SOME BATTLEFIELD PARK THOUGHTS.

It is something for Prince William people to be thankful for, that the weather last Thursday was auspicious and that the inaugural exercises of the Manassas Confederate Battlefield Park movement were so well attended. Let it be hoped that the dedicatory exercises of the proposed park will be made possible for the near future, by generous contributions from sons and daughters of the Southland.

Just how well Prince William people are going to contribute to this movement has not been made manifest yet. It would seem that all would want to help in bringing this movement to speedy consummation, and would show by subscribing liberally that, as citizens of the county in which the First and Second Manassas were fought, they claim the privilege of helping, in a substantial way, to "put over" the park movement.

While this subject is receiving special attention, would it be inopportune to suggest that arrangements be made (by securing sufficient extra money as an endowment fund, or in some other way) that no admission fee be charged to the park when it becomes a reality?

It is true that there is always an element of upkeep expense attached to a project of this sort, but it should not cost the general public anything in the way of an admission fee to visit the Nation's shrines and the Manassas battlefields certainly fall in this category. As many recall, there is much protest against the present charging of admission to Mount Vernon, the home of George Washington, and it seems likely that this will soon be a thing of the past. Should not the Manassas Confederate Battlefield Park be put on this high plane at the start?

Readers of the NEWS will no doubt be interested in the following editorial, which appeared in the Washington Post of Saturday's date, under the heading, "A Patriotic Shrine."

"The brave men who lost their lives on the battlefield of Manassas are to be honored with a memorial. It will be dedicated to the heroes of the North as well as the South, and will be a fitting tribute to those who fell in the Bull Run engagements. While a Confederate association will have charge of the memorial, there is to be nothing sectional in its policy or scope. Blue as well as Gray will be honored in what is planned to be one of the most significant memorials in Washington's vicinity.

"Sufficient funds have been raised already to make a start on the project. More money will have to be subscribed, but there is no doubt this will be forthcoming soon. The South itself is ready to raise all the money needed, yet there may be many big contributions from the North. Evidence of this was shown in the recent contribution of $10,000 from a Bostonian, who is a relative of a former Confederate general.

"The days of sectionalism have passed, a fact of which the Manassas memorial park movement is a striking example. The North and South, united on everything now that affects us as a nation, will unite on this project, too, and bring it to a successful consummation. Thus will honor be paid to the fallen heroes, not of one section and by one section of the country, but to North and South alike, and by the whole nation. The Manassas memorial as a tribute to valor will become one of our great patriotic shrines."

WHY NOT MORE ROAD WORK LIKE THIS?

Those who motored over the road from Manassas to the Henry House Thursday of last week must have noticed the road improvements that had been made the fore part of the week, under the urge and with the assistance of C. J. Meetze. With no stupendous amount of work and at no great expense, the road from town to the Stone House was put in much better shape.

Approaches to bridges, where the roadway connects with them, were graded; a very bad rut about half the way out from town was filled over so that automobiles can now pass comfortably; at least one bridge was repaired, and the numerous gulleys formerly found running lengthwise of the road just before reaching the battlefield, were nearly eliminated.

Why not more road work like this in Prince William? Why could not this road have been fixed like this several months ago instead of just last week? The point I am driving at is this: There is a great deal that can be done in the way of improving our roads, even where there is no state money available. Instead of occasionally scraping the roads mile after mile, regardless of the places that may already be in fairly good shape, why not put what money the county has to spend on roads in fixing up the spots that really are a menace to traffic and a disgrace to our old county of Prince William?

It looks to me as though it were more a matter of viewpoint than anything else—whether we aim to first fix up the bad places and fix them right, or whether we are to go along and spread the money out thinly over good and bad places, not improving the good places much and practically throwing the money away as far as the bad places are concerned.

NOS IMMORTAL.

