

GOV. BYRD PRESENTS FAREWELL MESSAGE TO GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Renders Account of Stewardship
In Farewell Speech, Lauds
His Successor.

CHEERS GREET GOVERNOR AS HE ENTERS THE HALL

Discusses Industry, Farming, Highway Development, Taxes and Education.

By Carter Wormeley.

Richmond, Jan. 8.—Appearing today before a joint sitting of both branches Governor Byrd delivered his farewell message to the General Assembly of Virginia. As the retiring executive entered the hall of the House the members rose and cheered. The occasion was impressive.

"In obedience to the mandate of the Constitution," said the Governor, "I appear before you to report to you the condition of the State, and to render to you an account of my stewardship as Governor of Virginia. My present duty is to make a report of things done rather than to recommend other things to be done."

His Excellency then quoted at some length from recommendations carried in what was known as the "Program of Progress," offered shortly after he had assumed office. The time was ripe for this appeal, said he, and the response was generous. He next paid tribute to the patriotism of the whole State, including the civic organizations as well as its law-making bodies. Even men of different political faiths, said he, adjourned politics and united their efforts to promote the progress of Virginia.

Of the Legislature he said: "Certainly the General Assembly did much. The members of the Senate and the House seemed to me to ask only one question before acting: 'Is this or that measure good for Virginia?' and if the answer was 'good' you voted as courageous progressives."

He asked that the people believe in his sincerity when he admitted his embarrassment sometimes from an exaggeration of his part in the forward movement of the State. He said he felt conscious of his limitations and appreciated thoroughly the contributions of others to the new spirit of progress in Virginia.

As Regards Industry.

The Governor showed how the annual value of the industrial output of our factories had increased from $367,000,000, in 1916, to more than $900,000,000, in 1929, and how this output will reach $1,000,000,000 by 1930. Virginia in the fiscal year 1927 said he, made the largest industrial progress of any State in the Union. In that one year $265,000,000 was added to the value of our industrial capital; $115,000,000 was added to the value of our industrial output and 36,000 new workers found gainful occupation.

With completion of plants now building, Virginia will produce 60% of all the rayon manufactured in the world, said he, and will be pre-eminent in many other articles of manufacture. Industrial growth, he said, is reflected in an increase of bank resources in the last four years from $640,810,000, in 1925, to $666,580,000 in 1929—an increase of $26,000,000.

The Farming Problem.

"A farmer myself, no one has recognized more keenly than I the difficulties that beset agriculture in Virginia, as elsewhere, and the necessity of any governmental assistance possible to place the great industry of farming more nearly on an equality with other lines of endeavor," said the Governor.

"In the preparation of the budget I have followed the recommendations of the Farm Commission and substantially increased the appropriation for agricultural extension and experimental work and for rural schools. Farm-to-market roads are receiving an increasing sum each year from the gasoline tax distributed to the counties. The removal of the State tax on land and tangible personal property has resulted in a direct reduction in taxes to the farmers and landowners of $4,327,947 for the years 1927-28-29. Our rural population has been the bulwark of the State in the past, and agriculture should be advanced in every practical and reasonable way." The Governor then went into the matter of rural electrification, after which he discussed roads. Highway Development.

"In road development Virginia has made a great forward movement in the last four years under the pay-as-you-go plan without mortgaging the future. On January 1, 1926, our highway system comprised 4,800 miles and now it has 7,032 miles, an increase of 45% in four years. Two thousand two hundred and thirty-two miles of road have been taken over from the counties during my administration. At an average cost of $10,000 per mile this has relieved the county tax-payers of over $22,000,000 of road construction, not considering the cost of maintenance in Virginia, he said, is 5%—one of the lowest in all the States—and nearly all the money available goes into the building and maintenance of the roads themselves. The Governor congratulated the State upon the fact that its roads were paid for and that "no legacy of debt" had been contracted.

Taxes And Education.

