

Manassas Journal Messenger

A MEDIA GENERAL NEWSPAPER

MONDAY, JULY 21, 2003

35 CENTS

MANASSAS' ONLY LOCAL DAILY NEWSPAPER

Model citizen

Manassas resident donates his scale replica of the depot to the Center for the Arts / A3

Faces

Getting ready

Virginia Beach prepares for business increase brought by sniper trials / A4

State

RECEIVED

Lucky day
PGA golf pro
Curtis takes surprise win
at British Open / B1

Sports

WHAT'S ON TAP

Good Monday morning

Manassas and Manassas Park ...
Got a gripe to take up with a senator?

Head to Manassas City Hall on Wednesday from 10 a.m. to noon. U.S. Sen. George F. Allen (R-Va.) will have a regional representative for Northern Virginia conduct local office hours.

John Putney will be available to talk to constituents in the first floor conference room, 9027 Center St., Manassas. Load up the kids for a movie under the summer night sky.

Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone will be the movie of the week Friday at 9 p.m. at the Mary Louise Jackson Amphitheater on the Manassas Campus of Northern Virginia Community College.

Admission is $3 for adults, $2 for seniors and children and students free. Bench seating is available or bring lawn chairs and blankets. In case of rain, the movie will be moved indoors to Howson Hall Room 216.

Nokesville residents want

Club closes at former church

Owner Wood faces charges, lawsuit

By MARIA HEESTAD

mheestad@manassas.com

Though Manassas club owner Reginald E. "Reggie" Wood Jr. lost the lease on the old Manassas Presbyterian Church building he was using for his Northern Virginia Professionals Club this spring, eviction may be the least of Wood's worries.

Among the 200 criminal indictments handed up by the Grand Jury in July was a bad check charge against Wood. Wood is also being sued by former investors in another Manassas jazz club, CO2 Jazz Inc.

"I was trying to bring something to Manassas that Manassas needs. I didn't get the support from the community, and I couldn't survive," Wood said in a phone interview Friday.

The owner of the Northern Virginia Professionals Club building, JAT Industries of Manassas, successfully took Wood's corporation, R. Wood Enterprises, to court for non-payment of the lease. A General District Court judge certified in June that Wood owed JAT $36,758 plus 9 percent interest from May.

"The landlord is the problem," Wood said. He described a city sewage flood in the church building that closed him down, and endless snows in the winter that damaged business when he needed it most. "I tried to work with the landlord. He wasn't reasonable. .... I spent over $140,000 in [building improvements]."

Three tenants, part of the reason their businesses also failed.

He claimed that the landlord is also suing the previous tenant.

A $700 check Wood paid to JFEC air conditioning and plumbing for heating, work at the Northern Virginia

Professionals Club in March was returned due to insufficient funds, Sandra Poinexter of JFEC said.

Peter Cihlak/News & Messenger

A for lease sign sits outside The Northern Virginia Professionals Club located in the former Manassas Presbyterian Church on Church Street in Old Town Manassas. It has recently closed due to poor business.

Club is another of failed businesses at site available to talk to constituents in the first floor conference room, 9027 Center St., Manassas.

Load up the kids for a movie under the summer night sky.

Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone will be the movie of the week Friday at 9 p.m. at the Mary Louise Jackson Amphitheater on the Manassas Campus of Northern Virginia Community College.

Admission is $3 for adults, $2 for seniors and children and students free.

Bench seating is available or bring lawn chairs and blankets. In case of rain, the movie will be moved indoors to Howsmon Hall Room 216.

Nokesville residents want people that care about their community to join the new group Friends Uniting Nokesville. The group next meeting is scheduled for Monday at 6:30 p.m. at the fire station.

This fledgling group needs leadership and people willing to work toward the community goals the group sets. Bring your enthusiasm and prepare to brainstorm. For more information, call (703) 594-3654.

Cheer on the home team this week as the Potomac Cannons host the Kinston Indians on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. All games begin at 7:45 p.m. The games are a good value and great family time. For ticket information, call (703) 594-3654.

Among the 200 signs, this one stands out.

Grand Jury in July was a bad check charge against Wood. Wood is also being sued by former investors in another Manassas jazz club, CO2 Jazz Inc.

"I was trying to bring something to Manassas that Manassas needs. I didn't get the support from the community, and I couldn't survive," Wood said in a phone interview Friday.