Perhaps we go with wind and cloud and sun, Into the free companionship of air; Perhaps with sunsets when the day is done, All's one to me—I do not greatly care; So long as there are brown hills—and a tree Like a mad prophet in a land of death— And I can lie and hear eternally The vast monotonous breathing of the earth. I have known hours, slow and golden-glowing, Lovely with laughter and suffused with light, O Lord in such a time appoint my going; When the hands clench and the cold face grows white, And the sparks die within the feeble brain, Spilling its star-dust back to dust again.

PARK IS ASSURED

who as past commander of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, in his address book to talk Josephus Daniels and Newell D. Baker, former secretaries of the navy and army, respectively, charging them with gross injustice and infidelity to the South for permitting the South to be eliminated entirely from the Arlington amphitheater. And continuing, Mr. Owens said, in part, as follows:

"The immortal words uttered by Abraham Lincoln on the field of Gettysburg are equally applicable to Manassas and this inaugural occasion. His words would be fitting on any field where brave men have offered their lives for a great principle. They would apply to any country and any period. Lincoln said, 'We cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here have dedicated it far beyond our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note or long remember what we say here, but it will never forget what they did here.'

"The Manassas battlefield park will be located on the Lee highway, a great boulevard that is named for the chief of the South, and will be brought in close proximity to the Federal capital. As Manassas is only about 30 miles from Washington, it is certain that it will become one of the historic spots adjacent to the national capital that will be visited annually by thousands of visitors and tourists. It will become a patriotic shrine and will be sectional only in initiation and control, as it will pay honor to the gallant soldiers of both armies who fought on this field.

"There are those who refer to Gettysburg as the Waterloo of the Confederacy. The South, however, will be able to point to her 'Austerlitz,' her Manassas. General Winfield Scott, when asked for an explanation of the defeat of the Union army on this field, that became an utter rout, exclaimed that the men who opposed the Union army at Manassas were the men who followed him into the city of Mexico."

Senator John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, gave the project his hearty approval and expressed the conviction that the Southland would bring this movement to a speedy consummation.

Moore Sends His Regards.

Hon. R. Walton Moore, vice-chairman of the park's finance board, who had expected to be present Thursday, wrote Major Ewing as follows:

"Dear Major: I am writing to say how deeply I regret not being able to attend the meeting that was to be held at the Manassas battlefield Thursday. Unfortunately for me, that day has been assigned for the disposition of the pending tariff bill, and it is necessary for me to be here when the votes are taken. Thus, I am deprived of the opportunity of participating in what, I am sure will be an occasion of very great interest in every way.

"The effort to convert the historic battlefield into a park meets with my unreserved approval, and I hope will have very vigorous local and general support. I will gladly do whatever I can to further the project, which, I deem to be, should enlist the sympathy, not only of the Southern people, but of people everywhere, since the memory of the great events of the Civil war, without regard to sectional or other former lines of division, is becoming more and more the common heritage of the entire country.

Boy Scouts Are Big Help.

The evening before the inaugural exercises, the local troop of Boy Scouts hiked to the battlefield, where they camped overnight. Early Thursday morning they went to work. They set up benches, decorated the grounds, and when the people began to pour in, acted as messengers and directed the traffic. The scouts who participated in this work, in charge of Assistant Scoutmaster Ralph Larson, were Edwin Healey, Paul Arrington, Guy Whinnery, Lauring Payne, Theodore Ritter, Seymour King, Clinton King and James (Hot) Scoutmaster L. Ledman headed the "traffic squad" and did effective work in keeping the driveway in front of the Civil war, without regard to sectional Entertained by Three Chapters. Special ventures of the day, including the speakers and press representatives, were entertained at dinner by the Manassas, Bull Run, and Eighth Virginia Regiment chapters, United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Meettez Makes Able Marshal. Acting as marshal of the occasion, Hon. C. J. Meettez contributed in no small way to the success of the inaugural exercises. Seated on a white charger and wearing a gorgeous red sash, which with his white coat combined to carry out the colors of the Confederacy, Mr. Meettez made a very imposing figure, commanding attention on all sides.