The address then took up the subjects of taxes and of education, revision of the constitution and of reorganization in government. The estimated surplus of the State as of March 1, 1930, was placed at $4,256,956. It was pointed out that Virginia is the only State that has complete segregation of tax subjects between the State and localities. Here no property bears more than one property tax. The success of study of other States and the happy position of Virginia under this system has been recognized.

The Governor discussed at some length the growth of education in Virginia. In 1926 the appropriation out of the general treasury for public schools was $5,480,965, which was increased in 1929 to $4,439,383. In the budget just prepared this year's appropriation has been increased by $900,000 to a total of $7,385,685.

In concluding his message Governor Byrd paid high tribute to his successor in office, under whose administration he predicts the State will go forward to greater prosperity and to increased prestige. He spoke of Governor-elect Pollard as a man "whose capacity is as well recognized as his character is above reproach." "I leave office," said Governor Byrd, "with a sense of deep gratitude to the Virginia people who have been tolerant of my errors and patient and kind to me beyond my deserts."

VIRGINIA TRUCK CROP INCREASES DURING 1929

The total value of the principal Virginia truck crops produced during 1929 increased $7,000,000 or nearly 50 per cent over last year, according to the Federal-State Crop Reporting Service.

The estimated value of truck crops this year is $21,487,000 compared with $14,478,000 last year. Improvement in potato prices is the principal cause for the large increase over last year. The reduction in the early potato acreage caused most of the decrease in total acreage from 136,580 in 1928 to 123,960 this year.

The production of snap beans, early cabbage, spinach, tomatoes and watermelons was greater than last year, while there was a decrease in late cabbage, carrots, cucumbers, green peas, potatoes and strawberries. Statistics for many minor truck crops and for market gardens around cities are not available, therefore, the figures in this report are for twelve crops, most of which are grown in the Norfolk section.

The value of the principal truck crops for 1929 and 1928 listed in the order of their value is as follows:

Early potatoes, $14,156,000 for 1929 and $6,522,000 for 1928; strawberries, $1,643,000 and $3,049,000; spinach, $1,435,000 and $1,604,000; early cabbage, $1,070,000 and $1,145,000; snap beans, $866,000 and $338,000; late cabbage, $544,000 and $396,000; green peas, $390,000 and $278,000; tomatoes for canning, $387,000 and $190,000; cucumbers, $283,000 and $164,000; tomatoes for table, $268,000 and $373,000; watermelons, $157,000 and $129,000; carrots, $105,000 and $101,000; onions, $71,000 and $33,000, and lettuce, $57,000 and $87,000.

Preceding the business session a delicious luncheon was served by the hostesses of the day, Mrs. Gibson, Mrs. George Round and Mrs. Hodge. Some of the outstanding accomplishments of the club during the year just ended as revealed in the annual report of Mrs. W. L. Lloyd, retiring president, were:

In closing her report, Mrs. Lloyd pointed to the fact that through the corresponding secretary and visiting committee the club was able to spread cheer by numerous letters; those of sympathy in times of distress and of congratulations on happier occasions. Fruit and flowers were sent to sick and absent members and at Christmas time cards to former members. Gifts were also presented to members on special occasions in recognition of some particular service or event.

MISS MARY ANNA CHINN DIES IN FRONT ROYAL

Was Well Known In Manassas,
Visiting Mrs. Newman,
Her Cousin, Often.

Miss Mary Anna Chinn, aged 77, died in the Nurses' Home in Front Royal, on Monday, January 6th, following an illness of several months' duration.

Funeral services were held in the Methodist Episcopal Church South, at Marshall, of which she was a member, on Wednesday at 2:30, and were conducted by the Rev. Brooks, pastor of that Church. Interment was in the cemetery near Marshall.

The deceased is survived by one sister and one brother, Miss Martha Chinn, of Front Royal, and the Rev. William Chinn, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Warrenton.

