WIT AND HUMOR.

"I hope you will be a better boy for the future," said the old lady.

"Yes'm," sobbed the boy, "I think you will see next time he speaks to you."

"Yes'm," she sobbed, "I feel as if I should be better off if I were dead."

"No, ma'm, mostly in my big sister, for I'll be a better boy for the future."

"I don't care," said the boy, "I'll be a better boy for the future."

"O, my friends, there are some spectacles that a person never expects to see."

"I'd like to know why you're so sure of that?"

"So you're tired of my wife?"

"You think I'm becoming out of my mind?"

"Maybe you wouldn't mind me looking up in an ass?"

"I reckon I might have a minute or so, if you'd like."

"You would, would you?"

"I'd like to see you try to do it."

HE WAS GREATLY MISTAKEN.

A Maryland Chemist Reasoned Without His Head.

I live in the midst of the malarial districts of Maryland, near the city of Washington, and am exposed to all the dangerous influences of the impure air and water of that region.

Being naturally of a strong constitution, I had frequently boasted that no chills and fever or other malarious complaint would ever trouble me.

This was my experience and the condition in which I found myself six months ago. I first noticed that I did not feel so sprightly and vigorous as was my wont to do.

Soon I noticed a distinct and distressing back ache would make its appearance in the afternoon, increasing in severity if the exercise was more than usually violent.

Then a stretchy feeling with profuse gaping made its appearance. Then my head, always clear as a bell, would feel heavy

The cold stage was marked with chattering of the teeth, severe rigors passed over me, and no amount of clothing could keep me warm.

The chill was succeeded in turn by the fever, in which I seemed to be burning up, the congestion in my head produced a violent pain in the frontal portion and a heat and sensation of the eyelids, with an indescribable aching of the lower limbs.

Nausea and vomiting occurred with severe retchings, and when the paroxysms passed off I was thoroughly prostrated by a weakness that was felt in every part of me.

I drugged myself with quinine, and obtained some relief. But my respite was of brief duration.

I was now so much debilitated that I could hardly walk or stand upright. My disease soon culminated in a continued malarial fever which kept me closely confined for about a week.

I became exceedingly depressed and melancholy, so much so that I lost interest in my work, and, indeed, scarcely cared what happened to me.

During all this time, it must be understood that I did not neglect medical treatment. All the most powerful remedies were tried, such as liquid arsenate of potash, valerianate of iron, mercury, bromide of potassium, chloride of bismuth, chinoline, chinchonidia, quinine and several others.

All this I did under the advice of eminent physicians.

It was while I was in this deplorable condition that the claims made for Kaskine, the new quinine, as a specific for malaria, were first brought to my attention.

I knew nothing of its value to justify my having any confidence in it, but as everything else had failed I deemed it my duty to try it, so I began its use, and its prompt and radical effects were of the nature of a revelation to me.

Many people may think the statement scarcely credible, but it is a fact that after only a few days' use of Kaskine all the leading symptoms in my case were decidedly abated or ceased altogether; and in a few weeks from the time I took the first dose I was cured.

This was about the first of January, and since then I have experienced no recurrence of the malarial symptoms in any form.

A remedy of such exceptional virtue for the cure of malaria ought to be commended and universally made known.

I have therefore urged it upon the attention of my friends, several of whom have used it with like good results in every case, and it is with the greatest pleasure and sincerity that I commend Kaskine to sufferers from malaria everywhere.

Respectfully yours, J. D. HIRD, R. A.

P. S.—Should any one wish to address me as to the genuineness of the above letter, I will cheerfully respond.

Other letters of a similar character from prominent individuals, which stamp Kaskine as a remedy of an undoubted merit, will be sent on application. Price $1.00, or six bottles, $5.00. Sold by Druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of price.
