ALFALFA

Alfalfa should be grown on every farm. Make a beginning—start now.

ALFALFA ENRICHES THE LAND

Produces More Abundant Harvests Alfalfa Adds Plant Food to the Soil for the Use of Other Crops.

Alfalfa enriches the soil. The roots of the alfalfa plant penetrate 12" to 18" into the soil—far beyond the shallow rooting plants. In this way potash, phosphorus and other elements of plant food are drawn from below through the roots of the alfalfa plant and stored in the soil for the use of other crops. An experiment set forth in the accompanying chart was made in Canada where it was found that alfalfa yielded 61.5 bushels of wheat, per acre, as compared with 42 bushels on a timothy sod. Barley yielded 30 bushels per acre on alfalfa sod, and only 20 bushels on a timothy sod. Canada is not a corn country, yet the experiments show similar results. Alfalfa sod yielded 18 bushels of corn, as compared with 18 bushels on timothy sod. It is only one of many such experiments which give the same results, showing alfalfa to be a soil enriching

ALFALFA MOST VALUABLE CROP.

More Valued Five Times More Than Clover—Some Wisconsin Census Figures Which Talk for Themselves.

According to the 1910 census of the crop, the state of Wisconsin grew 1,000,000 acres of alfalfa, which averaged $31.00 per acre for the entire state. The average acre value of the alfalfa was $31.00. During the same period the combined acreage of timothy and clover averaged 1.6 tons per acre, valued at $14.00. It costs no more to grow an acre of alfalfa than it does to grow an acre of timothy or clover. The average cost of growing an acre of alfalfa is approximately $14.00. Thus the farmer would clear $17.00 per acre in growing these crops, as if he grew alfalfa he would get a profit of $21.00 per acre, or

ALFALFA RICH IN PROTEIN

12.5 Per Cent. of Digestible Protein, Alfalfa Surpasses Even Sweet Bran in Feeding Value.

Alfalfa has high feeding value, as shown by the chart below, taken from California Bul. No. 123. This is the highest digestibility and its composition is rich in digestible protein, which is the bone and muscle forming element. It is also rich in nithe component of protein, which is the costly food element. It is absolutely necessary for the proper growth and for young growth. All animals must have trace amounts of food as well as fat producing material. Alfalfa makes a perfectly balanced ration, supplying the animal with an abundance of bone, flesh and

SPIRITUALISM AS A SCIENCE

Noted Writer Explains Why in His Opinion the Growing Cult Should Be So Considered.

I call spiritualism a science, for it professes to yield its results by experiments which could be repeated, tested and compared on the accepted laws of evidence; to attain "a world of spirit that took shape and form and practical intelligibility, in ordinary rooms and under very nearly ordinary circumstances." It said: "Seeing is believing, handling is proof." It did not require you to take the medium on trust. It had no priesthood, no dogmas; for its central statement, that the living could have intercourse with the dead, was not a truth to be received on the word of another, but a challenge which whoso would might verify. Moreover, though some have questioned if the name of religion can rightly be attached to spiritualism, it does without doubt bring its adepts back from doctrines of the lecture room or abstract theory to that primitive condition of thought in which religion finds a main beginning. For religion is the problem of the "next world," call it how you will. And spiritualism undertakes to solve the problem by the scientific method, exactly as the chemist answers our inquiry—for instance: "Does radium exist?"—by putting a sample of the thing sought into our hands. Neither the chemist nor the medium is a priest, any more than the class or the inquirer can be termed disciples. Experiment, in both cases, remains the ground of affirmation. William Barry, in Atlantic.

SILLY IDEA THAT DIES HARD

Average Man, in Throes of Discontent, Finds Solace in the Phrase, "Pass a Law."

In the course of an interesting discussion in the department called "The Interpreter's House," in the American Magazine, appears the following: "When something happens that we do not like, what is the first thing we say? 'There ought to be a law against it.' Every time! That is the unconscious tribute we all pay to the queerest, the most naive and stupid superstition in a world where all superstition dies hard enough—that all you need to do to stop anything is to pass a law against it. "No amount of experience, apparently, will free the minds of men from the incubus, the hoodoo, of this extraordinary superstition. No matter what the issue! If you want to stop gambling, spitting, combinations of capital or of labor, prostitution, college fraternities, the high cost of living, arson, saloons, monopoly in restraint of trade, the turkey trot, burglary, tips, walking on the grass—whatever it is, there is only one thing to do—pass a law against it. Then, everybody will be contented; everybody will believe that the offense will come at once, or at least as soon as you have gotten a sufficient number of people in jail. Only get enough laws passed, and, above all, if you can only get enough people in jail, you have realized the average man's millennial hopes."