People of Front Royal and Manassas will long feel the loss which has come to them in the death of Miss Chinn. She was a lovely Christian character, and greatly beloved by all who knew her.

Miss Chinn was a cousin of Mrs. T. H. Newman, of Manassas, whom she often visited.

Mr. Domingo Caino, of the Swavely School faculty, talked interestingly of Dutch and Flemish art, illustrating with many Medici prints loaned for the occasion by the University of Virginia, and compared these works with Italian and Modern paintings, as well as touching on many of the phases of art.

POULTRY PROFITS ADVANCE IN 1929

Figures By Authorities Indicate
More Profitable Season
During 1930.

Profits from farm poultry were higher in 1929 than in any recent year, a compilation of figures by poultry authorities indicates, and conditions point to a profitable season during the current year. Egg prices are up, and it looks as if they were going to continue at a good level during the entire season.

There are several reasons for this. One is the fact that hatcheries increased their capacities due to annual increase of business over the past few years. These hatcheries, paying higher prices for hatchable eggs, will take a larger percentage of the egg yield than ever before.

Cold storage figures indicate that the new year will find a shortage of eggs in storage, and this shortage will be made up, to further make inroads upon the egg supply. As a result, fall and winter prices in 1930 should be high. At the same time, grain prices are reasonable, and conditions point to a profitable year from poultry for those farmers who take their flocks seriously and give them the attention which they must have if a profit is to be derived.

Good Stock To Replace Old.

One sure way of realizing a profit from farm poultry is to increase the egg production of the entire flock. Figures indicate that the hen which lays 180 eggs a year has a labor income of almost three times as much as the hen that lays only 125 eggs a year. By securing good stock to replace the old hens this spring, the productivity of the entire flock can be increased.

Hatcheries themselves furnish the quick and logical method of building up the farm flock to a profitable egg-production level, particularly since the leading ones of the country have banded together under the slogan, "Hatchery Chicks for Greater Profits," to insure better flocks and square dealings.

Higher egg production per hen, and increased size of farm flocks, offer the solution to profitable farm poultry, regardless of prices.

ON DISPLAY TODAY

THE NEW OAKLAND 8

$1045 AND UP

General Motors' Lowest-Priced Eight . . . the Car with Superior Performance

Today a new eight-cylinder motor car makes its appearance. It is the newest General Motors eight and by several hundreds of dollars the lowest in price. It is the New Oakland Eight with bodies by Fisher.

The New Oakland Eight develops 85 horsepower and is the first stock car of its size and weight to employ an engine of such high power. Since performance depends largely on the ratio between horsepower and weight, the New Oakland Eight is exceptionally fast and powerful because it produces one horsepower to 37 pounds of car weight.

The New Oakland Eight has all the smoothness which results from the overlapping power impulses inherent in eight-cylinder engine design. In addition, it enjoys exclusive mechanical advantages which make it even smoother and more delightful to drive.

Several of the engineers who participated in creating General Motors' first eight back in 1914 were responsible for the development of the New Oakland Eight. To this latest task they brought a wide knowledge of eight-cylinder design. It is reasonable to expect that the Oakland is a finer eight because of this fact.

A demonstration will reveal how well the New Oakland Eight merits the description "the car with superior performance."

The New Oakland Eight, $1045 and up, f. o. b. Pontiac, Michigan, plus delivery charges. Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers included in list prices. Bumpers, rear fender guards and spring covers extra. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

NEW SERIES PONTIAC BIG 6

$745 AND UP

A Famous Name—A Finer Car . . . Introducing Important Improvements

The announcement of the first Pontiac in 1926 brought to the low-price field a new order of beauty, performance and reliability. And each Pontiac announcement since that time has introduced a car which represented an improvement even over its own highly regarded predecessors.

Now comes the New Series Pontiac Big Six—an even finer car with a famous name. It retains all those excellent qualities which have been responsible for Pontiac's success in the past. And in addition it introduces many improvements. New bodies by Fisher make this latest Pontiac Big Six more beautiful than ever.

