FRIENDSHIP'S PRAYER.

Somehow thus, I think, however, re-announced that young maiden clever.

As for words in tones pathetic, and with silver earnestness—
"Kind Sir, if I could pardon me, in friendship I would ask of thee, what might thy hopes and prospects be when thou shalt hence have passed away?"

It is a world, and still night, when stars and full moon above so bright, and so sweet their soft and radiant light as if they were some in days of yore.

And I do not to the Church belong, yet have though you may think it wrong—
Predestination's doctrine strong, which doth from truth the veil remove.

And while with God so pure and just, I'm reconciled my fate to trust, I'd hope not those who think yet must by works attain salvation's way.