No Standardized Dress

It is a pleasure to stamp disapproval on the praise of Prof. Walter Sargent of Chicago for the Chinese custom of "one established style of dress for women." Life might be cheaper under such a dull gray provision of costume. But it would certainly not be worth living. The whole trouble with costumes today is that they are too much alike. Instead of designing a dress that is becoming to her own dimensions, proportions and other endowments of nature, the average woman accepts the fashion of the hour, whatever it may be—large sleeves, small hips, no waist or whatever the fashion gods decree. What is needed is not mere standardization, but more individuality in dress. A declaration of independence is the crying feminine need of the hour—not a uniform designed by any board of economists. New York Tribune.

Ghost of Fragrance

That is a curious story told in the London Spectator, of the ghosts of violet seen and smelt in the Protestant cemetery in Rome. A scent ghost was recently referred to in connection with the militants, a strange association! They destroyed, in a certain Welsh town, a venerable tree under which the dead body of a woman was once found, and in the dead hand was clasped a bunch of wild thyme. No body knew the woman, and there was no wild thyme near. Yet, afterwards, the scent of wild thyme (a strong and unmistakable scent) was often noticed at that spot. Now that the tree—the setting of the tragedy—has been destroyed, will the scent still haunt the place? That is the question that the people of the town are asking.

Economy in High Places

Mr. Bryan's lunch basket habit reminds the London Chronicle of similar instances in English history. In the early eighteenth century a wave of economy flooded Britain's civil service. The commissioners of customs, about 1723, were filled with ideas of economical reforms. They restricted their staff to so many reams of paper and a certain number of pens a year. And more—they put their own house in order. They issued a self-denying ordinance to the effect that they would in future buy their own breakfast coffee, pay their own coach hire and purchase their own books and pamphlets—except the "Book of Rates."

This for "East Lynne."

A few evenings ago that worm eaten drama, "East Lynne," was presented in Rockville, by a touring repertoire company. In the village paper the following day the dramatic critic wrote as follows: "East Lynne" is a rotten play, built around a woman possessed of all lovable qualities except wisdom, a bunch of men so painfully good as to make any normal man weary and capable of performing cruelties that would make a savage ashamed of himself. The only admirable man in the play is the villain; he's so cursed human. It's a rotten play, full of weeps and false ideas."

Novel Shoe Handle

Shoe horns with yard-long handles are a novelty which all women will welcome, as by their aid footgear may be adjusted without having to bend the back and run the risk of breaking the corset steels, says the Philadelphia Times. The round handles of stender walking stick circumference come in polished washstone or golden oak, and the horns in silver, gold plate or in nickel.

Complications in Answer

"Johnny, dear," said the visitor. John McTurk turned around while the family cat rescued her tail from his greedy paw. "Now that you are going to school," continued the visitor, "I want to ask you a little question. How many marbles would you get if I gave you twenty to be divided between you and Andrew MacDonald?"

Katherine's Kindness

Katherine is two and a half years old. Her father came home one afternoon, after working three days and three nights at high pressure, with almost no sleep. He lay down with the feeling that he did not want to wake up for a week. Half an hour later, from the depths of his dreams, he heard a small, clear voice: "Father!" The sleeper stirred and turned his head on the pillow. "Father! Father!" He stirred and moaned. "Father! Father!" He struggled and resisted and floundered, and finally raised his eyelids like a man lifting heavy weights. He saw Katherine smiling divinely beside his couch. "Father! Father!" "What is it, daughter?" "Father, are you having a nice nap?"—Youth's Companion.

It Brings Them Down

Courtlind Field Bishop, who is an expert in airmanship in all its branches, united at a dinner in Lenox over Grahame White's contemplated trans-Atlantic flight by hydro-aeroplane.

The more discussion of such a flight

he said, "makes the young lady's joke about 'ging seem true and serious.' "I can't understand the attraction of flying, an elderly man said to this young lady. "She answered, smiling demurely: "Don't you think it must be the attraction of gravitation?"

Did He Get It?