George C. Round Worked for Park. For many years the desirability of converting the Bull Run battlefields into a park was stressed by the late George C. Round, who labored unceasingly to have the United States government purchase the tract of land and make of the historic field a big national park. Meeting with practically no success at first, Mr. Round persevered, and it is said, that just before the great European war broke out the Federal government was preparing to turn Mr. Round's dream into a reality.

So much for past history. The present movement asks nothing of the Federal government, but rather stresses that the proposed park is to be built as the result of private subscriptions from interested individuals, and that the park will be essentially a Confederate memorial.

Prepared to Care For Automobile Batteries

There is no longer any need of expressing your battery to Washington, having it recharged or repaired there and then waiting for it to be expressed back to you.

A complete battery service equipment has recently been installed by us. And we not only have everything needed with which to take care of your battery troubles, but we know HOW.

If you have run a car a few years you need not be reminded that the time to cure battery ills is in the beginning. Once your battery starts going down grade it goes fast.

The thing to do is to have us look your battery over frequently. We will be candid with you. If your battery is all right, we will be glad to tell you so. If it is too far gone to justify repairing we will frankly advise you not to spend any more money on it.

Battery testing and filling with pure water is free. Avail yourselves of this service at our garage. And when you need a new battery remember that we sell the best—the Willard Threaded Rubber, that is regular equipment now on nearly 200 makes of standard American cars.

The "HOW" of Prosperity

Prosperity! How all of us seek it! What makes for this enviable condition, anyway?

Hard work, alone, never made a man wealthy, though few have gained much of this world's goods in an honest way without hard work.

Integrity—applying the golden rule to all business relations—in itself has rarely made for the accumulation of money and property and lands. Yet, it is recognized that honest and fair dealing is of the very foundation of a successful career.

The systematic saving of money—the steady building of a reserve fund for the inevitable rainy day—is one of the essentials of prosperity for the future, though, to be sure, it is not the only requirement. Let us sum up what is needed as "good management," and you know that every one who manages well regards the value of the dollar to the extent of systematically saving what can be saved. We can help you save well. You will be pleased with our services, and we will take pleasure in serving you.

A Genuine Sensation
By Arthur James
(MOVING PICTURE WORLD, Sept. 11, 1920.)

Great moving pictures are few, although many productions may be called excellent. "Midsummer Madness," the third important production created by William DeMille, steps into greatness and classifies itself by absolute merit as a superb entertainment. It has that fine virtue of being a complete dramatic structure to begin with. To this have been added real acting, beautiful photography, and a sense of taste and composition. It is unquestionably the greatest dramatic production the screen has ever seen. Nothing in "Midsummer Madness" imposes on one's sense of credulity, and there is no jarring note of anachronism in the good social atmosphere through which action proceeds.

Mr. DeMille is a dramatist first, and the result is very evident on the screen. An effort to tell the story would form so part of this comment, as we leave the beauties of the production for enjoyment by the many who see it.

A word to those who are distressed about the falling off in fine productions for the screen—a critical examination of this exceptionally great work will effect a cure.

"Midsummer Madness" will be presented at the Dixie Theatre, Monday and Tuesday, August 1 and 2. Admission, 17 and 33 cents.

The Adventures of a Demobilized Officer Who Found Peace Dull

SYNOPSIS

PROLOGUE. In December, 1918, you are a demobilized officer who find peace dull and you are about to set out on a tour of duty to the West Indies. You are a demobilized officer who find peace dull and you are about to set out on a tour of duty to the West Indies.

CHAPTER I.

In which Mr. Drummond goes to the West Indies and finds peace dull. He is a demobilized officer who find peace dull and you are about to set out on a tour of duty to the West Indies.

quite still while I go on, or I shall get it wrong. Three months ago there arrived at The Elms, the most decorous man in England—the IT of ITS. This gentleman goes by the name of Peterson, and he owns a daughter. From what Miss Benton said, I have contrived to get that daughter, James. He rose and strolled over to the window. "Grave doubts. However, to return to the point, it appears that some suspicious conspiracy is being hatched by IT, the IT of ITS, and the doubtful daughter, into which Papa Benton has been unwittingly drawn. As far as I can make out, the suggestion is that I should unravel the tangled skein of crime and extricate papa."

