The Percheron was first introduced into America about fifty years, ago, and it seems to be growing in favor. The breed is known for its characteristic gray color. However, black is coming into favor as a color, and the bays, roans and chestnuts may be found. The Percheron is a massive, heavily muscled animal, from 18 to 17.2 hands high, weighing usually from 1800 to 2.200 bounds. The Fercheron has good action, although it is said that the stride, is not so showy nor quits so active as that of the Clydesdale.
