

BURGLARS ON RAMPAGE JUBILEE A GREAT SUCCESS

Flash-light Reveals Their Presence in Dowell's Pharmacy—Other Burglaries.

Burglars were again on the rampage in Manassas, between the hour of midnight and day, yesterday morning.

The drug stores of W. F. Dowell and C. R. C. Johnson and the department store of Crigler & Camper were embraced in the tripple burglary.

Entrance to both the drug stores were effected by boring holes in the back doors and unlocking them. The entrance to the store of Crigler & Camper is shrouded in mystery. One theory is that the burglars concealed themselves in the store just before the same was closed the evening before, although one of the back windows showed evidence of having been forced by means of a chisel.

At Dowell's Pharmacy the burglars ransacked the desk and took from the cash drawer change to the amount of twenty-five cents. This, together with, possibly, a small kodak worth $2.50, constitutes Mr. Dowell's loss.

Dr. Johnson missed $6.00 from the cash drawer at his soda fountain and a small safe deposit box containing the savings account books of his children with the Bank of Orlando, Florida.

Mr. O. D. Waters, chief clerk in the store of Crigler & Camper, places the loss of his firm at $1.00 in change which had been left in the cash register after the previous days' sales had been made up and possibly a few socks and neckties. The office safe and desk were thoroughly ransacked and their entire contents of papers scattered upon the floor. These papers consisted of the firm's bills and receipts together with a few promissory notes. Many of the papers, so far as ascertained, have been missed.

Mr. Willie Tavenner, clerk in Dowell's Pharmacy, says that everything was intact when he entered the pharmacy at midnight to deliver medicine on an emergency call.

Robert Maloy, a barber on Centre street, says that he left his home a little after 3 o'clock and came up town. He was standing at Nash's corner, he says, when he saw a flash-light in Dowell's Pharmacy. Making his way stealthily to the window on Centre street, he peered through and saw two white men of small stature, wearing black derby hats, standing by the glass counter on the right-hand side of the main entrance. He hastened to the telegraph office and told the operator, Mr. Samuel Roszelle, of what he had seen. Mr. Roszelle, he says, told him to notify Sergeant Willcox, which he did after some little delay in finding his house.

When Sergeant Willcox and Maloy reached the scene of the burglary, the burglars had made good their escape.

Mr. Roszelle says that while Maloy was in quest of the sergeant, he saw two men, of the description given by Maloy, come from the alley in the rear of the M. I. C. building and hasten off in the direction of the freight depot.

It is evident that the three burglaries were committed by the same parties as the same size auger was used in effecting an entrance to both drug stores and the methods used in search of money were identical in each case. It is also apparent that money was the chief object of the burglary.

Says Chairman Round in an Interview With The Journal This Morning.

Lieut. George C. Round, being asked to-day to give THE JOURNAL his impression of the Great Jubilee, looking at it as a matter of past history, has given us the following:

The Jubilee impresses me as a great event; greater indeed than any one can now realize. I think we builded better than we knew. The best features, many of them, have never been written. I have made several attempts to write out my thanks to my neighbors and friends, but it all comes down to "Tiny Tim's" benediction, "God bless you, every one."

I can never forget how the members of the executive committee and the committee of one hundred gradually absorbed my own faith and enthusiasm which I must confess, alternately weakened and grew strong again. I shall especially remember the magnificent work of our women in the Great Picnic, the beautiful impression made by our girls in the historic tableau of a Reunited Republic, along with the six hundred veterans of the Great War; the Governor of the Commonwealth, and the President of the Nation.

I have been engaged for two weeks past in picking up "the twelve baskets of fragments" that nothing be lost. The Love Feast of the Blue and the Gray reminds me of the "four thousand men besides women and children." Everybody had enough and seemed to take their place spontaneously in the historical drama of which each one formed a part.

There were more people on the Henry Farm than on the days of old. Yet for every person actually present in body, there were ten thousand looking on who were made present by the historical and significant presence of the occasion.

Among hundreds of communications received from those who wanted to be here and could not, I wish THE JOURNAL would publish together six of the telegrams which fell into my hands as chairman of the Jubilee committee. Two of them represent the Gray, two represent the Blue and two the enthusiasm which only music and money could supply.