"I fear, James, that you are not in the habit of spending your spare time at the British museum, as I hoped," said Drummond. "And your brain doesn't work very quickly. The point is not whether this hideous affair is better than Red Indians and things—but whether it's genuine. Am I to battle with murderers, or shall I be a house party roaring with laughter on the lawn?"

"As long as you laugh like 'ell yourself, sir, I don't see how I can help it," said Peterson. "The first sensible remark you've made this morning," said his master hopefully. "I will go prepared to laugh."

"He picked up a pipe from the mantelpiece, and proceeded to fill it, while James Denny waited in silence. "A lady may ring up today," Drummond continued. "But whether it's exact. Don't say where I've gone, if she does; but take down any message and write it to me as Goddard postoffice. If by any chance you don't hear from me for three days, get in touch with Scotland Yard, and tell 'em I've gone. That covers everything in the British Museum. On the other hand, it's a box, and the house-party is a good one. I shall probably want you to come down with my evening clothes and some more kit."

"Very good, sir. I will clean your small coat revolver at once." "Are you going for long, sir?" "I don't know, James. It all depends on circumstances. Which, when you come to think of it, is undoubtedly one of the most famous phrases in the English language. Is there anything in the world that doesn't depend on circumstances?"

"Will you be coming, sir, or going by train?" asked James practically. "Dialectical arguments did not appeal to him." "By car," answered Drummond. "Palmas and a tooth-brush."

"No," said Drummond. "I want my visit to appear unpremeditated. James, and if one goes about completely encased in boiled shirts, while pretending to be merely out for the afternoon, people have doubts as to one's intentions."

"James digested this great thought in silence. "Will you be going far, sir?" he asked at length, pouring out a second cup of coffee.

est him. Then they drew ahead, and Drummond pulled up to avoid the thick cloud of dust. With a slight groan he started at the retreating car; he saw the man lean over and speak to the other man; he saw the other man look around. Then a bend in the road hid them from sight, and still frowning Drummond pulled out his case and lit a cigarette. For the man whose eye he had caught at the hills was by no means Henry Lakington. There was no mistaking that hard-featured, cruel face.

Presumably, thought Hugh, the other two occupants were Mr. Peterson and the doubtful daughter, Irma; presumably they were returning to The Elms. And incidentally there seemed no pronounced reason why they shouldn't. But, somehow, the sudden appearance of Lakington had worked him; he felt irritable and annoyed. What little he had seen of the man he had not liked; he did not want to be reminded of him, especially just as he was thinking of Phyllis.

"The occupant of a car is hardly likely to change in a mile, is he?" he remarked. "I'm afraid I forgot to wave as you went past, but I got your smile all right. Are you likely to be long, because if so, I'll stop my engine?"

"The other man was now approaching casually, and Drummond regarded him curiously. "A friend of yours, is he?" Phyllis, Peterson, said Lakington, as he came up.

"Any friend of Miss Benton's is a safe one," said Peterson. "You've known her a long time, I expect?" "Quite a long time," returned Hugh. "We have jammed together on many occasions."

"Which makes it all the more unfortunate that we should have got involved in this business," said Peterson. "I'm afraid I forgot to wave as you went past, but I got your smile all right. Are you likely to be long, because if so, I'll stop my engine?"

"I hope he avoided the crash all right," murmured Drummond. "Both men looked at him. "The crash," said Lakington. "There was no question of a crash. We just stopped."