The owner of the Northern Virginia Professionals Club building, JAT Industries of Manassas, successfully took Wood's corporation, R. Wood Enterprises, to court for non-payment of the lease. A General District Court judge certified in June that Wood owed JAT $36,758 plus 9 percent interest from May.

"The landlord is the problem," Wood said. He described a city sewage flood in the church building that closed him down, and endless snows in the winter that damaged business when he needed it most. "I tried to work with the landlord. 'He wasn't reasonable. ... I spent over $140,000 in building improvements!'"

Wood said the landlord was unreasonable with the last three tenants, part of the reason their businesses also failed. He claimed that the landlord is also suing the previous tenant.

A $700 check Wood paid to JFEC air conditioning and plumbing for heating, work at the Northern Virginia Professionals Club in March was returned due to insufficient funds, Sandra Poinexter of JFEC said.

Poinexter said, "We'd done some work over there and we got the shaft." The small claims court granted us judgment, but I haven't been able to pursue it yet."

The small claims court certified that Wood owed JFEC $1,577.99 plus 9 percent interest until paid. Poinexter has yet to see any payments. Wood says the landlord, JAT Industries, was supposed to pay that bill because the air conditioning didn't work when he moved into the building.

"All I know is I want my money and I'm going to have to jump through hoops to get it," Poinexter said. "I don't think the law helps out a whole lot in these types of situations."

The courts only certify that money is or isn't owed. They

See WOOD, Page A2

Peter Cihak/News & Messenger

A for lease sign sits outside The Northern Virginia Professionals Club located in the former Manassas Presbyterian Church on Church Street in Old Town Manassas. It has recently closed due to poor business.

Club is another of failed businesses at site

By BENNIE SCARTON JR.
bsarton@mannassas.com

His plans were to convert the area, he told the Potomac News and Northern Virginia Journal Messenger. Wood expected to see lines of stretch limousines dropping off customers dressed in fine gowns and tuxedos.

When the club officially opened in January, Wood had signed up about 200 club members, he said in a previous interview. But for some reason, the restaurant never caught on.

"I know we generated very little in revenue," Wood said. "I envisioned the club becoming private and drawing a membership of 1,000 people paying a fee of about $60 per month to come and hear top-rated blues and jazz bands from around the Washington-Baltimore area."

See CLUB, Page A2

HOW controversy gets clarification

Dear Late Ranger: For the first round of weeks, I have

COUGHTER LEADS GMU'S BIOTECH PROGRAM TOWARD NEW GOALS

By JENNIFER BRENNAN
jbrennan@mannassas.com

Ranger and found a damaged area

sunrise and sunrise rise.

Bench seating is available or bring lawn chairs and blankets. In case of rain, the move will be moved indoors to Howesmon Hall

Room 216.

Nokesville residents want people that care about their community to join the new group Friends Uniting.

Nokesville. The group next meeting is scheduled for Monday at 6:30 p.m. at the fire station.

This fledgling group needs leadership and people willing to work toward the community goals the group sets. Bring your enthusiasm and prepare to brainstorm.

For more information, call (703) 594-3654.

Cheer on the home team this week as the Potomac Cannons host the Kinston Indians on Monday.

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, All games begin at 7:05 p.m. The games are a good value and great family time. For ticket information, call (703) 590-2311 or visit <http://www.potomaccan.com>.

Manassas area seniors will be spending special time with their grandchildren during a luncheon at noon today. All seniors are welcome, even if you don't bring your grandchildren. Cost is $1 for adults 60 and over and $3 for age 59 and under.

Don't forget one of the world's biggest bands rolls through the area this week. Check out Bon Jovi Sunday at the Nissan Pavilion. You can bet to hear "oldies" like "Livin' on a Prayer" and new material like It's My Life." The show begins at 7 p.m. with opening act, the Goo Goo Dolls.

For tickets, call (703) 573-7328. Have a super week!

[building improvements]."

Wood said the landlord was unreasonable with the last three tenants, part of the reason their businesses also failed.

He claimed that the landlord is also suing the previous tenant.

A $700 check Wood paid to JFEC air conditioning and plumbing for heating work at the Northern Virginia

Professionals Club in March was returned due to insufficient funds, Sandra Ponderex of JFEC said.

"We'd done some work over there and we got the shaft," Ponderex said. "The small claims court granted us judgment, but I haven't been able to pursue it yet."

The small claims court certified that Wood owed JFEC $1,573,99 plus 9 percent interest until paid. Ponderex has yet to see any payments. Wood says the landlord, JAT Industries, was supposed to pay that bill because the air conditioning didn't work when he moved into the building.