The smoothness of Pontiac's 60-horsepower engine is further increased by the use of rubber engine mountings. Pontiac's, non-squeak four-wheel brakes are now even more efficient. A sloping non-glare windshield adds to its safety. Greater handling ease results from the use of a new type of steering mechanism. Improved Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers give increased riding comfort.

Come to our showroom and see this finer car with a famous name—the New Series Pontiac Big Six.

REDUCING INSECT RAVAGES.

It has been conservatively estimated after extensive surveys by crop specialists that approximately fifty per cent of the vegetable crops of the United States is destroyed each year by insects. This rate of loss perhaps extends equally as large among flowers and other ornamental plants.

Nature has provided many natural enemies of these destructive insects, such as parasites that feed and prey on the adult, the larvae or the eggs, birds, other enemy insects, and enemy insects, and weather conditions. Among the uncountable billions of insect life that teems about us there is a continual warfare of extermination in progress. But due to the wide exchange of soil products over the world, the marked reduction in the number of birds, and production of a wider variety of crops on more extensive scale, there has come so great an increase of destructive insect life that every grower of food crops and ornamental plants must protect the growing plant by artificial means through use of insecticides. Otherwise efforts to produce profitable crops or maintain attractive lawns and home surroundings will prove futile.

No food crop, no flower, shrub or tree is wholly immune from insect ravages. It is imperative that growers of all plants realize the seriousness of the inroads that have been suffered with increasing violence during the past few years from these swarming hordes of man's enemies. And it is even more important to know that a large portion of these losses, and in many cases all of them, are preventable.

Enemy insects are roughly divided into three groups as far as measures to combat them are applicable. It is necessary to recognize these groups and their methods of attacking the plant before they can be successfully combated with insecticides. There are a large class of sap sucking insects that obtain their food from plants by adhering to the leaf, twig, or limb and sucking the sap; the leaf chewing group that eats all or portions of the leaf, twig or limb; and borers that burrow their passage into the various portions of the plant, causing death or serious injury in most instances.

Sap sucking insects must be combated with a poison that causes death by coming in contact with their bodies. Among these insects are the various plant lice or aphids, scale insects, etc. It is for control of this class of insects that the dormant spray is applied, a spray in which every orchardist and owner of grape vines, shrubbery and shade trees should begin at once to make preparations for application this spring. The most effective insecticides known as contact sprays are lime-sulphur, miscible oil, kerosene emulsion, nicotine sulphate, and many excellent proprietary preparations. These poisons cause death by coating or clogging the breathing pores of the insect, by effecting its nervous system, or causing a breaking down of its body tissues. In applying this spray it is therefore essential that all hiding places of the over-wintering insect be given a thorough coating. The spray must touch the individual insect to be effective.

The chewing insect is killed by ap.

NIGHT COUGHING QUICKLY RELIEVED

Famous Prescription Gives Almost Instant Relief.

Night coughs, or coughs caused by a cold or by an irritated throat are usually due to causes which cough syrups and patent medicines do not touch. But the very first swallow of Thoxine is guaranteed to stop the most stubborn cough almost instantly. Thoxine is a doctor's prescription, working on an entirely different principle, it goes direct to the internal cause.

Thoxine contains no harmful drugs, is pleasant tasting and safe for the whole family. Sold on a money back guarantee, to give better and quicker relief for coughs or sore throats than anything you have ever tried. Ask for Thoxine, put up ready for use in 35c, 60c, and $1.00 bottles. plication of a stomach poison to its food supply. This class of insects comprises a large, divided family of beetles, caterpillars, slugs and grubs. Their damage to plants is more easily detected and the insect identified than with the sap sucking class. It is necessary and important to apply the proper spray or dust for the particular chewing insect at the proper time to be most effective. Thus, with many orchard and vegetable insects, if the spray or dust is delayed, the too heavy foliage will afford the insect protection, or the progeny will gain control of the situation by their rapid increase in numbers. Often the eggs of this class of insects can be destroyed before hatching.