Won't you tell a nice little story for the lady?" asked a fond mother of her four-year-old boy whom she was showing off to her guest. "I don't know a 'tory,' blipped the youngster, bashfully. "Oh, you do," pleaded his mother. "Just a little story." "Will you div' me a kiss?" The boy's eyes brightened. "Yes, a nice kiss for a nice little story."

All right, once upon a time there was a "harmful nice big face in the parlor an' I just broke it. Do I get the kiss, mamma?"

Mother of Eighteen Children

"I am the mother of eighteen children and have the praise of doing more work than any young woman in my town," writes Mrs. C. J. Martin, of Boone Hill, Va. "I suffered for five years with stomach trouble and could not eat as much as a biscuit without suffering. I have taken three bottles of Chamberlain's Tablets and am now a well woman and weigh 168 pounds. I can eat anything I want to and as much as I want and feel better than I have at any time in ten years. I refer to any one in Boone Hill or vicinity and they will vouch for what I say." It Always Helps says Mrs. Sylvania Woods, of Clifton Mills, Ky., in writing of her experience with Cardui, the woman's tonic. She says further: "Before I began to use Cardui, my back and head would hurt so bad, I thought the pain would kill me. I was hardly able to do any of my housework. After taking three bottles of Cardui, I began to feel like a new woman. I soon gained 35 pounds, and now, I do all my housework, as well as run a big water mill. I wish every suffering woman would give

Rev. and Mrs. W. K. Pendleton and family spent a short while with Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Chapman enroute to a visit to Wytheville, and from there will go to Spartansburg, N. C.

M. P. O'Callaghan, of Athens, Ga., arrived in Manassas this week to return to Georgia with Mrs. O'Callaghan and children, who have been spending the summer in their cottage near town.

Some of the best photographs that have been seen here were finished by our local photographer, C. A. Harmon. It is interior work and is of the very best that could possibly be done.

Mrs. Frank T. Israel, of Fairfax, will be one of the speakers at the Manassas District S. S. convention to be held in the Presbyterian Church here on Friday, Sept. 12, her subject being "The organized class and its relation to the Sunday School work." Mrs. Israel is a very intelligent speaker and knows her subject well.

On account of the Sunday School Conference to be held in the Presbyterian Church Friday afternoon, there will be no meeting of the W. C. T. U. this week, but on Friday of next week there will be a business meeting at which all members are urged to be present, as it is the time to elect the delegates to the State Convention and also time for the election of officers.

The Manassas High School will open next Monday, September 15, and begin the fall term. It is expected that the attendance will be increased and the school will be larger than last year. The graded schools both here and in Prince William county will not begin until the 29th of this month. It was at first decided to open the Manassas schools on the 22nd of this month, but at a recent meeting of the School Board it was changed to the 29th of this month.

William Lynch, of Manassas, who is employed by the Southern Railway, was painfully injured last Saturday morning about ten o'clock, in the Southern yards, at Alexandria. Mr. Lynch was standing near an engine when the fire hook fell from the tender and struck him in the lower part of the stomach. He was removed to the hospital in Alexandria and Sunday afternoon was brought to Manassas on the five o'clock train. He was taken to his home where he received medical attention. He was confined to his bed for a few days but is now able to walk with the aid of a cane.

A VISIT TO OCCOQUAN

Bertha Riston and Annie of Alexandria, spent a day in the village of Occoquan Sunday as the guests of Florence Woodyard. Young ladies were escorted to various places of interest around the village by Samuel N. Carter, Jack and Fred Woodyard. Delight was experienced in the picturesque village, old, peacefully nesting hills, overgrown with trees and foliage, interspersed by the wondrously beautiful Occoquan River. There were unmistakable marks of Indian origin, centuries old, veiling in interest with the eye. Ancient brick mansions, some of which were the former homes of departed ancestors, still remain in this village, were viewed with interest: the home of late Mrs. Edith Janney, the head of the Occoquan, which was the former home of the good and pious Samuel Janney, who was closely associated with the village. This has in recent years been the Hotel Alton. Present hotel, where the were entertained so delightfully at dinner was the former Tavern of by gone years, since Gen. Daniel Woodyard iron ore from his Rochester nearby to the forge of this place, shared with the old iron forge. The village for more scenes the tourist and way toward the Occoquan enjoyed to its fullest. Scenery of jagged deep caverns, dancing clear lake and Lovers performing the time custom of mounting Leap the tourists enjoy-ful luncheon on the flat rock followed by de- boating on the river, which they departed for all pleased with Occoquan plenty well pleased with gallantry.