"All I know is I want my money and I'm going to have to jump through hoops to get it," Ponderex said. "I don't think the law helps out a whole lot in these types of situations."

The courts only certify that money is or isn't owed. They

A for lease sign sits outside The Northern Virginia Professionals Club located in the former Manassas Presbyterian Church on Church Street in Old Town Manassas. It has recently closed due to poor business.

Club is another of failed businesses at site

His plans were to convert the area, he told the Potomac News and

Manassas Journal Messenger. Wood was to become Angel's Restaurant, to be operated by his wife, and the back part of the structure was to become the Northern Virginia Professionals Club.

Wood had signed up about 200 club members, he said in a previous interview. But for some reason, the restaurant never caught on.

"I know we generated very little in elaborate landscape and lighting project on the exterior.

See CLUB, Page A2

Coughter leads GMU's biotech program toward new goals

By JENNIFER BRENNAN
jbrennan@manassasbj.com

Amy Rossetti/News & Messenger

Jerald P. Coughter is the new director of life sciences management at George Mason University.

"The life sciences have grown so quickly. The structure of how we're organized is evolving," Coughter, 43, said.

Come this fall, George Mason executive directors for George Campus will offer graduate programs in biodefense. Coughter's mandate includes advancing the medical research to the university. One of Coughter's key responsibilities will be managing their schedules.

HOV controversy gets clarification

Dear Lane Ranger: For the past couple of weeks I have noticed that the light at the intersection of Old Bridge Road and Antietam Woodbridge Senior High will turn green for traffic coming out of the high school even when there are no cars waiting and no cars have recently turned right on red. This delays the light for the traffic on Antietam turning onto Old Bridge and the Old Bridge traffic, as everyone has to wait for the light to cycle. Can you do anything to have the light cycle corrected? I always thought the light was operated by a sensor.

—Barbara Carnahan of Lake Ridge

Dear Barbara: As you saw a Virginia Department of Transportation crew was out the day after you wrote the Lane

Ranger and found a damaged sensor. This intersection operates on a loop detector system. The damaged sensor was causing the signal at Antietam Road to turn green. It was replaced.

See COUGHTER, Page A2

See RANGER, Page A2

WEATHER

High 88, Low 71
Chance of showers
Details /A4

INSIDE

COMING TOMORROW

ON THE WEB

Briefs ..... A8      Lotteries ..... A2
Classifieds ..... B7      Opinion ..... A6
Comics ..... B5      Scoreboard ..... B4
Leisure ..... B6      State Briefs ..... A7

Carolina League Baseball — Kinston at Potomac results

Manassas Journal Messenger
www.manassasbj.com
Potomac News
www.potomacnews.com

6 52425 09009 1

State may restrict traditional net fishing

By The Associated Press

NEWPORT NEWS — In an effort to protect the Chesapeake Bay's sea grasses, Virginia regulators are considering new restrictions on a traditional form of fishing.

Few commercial fishermen still use the long, weighted net called a haul seine, but those who do are angrily opposed to the limits and the idea that their trade — once practiced by George Washington — is tearing up grass beds and harming the environment.

In March, state legislators adopted a new definition of haul seine in an attempt to clarify rules for a fishery that brings about $3 million worth of cracker, grey trout and spot to seafood markets each year.

At a recent Virginia Marine Resources Commission public hearing, fishermen challenged scientists, sportsmen and environmentalists who want to shut down hundreds of acres of damaged grass beds to netting activity.

"This whole issue is a sham intended to put haul seiners out of business," said Doug Jenkins, a waterman near the Potomac River. "There's a lot more things causing damage to those grasses than haul seines, but you don't hear anything about regulating."

The commission is recommending that haul seiners be required to call their fishing plans in before working. They would be allowed to withdraw fish with an internal, circular net called "the pocket" only three hours before and after high tide. Under the possible changes, the fishermen could not drag their weighted nets for more than half a nautical mile, and they could potentially lose their commercial licenses after a first offense.

State fisheries director Jack Travelsich said no grass beds will be closed for now, but he added that the commission might consider that option later this year if other limits are not working.

Scientists say the underwater grasses are crucial to the health of the Chesapeake Bay. They breathe oxygen into the water, filter sediments and nutrients and shelter baby crabs and fish.

The grasses cover about 85,000 acres in the bay — a fraction of their historical prevalence in Virginia and Maryland, scientists say. The grasses are slowly returning to the bay.