"Really," remarked Drummond. "I think, sir, that you must be right in your diagnosis of your chauffeur's mentality. He turned courteously to Peterson. "When you were wrong, for a fellow to stop his car by backing so hard that he locks both back wheels, is no sign, as we used to say in France, I thought, judging by the tracks in the dust, that you must have been in imminent danger of running a traction engine."

with brains, would have been puzzled had they seen the look of keen concentration on his face, as he stared along the white dusty road. He could not say why, but suddenly and very certainly the conviction had come to him that this was no hoax and no leg-pull—but grim and sober reality. In his imagination he had the sudden sharp order to stop the instant they were over the hill, so that Peterson might have a chance of inspecting him; in a flash of intuition he knew that these two men were no ordinary people, and that he was suspected. Two thoughts were dominant in his mind. The first was that though he was some mystery about the motionless, unostentatious man who had sat beside the driver, the second was a distinct feeling of being that his suspicion was fully loaded.

Now getting back to steaks. You know how every member of the family enjoys a good juicy steak. Tender Juicy Steaks U-m-m! HOW GOOD!

There is as much difference in steaks as there is in people. And the comparison goes farther—you must know what kind of beeves your steaks come from, just as you look into a person's rearing, if you are seeking quality.

You Get Ford Service In Fact Here

Most owners of automobiles in Prince William are Ford owners; therefore, most drivers of cars in the county will be interested in what follows:

You realize full well that the Ford is, in reality, a simplified machine. Your attention probably does not need to be called to the fact that the service rendered by your Ford—for dollars invested in the original cost and in the upkeep—has never been equaled by any other make of car. But no piece of machinery is wear proof—and your Ford does require some attention now and then.

Where are you in the habit of getting your Ford work done? It makes a difference who takes care of this, for not only are skilled, experienced mechanics needed on nearly all automobile repair work, but the shop must be fully equipped with modern machinery and tools, to handle properly many jobs that can not be turned out in a satisfactory manner without such equipment.

Here in Manassas you will find the most complete and up-to-the-minute Ford sales and service station in the county. And it does not cost you more to have us do your work for you, for a fair price has been established for each operation by the Ford factory, and this is what we charge you.

Let us do your next Ford work—and do it while the trouble is in the "early stage." We want to see you keep your Ford in trim and would rather have you bring it in when the first symptoms of trouble show than wait until later, when it will cost more.

The Story of Our States

By JONATHAN BRACE XIX.—INDIANA

IT WAS the French flag which first floated over Indiana. In the middle of the seventeenth century the French explorations brought him through the wooded wilderness of Indiana. Shortly thereafter followed Jesuit missionaries from Quebec and in their trail came adventurous rangers and fur traders. French troops and trading posts were soon established in the West. The English took possession of this territory after the French and Indian war, and remained in possession until the Revolution.

General C. C. Vaughn, president of the Good Roads Association, is sponsor for the bond issue movement, and is supporting Senator Trinkle. Col. Leake, "a fact which seems to have been carefully omitted from the articles which oppose to the bond issue is especially strong."

The Story of Our States

By JONATHAN BRACE XX.—MISSISSIPPI

THEIR State of Mississippi derives its name from the river which flows through it. Its western boundary is the Gulf of Mexico. The word itself comes from the Algonquin word Mississippi, which means "great river." It is popularly supposed to mean "the father of waters," but this is an error. The word is derived from the name of the river which flows through it.

CATHARPIN.

A field day, given under the management of the Stonewall Council, No. 43, O. F. A., will be held at Catharpin Saturday, July 30. Three ball games are scheduled for the day.

Friday evening, July 29, Miss Minnie Swart's Class will have a patriotic program in the lecture room of Sudley Church. Admission will be free; every one welcome. Refreshments will be sold for benefit of the church organization.

Mr. Alvey, of Charlotte Hall, Md., is visiting his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. Worthington Alvey.

Mrs. Alexander Compton, of Alexandria is visiting friends in the Sudley neighborhood.

A very interesting game of ball recently played between the married men and single men of Catharpin resulted in a score of 11 to 10 in favor of the former. Mr. Walter Ward promises to develop into a third "Babe Ruth," getting two home runs to his credit.

Mrs. Ruth Hall and Mr. Berkeley Hoffman motored to Washington Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Hunt, Jr., are building a new residence on their farm on the Carolina Road.

BIDS WANTED.

