his behalf, we extend you a cordial invitation to visit his store and inspect his line of Crawfords. The Hub CLOTHIERS COHEN BROS., PROPRIETORS, 111 C. Building, Manassas, Va.