The netting dispute stems in part from research published two years ago by the Virginia Institute of Marine Science. Bob Orth headed the study and scanned aerial photographs, determining that 26 grassy areas in shallow waters had been severely damaged by boat propellers between 1987 and 2000.

The damage runs through beds in the York River, Mobjack Bay, Pogoson Flats and Back River. Almost all of the scars are in straight lines and just from sand bars.

In the study, Orth noted that recreational boating and crabbing might be to blame for some of the damage, but he concluded that haul seiners most likely did most of the damage. The area is a popular place for the fishing technique, which is practiced in shallow waters where grasses grow.

The mesh nets are about 1,000 yards long each and stretched into a circle by one or two boats to catch fish in the middle.

Haul setting is usually done at night because the target species swim toward the shore then in search of food.

The state commission will vote on the proposed regulations this month.

WOOD

Continued from Page A1

do not enforce payment in these situations. Once a judgment amount is entered, it's up to the landlord to use collection agencies or garnishments to retrieve the money.

But the Northern Virginia Professionals Club isn't the first of Wood's business to go under.

Three of Wood's former investors in another club, CO2 Jazz Inc., entered motions for judgment against Woods in Prince William Circuit court at the end of May. That club closed in October 2001, without notification to the other investors, they claim. According to court documents, plaintiffs' investment in CO2 Jazz ranged from $5,000 to $30,000.

"I took on people who were somewhat investors there were some struggles, and I couldn't make it," Wood said. "There were some tie-ups with the [liquor] license. We'd put a lot of money in, but without ... the license nobody came in." The investors didn't understand. It ended up blowing under. I tried to pay people as best as I could."

But one of the investors, Joseph Harris, said the investors discovered the application for the liquor license had never been turned in. Wood never applied for the license, Harris said.

"We didn't pull out until after we found out he'd used our money to pay his personal debts," Harris said in a phone interview Friday.

Each of the plaintiffs, entering individual lawsuits drafted by Burke attorney John Bell, seeks $500,000 in damages from Wood.

Burke attorney William A. Boge, Boge's law firm, Scanlon Law Firm and CO2 Jazz Inc. itself.

"We're just trying to save some one else from losing money to Mr. Wood," Harris said. "It's a lesson learned. But, if we can save someone else..."

COUGHTER

Continued from Page A1

restaurant. Through the years a half-dozen different restaurant owners have attempted to make a successful entry from it but all have failed with the exception of its original owner Luke Barzgar, who operated it for years before moving to Florida.

Barzgar retained the beautiful features of the church, and past restaurants owners all raved that it had one of the most striking interiors in the area — that they couldn't fail to draw customers into it. However, whether it was a lousy or poor management, none of the aspirations of the previous owners is vacant again. Built of locally quarried red sandstone, the church at 9329 Main St. had original Tiffany windows that were removed to the new church at $201 bounced. The trial was declared a

George Mason.

Cougher had lived in Loudoun for about 15 years. He comes to George Mason after working at Virginia's Center for Innovation and research opportunities can all be possible

Staff writer Maria Heggstad can be reached at (703) 389-6594.

Peter Cilek/News &amp; Messenger

Businesses at the former Manassas Presbyterian Church in Old Town Manassas have had a difficult time staying open.

CLUB

Continued from Page A1

"We didn't pull out until after we found out he'd used our money to pay his personal debts," Harris said in a phone interview Friday.

Each of the plaintiffs, entering individual lawsuits drafted by Burke attorney John Bell, seeks $500,000 in damages from Wood.

Burke attorney William A. Boge, Boge's law firm, Scanlon Law Firm and CO2 Jazz Inc. itself.

"We're just trying to save some one else from losing money to Mr. Wood," Harris said. "It's a lesson learned. But, if we can save someone else..."

COUGHTER

Continued from Page A1

Now, the grounds of the building are overrun with weeds and tall grass. Its once impressive look is in shambles. The rustic fence

Peter Cilella/News & Messenger
Businesses at the former Manassas Presbyterian Church in Old Town Manassas have had a difficult time staying open.

CLUB

Continued from Page A1

restaurant. Through the years a half-dozen different restaurant owners have attempted to make a successful eatery from it but all have failed with the exception of its original owner Luke Barzegar, who operated it for years before moving to Florida. Barzegar retained the beautiful features of the church, and past restaurants owners all raved that it had one of the most striking interiors in the area — that they couldn't fail to draw customers into it. However, whether it was a lack of poor management, none of the aspirations of the previous owners or the way of meals or other taxes from the Woods," said John Grzalka, Manassas Commissioner of Revenue. After five months, the owner of the property, IAT Industries L.L.C., closed Woods' establishment for overdue lease payments. Now the building, which was built in 1875 and served the congregation for more than 100 years, is vacant again. Built of locally quarried sandstone, the church at 9329 Main St. had original Tiffany windows that were removed to the new church at 8201 Ashton Ave., Manassas.