The Brentsville district school board asks for bids on two additional school rooms at Aden, according to plans and specifications in the hands of D. E. Earhart, Nokesville (residence near Aden). Bids are to be in the hands of the clerk in time to be opened at a meeting of the school board to be held at Nokesville on August 10th, at 2 p. m. The board reserves the right to reject any and all bids, if not satisfactory. At the meeting at Nokesville August 10th, the board will also offer for sale to the highest bidder the old abandoned school house at King's Cross Roads. J. R. Cooke, Clerk.

SOME "PRIMARY" POINTERS.

Assistant Attorney General J. D. Hank, of Richmond, has given out the opinion that a person is not eligible to vote in a party primary who voted against any nominee of that party in the last preceding general election. The opinion is given by Attorney General John R. Saunders that one who did not vote at the November, 1920, election, will be entitled to vote at Tuesday's Democratic primary, provided he is a democrat, or if not a democrat, will pledge himself to support the candidate nominated in the primary in the succeeding November election.

No Decision By Council On Corner & Kline's Bill.

At a regular monthly meeting of the town council, held Monday evening, Mayor W. Hill Brown and the following councilmen were present: J. H. Burke, W. F. Hibbs, J. L. Moser, O. E. Newman and B. Lynn Robertson.

A number of bills were presented and ordered paid. Supt. Frank Gue, jr., presented charges amounting to $91.39 against the town treasurer.

It was moved and passed that electric current be furnished the Prince William Fair Association for lighting purposes during the fair to be held August 16th through 19th, free of cost.

The request of Messrs. Corner and Kline for the payment of the horse, which it is said they claimed was electrocuted in Manassas when it was standing near the power and light pole in front of the NEWS office a few months ago, was laid on the table.

Roosevelt's Glasses

Ex-President Roosevelt was awkward and stupid as a boy, until he suddenly discovered that he could not see as well as other boys. He tells us that glasses changed his career. Most backward children have defective eyesight. No boy or girl can do well in school who cannot see distinctly. With correctly fitted glasses, nine out of every ten immediately improve in school work. Success in school promises success in later life. Have your children's eyes examined at the first indication of trouble. The eye, the most delicate, the most important of all the special organs, should be the first to receive attention.

Hon. Kenneth N. Gilpin
For Lieutenant-Governor

HON. KENNETH N. GILPIN.

Dr. Edwin A. Alderman
President of the University of Virginia

In a letter under date of December 17th 1920, addressed to Hon. Kenneth N. Gilpin, of Clarke County, had the following to say in regard to his candidacy for Lieutenant Governor of Virginia:

"I want you to know that I am frankly and deeply interested in your political future. I believe the State of Virginia has need of such a man as you in its high offices, for its own sake primarily. I have no doubt that a great future awaits you, for you possess all the qualities of mind and character to carry off a great career."

THE above tribute is indeed a fitting one to Mr. Gilpin whose record politically, personally and otherwise has never been questioned, and one well deserved if service and straight forwardness counts for anything.

In time of peace as a member of the General Assembly, Mr. Gilpin's position on all important matters was never in doubt. He has always had the courage of his convictions. In time of war he was found seeking service, NOT EXEMPTION, and served in the most hazardous branch, namely, Aviation, and was for nearly a year, on the French Front doing active duty.

Mr. Gilpin favors and stands for a business-like and economical administration of state affairs.

Mr. Gilpin is openly opposed to any STATE BOND ISSUE that will increase taxation, and those who would have you believe otherwise on account of his position on local Bond Issues, do so for political purposes.

Mr. Gilpin's long service in the General Assembly, where he served on some of the most important committees, gives him a broad knowledge of the administration of the State's business.

He is clean, honest and fearless and worthy of your confidence.

It's Economy To Have Tires Repaired

Even though you can buy a new tire cheaper today than you could six months ago, you can save perfectly good money by having your blow-outs properly repaired.

It is extravagance and a pure waste of money to run a tire with a blow-out patch. If brought to us promptly, we can make your tire as good as new, and at a very slight cost.

We know HOW. Bring your tire work to us.