Among the most widely used and effective stomach poison sprays or dusts are arsenate of lead, calcium arsenate, magnesium arsenate, calcium fluosilicate, Paris green, Bordeaux mixture, and scores of other insecticides, most of which belong to the arsenic group of poisons. Thorough covering of the feeding surfaces of leaves, twigs, bark and other portions of the plant is essential.

The injuries and damages inflicted by borers are difficult to estimate or control. Many flowers, such as aster, iris and roses, are attacked by stalk borer. Several shrubs including rhododendron and lilac are often damaged by this insect. The European corn borer is one of the latest arrivals in the ranks of food crop borers. Many shade and forest trees are victims of borers, such as dogwood, elm, birch, maple, hickory, locust, ash, ash, chestnut and many others.

Prevention is the most forceful weapon in combatting borers. After the tree or plant is afflicted there is little to be done except destroy the effected portions to prevent the spread of the larvae or millow to other trees or plants. Good health often provides sufficient strength for the plant to repel death from borers. Burning of stalks of all annuals in the fall or winter should be practiced. Increase of bird life is perhaps the most effective means of keeping all enemy insect life under control, and especially is this true among borers where artificial means of extermination are so limited because of the habits of the insect.

Sanitation holds an important place in growing all plants. By this practice many destructive pests are prevented from propagating. But even with all preventive measures possible, there will be billions of enemy insects survive the winter that require strenuous efforts to control. Against these the sprayer and duster are as necessary a part of the grower's equipment as the plow and hoe.

The dormant spray is the first "over the top" for the grower. Shade trees, shrubbery, grape vines, all fruit trees, and many small fruits require protection against their enemies with this spray. This application must be provided before the buds appear. Vigilance is as important in the production of crops as in many other phases of man's struggle for life.

This year's team has been built around only two regulars from last year's quint—Captain Dodson and Ambrose. The difficult problem of finding capable material for the three positions left vacant seems to be almost solved, although Mr. Pullen, the M. H. S. coach, will not commit himself.

HOUSTON PLATFORM ON UNEMPLOYMENT.

President Hoover's conference with business men and his advocacy of utilizing public works, both state and national, for the purpose of promoting business stability and checking unemployment has received the wide commendation it deserves. It might be suggested, however, that those partisans who express wonder as to what the Democrats would have done if their party were in power and confronted by a similar situation should take the trouble to read the Houston platform, which was adopted one year before Governor Brewster of Maine, as spokesman for Mr. Hoover, outlined a similar plan to a conference of Governors at New Orleans.

Under the title "Unemployment," the Houston platform declares:

"We expend vast sums of money to protect our people against the evils of war, but no government program is anticipated to prevent the awful suffering and economic losses of unemployment. It threatens the well-being of millions of our people, and endangers the prosperity of the nation.

"We favor the adoption by the government, after a study of the subject, of a scientific plan whereby, during periods of unemployment, appropriations shall be made available for the construction of necessary public works and the lessening, as far as consistent with public interests, of government construction work when labor is generally and satisfactorily employed in private enterprise.

"Study should also be made of modern methods of industry and a constructive solution found to absorb and utilize the surplus human labor released by the increasing use of machinery."

HOPING AGAINST HOPE.

All the talk about commodities and suffering workmen and starving farmers and profiteering manufacturers only serves to gloss over the fact that the greatest bone of tariff dissension is politics.

The "tariff farce" is very much like a play, with its heroes, heavies and villains. It runs the gamut from comedy to tragedy. The "defenders" of the people rise to smite those who would increase tariff duties, and the "guardians" of prosperity smite back at those who would lower duties. It is all very pretty and trivial.