The church has a place in Hollywood. It was shown in "My Son John," a movie partially filmed in Manassas in 1952 starring Van Heflin and Helen Hayes.

After the church moved, the building was converted into a uses, referred to as concession agreements, to use concession areas or garnishments to retrieve the money.

But the Northern Virginia Professionals Club isn't the first of Woods' business to go under.

Three of Woods' former investors entered motions for judgment against Woods in Prince William Circuit court at the end of May. That club closed in October 2001, without notification to the other investors, they claim. According to court documents, plaintiffs invested $5,000 to $30,000.

"I took on people who were one else from losing money to Mr. Woods," Harris said. "It's a lesson learned. But, if we can save someone else ..."

ered the application for the liquor license had never been turned in. Wood never applied for the license, Harris said.

"We didn't pull out until after we found out he'd used our money to pay his personal debts," Harris said in a phone interview Friday.

Each of the plaintiffs, entering individual lawsuits drafted by Burke attorney John Bell, seeks to have been practicing in violation of federal trade commission guidelines when he drafted business documents and shares in the club for Wood.

Wood was previously prosecuted for uttering in 2001, when a Manassas food supplier claimed a $1,797.45 check Wood wrote him bounced. The trial was declared a converted funds from the plaintiff and other investors in CO2 ...

Harris said the group doesn't really expect to recover anything from Wood, but hopes instead to recover from Boge, who they believe to have been practicing in

"It's all based on bad luck. I never tried to screw anyone. I'm trying to put myself in a position where I can pay everyone back," Wood said. "I have a lot of dreams and aspirations and good intentions."

Staff writer Maria Heistead can be reached at (703) 369-6594.

COUGHTER

Continued from Page A1

grows by day.

"I'm not exaggerating to say we get contacted by somebody every day," Coughtner said.

Coughtner said George Mason is the perfect place to be "on the cutting edge of research."

Also a student, Coughtner is currently working on his doctoral degree in public policy with a focus in science and technology policy at about the operation ... set up accounts in various financial institutions to which they diverted and converted funds from the plaintiff because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"It's all based on bad luck. I never tried to screw anyone. I'm trying to put myself in a position where I can pay everyone back,"

Wood said. "I have a lot of dreams and aspirations and good intentions."

Staff writer Jennifer Breitman can be reached at (703) 369-6591.

Lotteries

Maryland

Pick 3 ..... 7-7-9

Pick 4 ..... 1-9-5-7

B. Match 5 ..... 4-9-27-28-39 (38)

These numbers were drawn

Sunday, July 20:

Saturday, July 19:

District of Columbia

Monday Lucky Nos ..... 5-3-2

Midday D.C. Four ..... 7-7-8-5

Lucky Numbers ..... 2-1-0

D.C. Four ..... 3-2-7-8

D.C. Hot Five ..... 6-23-17-2-18

Lotto South ..... 2-5-7-24-28-32

RANGER

Continued from Page A1

Virginia

Pick 3 ..... 6-5-8

Pick 4 ..... 2-8-1-0

Cash 5 ..... 12-18-19-22-23

Section 33.1-46.2. Designation of high-occupancy vehicle lanes;

Hill, George Mason's vice provost for research, believes to have been practicing in violation of federal trade commission guidelines when he drafted business documents and shares in Firm and CO2 Jazz Inc. itself.

Wood was previously prosecuted for uttering in 2001, when a Manassas food supplier claimed a $1,797.45 check Wood wrote him bounced. The trial was declared a uses, referred to as concession areas or garnishments to retrieve the money.

He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"CORT Furniture basically screwed me," said Wood. He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"It's all based on bad luck. I never tried to screw anyone. I'm trying to put myself in a position where I can pay everyone back,"

Wood said. "I have a lot of dreams and aspirations and good intentions."

Staff writer Jennifer Breitman can be reached at (703) 369-6591.

Hill, George Mason's vice provost for research, believes to have been practicing in violation of federal trade commission guidelines when he drafted business documents and shares in Firm and CO2 Jazz Inc. itself.

