INCUMBENT SENATORS WIN

The Democratic voters of Virginia placed their emphatic seal of approval yesterday upon the records of Senators Thos. S. Martin and Claude A. Swanson by a majority approximating 35,000. Prince William county which heretofore has failed to record an approval vote of these candidates spoke in no uncertain terms, of approval when the returns last night showed 411 votes for Martin, 437 for Swanson, 161 for Jones and 126 for Glass. Four precincts, viz., Brentsville, Hoadey, Hortons and Tokens are yet to be heard from. These four precincts will increase the majorities of Martin and Swanson beyond the seadow of doubt. It is estimated that only about one-half the registered Democratic vote of the county was polled, though it is thought that approximately the full vote for Jones and Glass was cast. The full returns by precincts will appear in the next issue of THE JOURNAL.

Valuable Information Given Manufacturers at Banquet in Worcester, Mass., Friday. Mr. E. A. Brand, of Manassas, who is connected with the Bureau of Manufacturers of the United States Department of Commerce and Labor, was given a grand ovation by the board of trade of Worcester, Mass., at a banquet in the State Mutual restaurant in that city last Friday afternoon.

Mr. Brand, in a position where he will know as much about the foreign market and be able to sell his goods there just as surely as he has been able in past years to develop the home market.

Mr. Brand's talk was as follows: "The annual value of the products of our mill now aggregates $20,000,000,000, as compared with $15,000,000,000 five years ago, and a little less than $10,000,000,000 only 20 years ago. These figures clearly indicate the great strides we are making in industrial activity."

"Until within the last few years many of our manufacturers had been occupied fully in furnishing supplies for the domestic market, so that little consideration was given to the trade opportunities that are offered to them in markets beyond seas. It would seem that we now have reached a point where our ability to produce is greater than our ability to consume, and if we are to continue to extend our industrial activity, foreign outlets must be sought for a portion of our manufactured products."

"In the old days, when competition was less keen, our manufacturers and traders could sit in their offices and business came to them. How many to-day can wait for business to come to them? No matter how superior may be our products, their merits must be made known. We can not expect to get our share of the world's trade unless we go after it."

"Many foreign fields are open to us, and may be dominated by American manufacturers and merchants, if they will but exploit them with the same energy and zeal that have brought them success in the home market."

"No more is required by the foreign merchant than by the American business man. He simply wants to know what he is buying. Some of our manufacturers think that failure to sell products in European markets means failure to sell everywhere. They seem to forget that vast territory south of us and those great stretches of country included in the Levant and the far East."

"In these sections a great commercial awakening now is taking place, which means the building of highways and electric and steam railways, and the erecting and equipping of machine shops, power plants, water systems and other works of construction, the machinery and equipments for all of which must be drawn from countries able to produce them."

"In interviews which I have had with manufacturers I have emphasized the point that they must go to foreign markets with the intention of remaining in them; that a good foreign business might mean the full occupation of their mills in periods of business depression in the country."

"To invade successfully and remain in foreign markets, a study must be made of existing conditions. The tastes, prejudices and peculiarities of foreign peoples must be given recognition. In other words, we must make goods that will meet the requirements of the foreign buyer. In former years many of our manufacturers who desired to sell their products abroad found it difficult to secure information that would enable them

HINTS ON GRASS CULTURE

Valuable Information Given Out by Virginia Experiment Station on Hay Crop. This year, when farmers all over the state are mourning the shortage of the hay crop caused by the unprecedented drought, the value of hay is more keenly appreciated than ever before.

The culture of grass is one of the most important subjects in Virginia agriculture, because grass is the foundation of successful live stock farming, and the keeping of live stock is the most economical means of maintaining the fertility of the farm. A timely bulletin just issued by the Virginia Experiment Station gives the following figures which show how much more rapidly farms become depleted of fertility when the crops are sold than when the crops are fed to stock, and the product of the stock is sold:

30 bu. of corn, with stover, remove $9.80 worth of plant food. 1,000 lbs. of leaf tobacco remove $7.70 worth of plant food. A 1,000 lb. steer removes $4.50 worth of plant food. 500 lbs. of butter take only 18 cents worth of plant food from the farm.

The cultivation of hay has not received the attention in Virginia that it deserves. In 1910 there were 475,000 acres of hay in Virginia, producing 665,000 tons, worth $8,192,000 at the farm. This acreage and the average yield per acre, should both be doubled in the next ten years.

It is a common notion that the eastern part of Virginia is not a "grass country." This is a mistake. In nearly all of Virginia east of the Blue Ridge, and including most of Tidewater, very satisfactory yields of grass can be secured. The bulletin records a yield of 5.06 tons per acre on the experiment plots at Appomattox, in 1907; and yields of from 1 1/2 to 3 tons were easily secured other years there and in other parts of Piedmont Virginia.

The bulletin says: "Western hay is being shipped into many counties of Virginia which are well adapted for grass culture. Tobacco farmers are now paying $30 a ton for hay that could be raised on their own farms for $8.00 or less. It is our conservative judgment that the growing of more grass, especially in the tobacco districts, and the keeping of more live stock which this would involve, would do more to enrich Virginia agriculture than any other factor."

The bulletin reports the results of several years' experiments with grass at Blacksburg and other parts of the state, and gives practical details in growing, curing and storing hay. Mixtures of grasses for different kinds of soils are given. It is recommended that grass be seeded in August or September instead of in the spring, and without a nurse crop of grain. Experiments at several places indicate that when manure is not available, acid phosphates and nitrate of soda are among the most profitable fertilizers for grass; about 400 lbs. of the phosphate at the time of seeding, and a top dressing of 100 to 200 lbs. of the nitrate early the following spring. Potash has not paid on grass. The experiments show that it usually pays to lime land before seeding to grass. The statement is made that Virginia farmers lose many thousands of dollars every year by stacking hay out of doors, the loss from weather being from 20 to 30 per cent. It should all go under cover.

This bulletin (No. 135 - Grass Culture), by T. B. Hutcheson, can be obtained free on application to the Virginia Experiment Station, Blacksburg, Va.