In the meantime the real producers of our prosperity, the workers, farmers and manufacturers, go on in the hope that some day the senate will condescend to consider the tariff problems as a highly scientific business question instead of a great political plum tree planted and maintained by all the people for the special benefit of a few "servants" of the people.

A fair tariff is to protect home wage scales and living conditions and treat foreign producers justly. Its primary object is not to furnish an exchange medium for log rolling and vote bartering between ambitious public "servants".

UPHOLDING A NATIONAL PRECEDENT.

The attitude of the Administration on the subject of water power development is not encouraging to government ownership advocates.

Secretary Wilbur, reflecting the views of the President, has stated emphatically that the government connection with water should end when it goes over a dam. Any subsequent action, such as generating and selling electricity, should be up to private individuals, who take the risks and spend the money. It has also been definitely stated that, in the case of Boulder Dam or any other project, the government will go no further than it is compelled to in order to finance the cost of the structure.

This is hardly surprising. Surely, under our established governmental policy, the government should have nothing to do with buying or selling. Government is not a business to be run in competition with private citizens and taxpayers. Its proper functions are strictly limited, sometimes by law and some times by custom, to protecting its people and guaranteeing fair play to all.

President Hoover and Secretary Wilbur follow a national precedent when they keep government and industry separate. Once government goes into the power or any other business, no matter how small the scale, a basic democratic principle will have died.

IS DICTATORSHIP AHEAD?

Nothing stands still. An individual, a business or a government, keeps in constant motion. It either goes forward or back.

The government of the United States has for several decades been moving steadily away from the constitution and toward a new order in which state and individual rights will be submerged beneath an autocratic, centralized power at Washington.

Now we are at cross-roads. Either we are to go further away from constitutional rights granted to the individual and states, with the inevitable result of a dictatorship, or we are to turn back to constitutional principles of liberty and freedom of action, in our social and business lives.

Can we live as a free people under political domination and intimidation? Too many rights have been thrown overboard. Too many minorities have forced their will upon majorities.

If this process continues without being checked our constitution will become void and the United States will face dictatorship at the hand of a powerful political class.

The future is hidden in the hearts of the people.

BOOKS TO OWN.

GOOD-BYE TO ALL THAT

(By Robert Graves)
Jonathan Cape and Harrison Smith.
$3.50.

A Review by Lambert Davis,
Managing Editor, The Virginia
Quarterly Review.

"The objects of this autobiography, written at the age of thirty-three, are simple enough: an opportunity for a formal good-bye to you and to all that you and to me and to all that; forgetfulness, because once all this has been settled in my mind and written down and published it need never be thought about again; money."

This opening sentence in Robert Graves' "Good-Bye To All That" could hardly be bettered for directness, brevity, and candor. It is typical of the book as a whole. Later on, in speaking of his period of post-war maladjustment, he says that he thought of going to a psychoanalyst to straighten himself out, but decided that he would rather do it himself. "Good-Bye To All That" is obviously the result of such an effort. Not that it is cast as a succession of mental states, or seeks directly to expose the working of a sick soul—on the contrary, it is usually objective and descriptive of bodily activities in time and space; but the people and events he writes about obviously have been torn from a memory which cries out, sometimes in agony, to be purged of its record of thirty-odd years.

Coming as it does in a year of books about the war, "Good-Bye To All That" will be known as "another war book". More properly it is the story of a man's attempt at adjustment with life, before, during, and after the war: the effort of a poet to live, first in the pre-war England of the public school system and complacent elders; second, in the agony and terror of the trenches; third, in the England that has been sick in body and soul since 1918. The first part of the book is the least interesting. Graves went through the usual trials of the poet at the English public school—the variations from the Shelleyan tradition are due to the fact that he was something of an athlete, and one of the best boxers in the school. Like many other Englishmen of nineteen or so, he signed up without thought when the war came, in the expectation of a three-months holiday from Oxford. And like them he learned the lesson of the trenches now more or less familiar through dozens of recent war books. I know of no other book with the possible exception of Richard Aldington's "Death of a Hero", that is more outspokenly bitter in its denunciation of the vast stupidity and brutality with which the war was conducted. And Graves' book has the additional sting of being admitted autobiography rather than fiction. (Only two characters, according to him, are given fictitious names.) He is mordantly critical alike of the callousness of the civilians, the hypocrisy of the statesmen, and the stupid conservatism of the army leaders, who clung to hoary army traditions in the face of utterly new fighting conditions.