Wood was previously prosecuted for uttering in 2001, when a Manassas food supplier claimed a $1,797.45 check Wood wrote him bounced. The trial was declared a uses, referred to as concession areas or garnishments to retrieve the money.

He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"CORT Furniture basically screwed me," said Wood. He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"It's all based on bad luck. I never tried to screw anyone. I'm trying to put myself in a position where I can pay everyone back,"

Wood said. "I have a lot of dreams and aspirations and good intentions."

Staff writer Jennifer Breitman can be reached at (703) 369-6591.

Hill, George Mason's vice provost for research, believes to have been practicing in violation of federal trade commission guidelines when he drafted business documents and shares in Firm and CO2 Jazz Inc. itself.

Wood was previously prosecuted for uttering in 2001, when a Manassas food supplier claimed a $1,797.45 check Wood wrote him bounced. The trial was declared a uses, referred to as concession areas or garnishments to retrieve the money.

He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"CORT Furniture basically screwed me," said Wood. He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"It's all based on bad luck. I never tried to screw anyone. I'm trying to put myself in a position where I can pay everyone back,"

Wood said. "I have a lot of dreams and aspirations and good intentions."

Staff writer Jennifer Breitman can be reached at (703) 369-6591.

Hill, George Mason's vice provost for research, believes to have been practicing in violation of federal trade commission guidelines when he drafted business documents and shares in Firm and CO2 Jazz Inc. itself.

Wood was previously prosecuted for uttering in 2001, when a Manassas food supplier claimed a $1,797.45 check Wood wrote him bounced. The trial was declared a uses, referred to as concession areas or garnishments to retrieve the money.

He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"CORT Furniture basically screwed me," said Wood. He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"It's all based on bad luck. I never tried to screw anyone. I'm trying to put myself in a position where I can pay everyone back,"

Wood said. "I have a lot of dreams and aspirations and good intentions."

Staff writer Jennifer Breitman can be reached at (703) 369-6591.

Hill, George Mason's vice provost for research, believes to have been practicing in violation of federal trade commission guidelines when he drafted business documents and shares in Firm and CO2 Jazz Inc. itself.

Wood was previously prosecuted for uttering in 2001, when a Manassas food supplier claimed a $1,797.45 check Wood wrote him bounced. The trial was declared a uses, referred to as concession areas or garnishments to retrieve the money.

He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"CORT Furniture basically screwed me," said Wood. He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"It's all based on bad luck. I never tried to screw anyone. I'm trying to put myself in a position where I can pay everyone back,"

Wood said. "I have a lot of dreams and aspirations and good intentions."

Staff writer Jennifer Breitman can be reached at (703) 369-6591.

Hill, George Mason's vice provost for research, believes to have been practicing in violation of federal trade commission guidelines when he drafted business documents and shares in Firm and CO2 Jazz Inc. itself.

Wood was previously prosecuted for uttering in 2001, when a Manassas food supplier claimed a $1,797.45 check Wood wrote him bounced. The trial was declared a uses, referred to as concession areas or garnishments to retrieve the money.

He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"CORT Furniture basically screwed me," said Wood. He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"It's all based on bad luck. I never tried to screw anyone. I'm trying to put myself in a position where I can pay everyone back,"

Wood said. "I have a lot of dreams and aspirations and good intentions."

Staff writer Jennifer Breitman can be reached at (703) 369-6591.

Hill, George Mason's vice provost for research, believes to have been practicing in violation of federal trade commission guidelines when he drafted business documents and shares in Firm and CO2 Jazz Inc. itself.

Wood was previously prosecuted for uttering in 2001, when a Manassas food supplier claimed a $1,797.45 check Wood wrote him bounced. The trial was declared a uses, referred to as concession areas or garnishments to retrieve the money.

He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"CORT Furniture basically screwed me," said Wood. He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"It's all based on bad luck. I never tried to screw anyone. I'm trying to put myself in a position where I can pay everyone back,"

Wood said. "I have a lot of dreams and aspirations and good intentions."

Staff writer Jennifer Breitman can be reached at (703) 369-6591.

Hill, George Mason's vice provost for research, believes to have been practicing in violation of federal trade commission guidelines when he drafted business documents and shares in Firm and CO2 Jazz Inc. itself.

Wood was previously prosecuted for uttering in 2001, when a Manassas food supplier claimed a $1,797.45 check Wood wrote him bounced. The trial was declared a uses, referred to as concession areas or garnishments to retrieve the money.