BULL RUN

July 21st, 1861-1911

From Leslie's Weekly—By Permission.

'Twas fifty years ago to-day
They met in strife, the blue and gray.
The cannon roared, the trumpets raved,
The tattered flags in blood were laid,
Red, red the trampled sod was steeped,
And War his gory harvest reaped,
Till crimson sank the summer sun,
And twilight dropped a veil upon
Bull Run.

On that historic spot again
Is heard the bugle's clear refrain.
Beneath one banner in review
Once more they meet, the gray and blue.
Above the buried cause they stand,
And clasp each other by the hand.
The sword is sheathed, the quarrel done,
All hail the battlefield, twice won—
Bull Run!

MINNA IRVING.

DR. QUARLES IN CHARGE PRETTY CHURCH WEDDING

Preaches Interesting Sermon in Baptist Church, Sunday—Arranges Ordination.

Dr. H. L. Quarles assumed charge of the Manassas Baptist church, Sunday morning, and preached to a large congregation from the 16th chapter of Hebrews and 25th verse: "Not to forsake the assembling of yourselves together."

Among the many interesting suggestions presented by Dr. Quarles, were the following: "There is a blessing in the public service that Christians do not get elsewhere because the public service is of divine appointment. There has been a great deal said about the 'Doubting Thomas' when the truth is we have no evidence to show that his faith was not equally as strong as the other ten for the reason that he was absent from the assembly when the Master appeared; so it is more proper to say 'Doubting Thomas' than 'Doubting Thomas'."

At the conclusion of the services there was a business session of the church to act upon the request of the Shenandoah Baptist church, on the Eastern shore of Virginia, that Rev. O. Grey Hutchinson be ordained. On motion Dr. Quarles was requested to arrange for the ordination, and the same has been arranged for Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, with the following program:

Charge to the church—Dr. H. L. Quarles.

Charge to the candidate—Rev. W. S. Cole.

Presentation of the Holy Scriptures—Dr. F. R. Boston.

Ordination prayer—Rev. V. M. Council.

In the evening at 8 o'clock, when Dr. Quarles arose to speak from the 4th chapter of Nehemiah and 6th verse: "For the people has a mind to work," the church was crowded to its utmost capacity. The closest attention of the immense audience was observed as it followed the noted divine in his forceful exposition of the scriptures, and clearly defined the duties incumbent upon church membership.

Preceding the sermon, the Manassas clergy gave Dr. Quarles a hearty welcome in the following program:

Prayer by Rev. J. K. Efrid, pastor of Bethel Evangelical church.

Reading of the scriptures by Rev. P. A. Arthur, rector of Trinity Episcopal church.

Address of welcome by Rev. Chas. L. DeLong, pastor of Grace M. E. Church, South.

Followed by prayer by Rev. J. E.

SAYS STORY IS NOT TRUE THE GOOD ROADS TRAIN

J. Barbour Thompson Brands "Yellow Dog" Fund Story as Absolutely False.

Met by Large Number of Representative Citizens—Organize Good Roads League.

New York, Aug. 5.—After a pleasant trip abroad, J. S. B. Thompson, of Atlanta, Ga., with his wife and Miss Eliza B. Thompson, again is in America; having arrived aboard the Lusitania. The sturdy Virginian, for such he is, with hair now gray, smiled as he greeted the Times-Dispatch correspondent, but when the report of the correspondent's mission dawned upon him, his veins, through which courses Southern blood, stood out like whipcords, and it was with difficulty that he retained his composure. He was shown recent publications that attributed to him the handling of a "yellow dog" fund some years ago in Virginia. His face, tanned by a sea voyage and ten weeks sojourn in England, Scotland and France, was truly a study. Flushed with indignation and with bosom swelling with repressed wrath, Mr. Thompson slowly read the articles now being printed in the campaign of Congressman William A. Jones against Senator Thomas S. Martin.

When he had finished Mr. Thompson paused as if to catch his breath, and then, looking at the correspondent, began: "I am not a citizen of Virginia now, and prefer not to be brought into this matter. On the face of these letters, which are construed as having reference to a 'yellow dog' fund, I will say that the state legislature thrashed this matter out. I was a witness before its committee, and its report and the legislature's action is a matter of record."