But the book is most powerful, though probably less pleasant to read, in its description of post-war adjustment. It is a story of continued indifference on the part of the civilians, sickness as the result of wounds, marriage and poverty, and most of all of complete inability to recover from the mental and emotional shock of war experience. Graves proves his point. There is nothing that it would seem to be more worthwhile to bid good-bye to than the accumulated misery he recounts.

The book is important, naturally, for the pictures of many well-known figures in modern England. Most interesting are Siegfried Sassoon, who fought with Graves in the Royal Welch Fusiliers, alternating conspicuous and violent bravery at the front with conspicuous and violent pacifism on leave in England. Colonel T. E. Lawrence, living at Oxford after the son why so many "don't park" signs are ignored is that they are hidden behind parked cars and so escape notice.

Little Lord Fauntleroy.

Detroit Free Press.—We only hope that in his innocence, Senator Grundy will not become too friendly with the hard-boiled bunch he has been thrown with.

War and planning the kidnapping of the Magdalen College deer as a relief from post-war ennui; George Mallory, who died at the summit of Mount Everest, scrambling with Graves on the cliffs of Snowden; Thomas Hardy envenoming against critics and autograph hunters. And there are many others, of more or less importance, to all of whom Graves bids good-bye. (As a matter of fact, most of the men he writes about were killed in the war.)

We are left to wonder, after he has said good-bye to all this, whether he has achieved what he seeks, forgetfulness. Certainly, if candor, at the expense of every trick known to literary style, can achieve this end, Graves has done it. The book is a succession of memories: sometimes they link themselves together into a connected narrative; sometimes, particularly towards the end, they leave many gaps of silence. There are rare passages of poetic beauty; most often the tone of the book is one of somber and bitter renunciation. It is hard to judge such a work as literature. It is justifiable as the personal apology of a poet who has already, at thirty-three, been given the accolade of a collected edition. And it is monumental testimony of the irreparable havoc which the war played with a generation of sensitive and potentially useful men.

"My little son had poor appetite, couldn't sleep and was cross. I gave him Vinol and it ended these troubles like magic."—Mrs. L. DuCrest.

Vinol supplies the body important mineral elements of iron, calcium, with cod liver peptone. This is just what thin, nervous children or adults need, and the QUICK results are surprising. The very FIRST bottle brings sound sleep and a BIG appetite. Vinol tastes delicious! Cocke Pharmacy, Manassas, Va.—Adv.

IN MEMORIAM.

In sad but loving remembrance of my dear father, R. A. Wilson, who departed this life one year ago, January 12, 1929.

Often I think of you, dear father, And my heart is sad with pain; Oh, this earth would be a heaven Could I but hear your sweet voice again.

Sleep on, dear father, and take your rest.

I loved you, but God loved you best. God's will be done, He doeth well, But how I miss you no one can tell.

Sleep on dear father, your labor is o'er,

Your willing hands shall toil no more. A faithful father, both loving and kind, A better father no one could find.

Oh, my heart often aches, With a dull, throbbing pain; When I think of that terrible night, When the sad message came.

Memories of that terrible night Will linger for many a day.

Broken hearts were caused, dear father, Many tears were shed in vain, When your life was so quickly taken.

Day by day, we miss you more, From thy familiar place, We do not hear thy footsteps, Nor see thy cheerful face.

Some may think we are not lonely, When at times they see us smile; Little do they know the heartaches,

That we suffer all the while.