He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"CORT Furniture basically screwed me," said Wood. He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"It's all based on bad luck. I never tried to screw anyone. I'm trying to put myself in a position where I can pay everyone back,"

Wood said. "I have a lot of dreams and aspirations and good intentions."

Staff writer Jennifer Breitman can be reached at (703) 369-6591.

Hill, George Mason's vice provost for research, believes to have been practicing in violation of federal trade commission guidelines when he drafted business documents and shares in Firm and CO2 Jazz Inc. itself.

Wood was previously prosecuted for uttering in 2001, when a Manassas food supplier claimed a $1,797.45 check Wood wrote him bounced. The trial was declared a uses, referred to as concession areas or garnishments to retrieve the money.

He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"CORT Furniture basically screwed me," said Wood. He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"It's all based on bad luck. I never tried to screw anyone. I'm trying to put myself in a position where I can pay everyone back,"

Wood said. "I have a lot of dreams and aspirations and good intentions."

Staff writer Jennifer Breitman can be reached at (703) 369-6591.

Hill, George Mason's vice provost for research, believes to have been practicing in violation of federal trade commission guidelines when he drafted business documents and shares in Firm and CO2 Jazz Inc. itself.

Wood was previously prosecuted for uttering in 2001, when a Manassas food supplier claimed a $1,797.45 check Wood wrote him bounced. The trial was declared a uses, referred to as concession areas or garnishments to retrieve the money.

He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"CORT Furniture basically screwed me," said Wood. He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"It's all based on bad luck. I never tried to screw anyone. I'm trying to put myself in a position where I can pay everyone back,"

Wood said. "I have a lot of dreams and aspirations and good intentions."

Staff writer Jennifer Breitman can be reached at (703) 369-6591.

Hill, George Mason's vice provost for research, believes to have been practicing in violation of federal trade commission guidelines when he drafted business documents and shares in Firm and CO2 Jazz Inc. itself.

Wood was previously prosecuted for uttering in 2001, when a Manassas food supplier claimed a $1,797.45 check Wood wrote him bounced. The trial was declared a uses, referred to as concession areas or garnishments to retrieve the money.

He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"CORT Furniture basically screwed me," said Wood. He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"It's all based on bad luck. I never tried to screw anyone. I'm trying to put myself in a position where I can pay everyone back,"

Wood said. "I have a lot of dreams and aspirations and good intentions."

Staff writer Jennifer Breitman can be reached at (703) 369-6591.

Hill, George Mason's vice provost for research, believes to have been practicing in violation of federal trade commission guidelines when he drafted business documents and shares in Firm and CO2 Jazz Inc. itself.

Wood was previously prosecuted for uttering in 2001, when a Manassas food supplier claimed a $1,797.45 check Wood wrote him bounced. The trial was declared a uses, referred to as concession areas or garnishments to retrieve the money.

He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"CORT Furniture basically screwed me," said Wood. He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"It's all based on bad luck. I never tried to screw anyone. I'm trying to put myself in a position where I can pay everyone back,"

Wood said. "I have a lot of dreams and aspirations and good intentions."

Staff writer Jennifer Breitman can be reached at (703) 369-6591.

Hill, George Mason's vice provost for research, believes to have been practicing in violation of federal trade commission guidelines when he drafted business documents and shares in Firm and CO2 Jazz Inc. itself.

Wood was previously prosecuted for uttering in 2001, when a Manassas food supplier claimed a $1,797.45 check Wood wrote him bounced. The trial was declared a uses, referred to as concession areas or garnishments to retrieve the money.

He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"CORT Furniture basically screwed me," said Wood. He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"It's all based on bad luck. I never tried to screw anyone. I'm trying to put myself in a position where I can pay everyone back,"

Wood said. "I have a lot of dreams and aspirations and good intentions."

Staff writer Jennifer Breitman can be reached at (703) 369-6591.

Hill, George Mason's vice provost for research, believes to have been practicing in violation of federal trade commission guidelines when he drafted business documents and shares in Firm and CO2 Jazz Inc. itself.

Wood was previously prosecuted for uttering in 2001, when a Manassas food supplier claimed a $1,797.45 check Wood wrote him bounced. The trial was declared a uses, referred to as concession areas or garnishments to retrieve the money.

He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"CORT Furniture basically screwed me," said Wood. He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"It's all based on bad luck. I never tried to screw anyone. I'm trying to put myself in a position where I can pay everyone back,"

Wood said. "I have a lot of dreams and aspirations and good intentions."