"This question was settled then. There was no 'yellow dog' or corruption fund, as is charged. As a matter of course, I did solicit and contribute to the campaign fund, and so far as I know, every dollar was spent legitimately and with the knowledge of the campaign committee. I glory in being able to say this. There was no corruption of which I was aware."

"I am charged with having conducted this 'yellow dog' fund in 1891. At that time the late Senator Harbour, my uncle, was in the Senate, and Martin's campaign was not even thought of. In 1890 the legislature, composed of young Virginians, elected Mr. Martin, after the death of my uncle."

"The letters about which you ask purport to have been written in 1891, now twenty years ago, and, of course, I have no independent memory of them. I have no reason to suppose, however, that I did not write them. If they are copies, as I understand they are said to be, they were stolen from my letter files."

"After this long lapse of years, it is impossible for me to recall in detail all the circumstances in which the letters were pointed out the great disassociation of property along roads, constructed public highways and the enormous blacksmith tax bills paid annually in consequence of such highway. It showed that by proper construction and maintenance of the highways the cost of manufacturing products would be correspondingly reduced and the profits thereof correspondingly increased."

"Bad roads," said Mr. Boykin, "is largely responsible for the backward education in certain sections of the country, and it has been shown that over one hundred children, during the past year, have been killed by following the railroad tracks to

The Good Roads Train operated by the Southern and The Thompson, of Atlanta, Ga., with Danville and Western Railway Companies in connection with the office of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture, arrived here on Monday, and at the hour appointed, 2 o'clock p. m., was met by over a hundred representative farmers and business men of Prince William county. One of the two coaches was reserved for working models of improved road-building machinery run by electricity, and formulas for different kinds of road building were prominently displayed. On one of the sidewalls of this coach were displayed large photos showing the condition of roads in different sections of the country before and after improvement through modern methods.

The other coach was used for stenographic lectures and practical instructions for building good roads. Mr. W. J. Hurlbert, agent of the Land and Industrial Department of the Southern Railway Company, the first speaker, explained that the object in running this train was to give practical instructions in the building and maintenance of improved roads, with the view of inducing their construction and saving millions of dollars annually to the farmers in the movement of their crops to the railway stations. In addition to this he explained that better roads meant better schools and greater attendance; better health and quicker medical attention; better farms and more cultivated land; better economic conditions and more producers; better social conditions and less isolation; and better church attendance and better citizens.

Mr. Hurlbert was followed by Mr. L. E. Boykin in an interesting address on the advantages to be derived from good roads and the disadvantages consequent upon bad ones. He was assisted in his lecture by stereopticon representations of good and bad roads, thrown upon the canvas by Mr. H. S. Fairbanks.

Mr. Boykin said that since starting out in March the Good Roads train had traveled a distance of 5,000 miles covering the states of Mississippi, Tennessee, North Carolina and parts of Alabama and Georgia, and was now touring Virginia. After covering their tour of Georgia and cover the states of South Carolina and Florida. He drew vivid pictures of the bad roads they had encountered in their travels and of the tremendous expense and great discomfort these roads are imposing upon the communities in which they are located. He pointed out the great disassociation of property along roads, constructed public highways and the enormous blacksmith tax bills paid annually in consequence of such highway. It showed that by proper construction and maintenance of the highways the cost of manufacturing products would be correspondingly reduced and the profits thereof correspondingly increased.

"Bad roads," said Mr. Boykin, "is largely responsible for the backward education in certain sections of the country, and it has been shown that over one hundred children, during the past year, have been killed by following the railroad tracks to resurrect a corpse, but we want a real live organization and I am now ready to take a vote as to whether such an organization for Prince William county is desirable.

SAYS STORY IS NOT TRUE

Democratic candidate without the knowledge or authority of the chairman, it has entirely escaped me.

The letters, in so far as they relate to money, have reference to the campaign funds contributed by the railroads or by their owners and by men of means generally to the Democratic party of the state.

Under these circumstances appeals were made to the railroads and others capable of contributing to help sustain the Democratic party and Anglo-Saxon civilization, and the plea was presented that from the Democratic party alone could law and order and just treatment of the property interests be expected.

My dear friends, I feel great reluctance about making any statement in reference to a political campaign in Virginia.