Every day brings back sweet memories, Every day brings back a tear; Deep within my heart I cherish, Thoughts of one I loved so dear.

One long year ago you left us, To rest in eternal peace; But my love for you, dear father, Will never, never, cease.

Dear is the grave where he is laid, Sweet his memory that will never fade.

Part of our lives lies buried, Under the sod where our dear father sleeps.

By his loving daughter, RUTH SUTPHIN.

THE GREATEST CHEVROLET IN CHEVROLET HISTORY

Today, Chevrolet presents the Greatest Chevrolet in Chevrolet History—a smoother, faster, better Six—with beautiful new bodies by Fisher.

Basically, it is the same sturdy, substantial Six which won such tremendous popularity in 1929. But it is a greater car in every way—for there are scores of vital improvements which contribute to comfort, performance, endurance and safety!

An improved six-cylinder valve-in-head motor, with its capacity increased to 50 horsepower; four Delco-Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers; fully-enclosed internal-expanding weather-proof brakes; a new dash gasoline gauge; heavier and stronger rear axle; Fisher non-glare windshield; larger tires—

—these are typical of the many improvements which make this car the Greatest Chevrolet in Chevrolet History.

But most impressive of all from the standpoint of the motor car buyer—this smoother, faster, better Six is available—

--at greatly reduced prices!

During 1929, more than a million three hundred thousand persons bought six-cylinder Chevrolets. This enormous volume has made possible many savings in the Chevrolet factories—and, in keeping with its long-established policy, Chevrolet is sharing these savings with the public. No written description can do justice to the extra value and quality provided in this new car. Visit your Chevrolet dealer—see this car—check its new features—ride in it—and judge for yourself the sensational value it represents.

DECEMBER PIG SURVEY.

The number of pigs saved this fall was approximately 2 per cent less than last fall, according to reports collected from about 1,500 farmers for the Department of Agriculture by the rural mail carriers. The total number of pigs saved, therefore, was approximately 401,000 compared with 409,000 last year and 469,000 in the fall of 1927. The number of sows farrowing was 60,000 which was a decrease of about 6 per cent, compared with the fall of 1928, but the average number of pigs saved per litter was 6.7 compared with 6.6 last year. During the past two years Virginia farmers have been reducing their number of hogs, largely due to the declining prices.

The number of sows to farrow next spring will be about the same as in the spring of 1929 if the same relationship between the breeding intentions and actual farrowing exists next spring as in the past two years. Prices this winter will largely determine the actual number of sows kept to farrow in the spring.

The fall pig crop throughout the United States was practically the same as in the fall of 1928. In the Corn Belt States, however, the fall pig crop was about 4 per cent larger. Combining the number of pigs reported saved last spring and this fall a total crop for 1929 of about 5 per cent smaller than for 1928 is indicated. However, the surveys for both 1927 and 1928 when checked against actual marketings showed an under estimate of the total pig crop in the Corn Belt by about 4 per cent. Therefore, if the 1929 survey showed the same under estimate as in the two previous years the actual crop this year in the Corn Belt was a little larger than that of last year.

The total number of sows farrowing next spring will probably be slightly smaller than in the spring of 1929. This survey indicates a slight increase in the number of sows bred, but usually the actual number as reported in the spring is less than the fall intentions. Prices received for hogs this year have not been sufficient to stimulate increased production.

A Fellow Feeling.

"Did he seem sorry when you told him I was married?"

"Yes, he said he was awfully sorry even though he didn't know the fellow personally!"

And Stale.

Before I married Maggie dear

I was her apple pie,

Her precious peach, her honey lamb,

The apple of her eye.

But after years of married life

This thought I pause to utter,

Those fancy names are gone, and now

I'm just her bread and butter.

Swindled.

James—There goes the old rascal who swindled me out of $50,000.

Peter—How did he do that?

James—He wouldn't let me marry his daughter.—Answers.