Staff writer Jennifer Breitman can be reached at (703) 369-6591.

Hill, George Mason's vice provost for research, believes to have been practicing in violation of federal trade commission guidelines when he drafted business documents and shares in Firm and CO2 Jazz Inc. itself.

Wood was previously prosecuted for uttering in 2001, when a Manassas food supplier claimed a $1,797.45 check Wood wrote him bounced. The trial was declared a uses, referred to as concession areas or garnishments to retrieve the money.

He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"CORT Furniture basically screwed me," said Wood. He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"It's all based on bad luck. I never tried to screw anyone. I'm trying to put myself in a position where I can pay everyone back,"

Wood said. "I have a lot of dreams and aspirations and good intentions."

Staff writer Jennifer Breitman can be reached at (703) 369-6591.

Hill, George Mason's vice provost for research, believes to have been practicing in violation of federal trade commission guidelines when he drafted business documents and shares in Firm and CO2 Jazz Inc. itself.

Wood was previously prosecuted for uttering in 2001, when a Manassas food supplier claimed a $1,797.45 check Wood wrote him bounced. The trial was declared a uses, referred to as concession areas or garnishments to retrieve the money.

He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"CORT Furniture basically screwed me," said Wood. He said that CORT sent the wrong shipment to NVFC, which was larger and more expensive than his actual order. He accepted because he needed furniture for his sneak preview a few days away, and then tried to return the furniture.

"It's all based on bad luck. I never tried to screw anyone. I'm trying to put myself in a position where I can pay everyone back,"

Wood said. "I have a lot of dreams and aspirations and good intentions."

Staff writer Jennifer Breitman can be reached at (703) 369-6591.

H

Now the building, which was built in 1875 and served the congregation for more than 100 years, is vacant again. Built of locally quarried red sandstone, the church at 9329 Main St. had original Tiffany windows that were removed to the new church at 8201 Ashton Ave., Manassas.

The church has a place in Hollywood. It was shown in "My Son, John," a movie partially filmed in Manassas in 1952, starring Van Heflin and Helen Hayes.

After the church moved, the building was converted into a poor management; none of the aspirations of the previous owners for the facility panned out.

Now the grounds of the building are overrun with weeds and tall grass. Its once impressive look is in shambles. The really firm of Randall Higgin now has posted a sign, seeking another tenant to lease the building.

In the meantime, Wood has several court dates pending.

Staff writer Bernie Searson Jr. can be reached at (703) 369-6707.

However, whether it was a jinx or poor management, none of the aspirations of the previous owners

for the facility panned out.

Now the grounds of the building are overrun with weeds and tall grass. Its once impressive look is in shambles. The really firm of Randall Higgin now has posted a sign, seeking another tenant to lease the building.

In the meantime, Wood has several court dates pending.

Staff writer Bernie Searson Jr. can be reached at (703) 369-6707.

Lotteries

52

Maryland
These numbers were drawn
Sunday, July 20:

District of Columbia
Midday Luck Nos.	5-3-2
Midday D.C. Four	7-7-8-5
Lucky Numbers	2-1-0
D.C. Fourtune	3-2-7-8
D.C. Hot Five	6-28-17-2-18
Quick Cash	34-33-4-23-32-5

Pick 3..... 7-7-9
Pick 4..... 1-9-5-7
B. Match 5..... 4-9-27-28-39 (38)

Virginia
Saturday, July 19:
Pick 3.....	6-5-8
Pick 4.....	2-8-1-0
Cash 5.....	12-18-19-22-23
Lotto South.....	2-5-7-24-28-32

Corrections and clarifications

The Manassas Journal Messenger wishes to present a fair and accurate news report each day. It is the policy of this newspaper to correct all errors. If you have a concern about a story or photo published, please contact the editor of the department concerned. Phone numbers and e-mail addresses are listed below.

Local news — the news that affects us most

How to reach the Manassas Journal Messenger

Subscription Rates

Established 1889 • Home Name Number 123	9007 Church Street	Daily/Sunday	Weekends Only	$2.65	$2.45	$1.30	$14.30	$28.60	$124.00	$52	$2

Subscription by mail

Subscription Manager, Manassas Journal Messenger

P.O. Drawer 437

Manassas, VA 20108-0431

C 2003 Media General Operations Inc. All rights reserved. All rights reserved without prior written consent.

Published Sunday through Saturday.

Periodicals postage paid.

Member:

U.S. Post Office, Manassas, VA

and additional mailing offices.

Automobiles of Circulation

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6

6