Reconstruction Is Started

A Manassas building firm under the direction of foreman Ron Bush, right, began work on the Mount Calvary Baptist Church which burned Jan. 16. The building was a total loss, including water damage to the inside, according to fire officials. But county building inspectors have approved a plan to leave the walls up and put on a new roof and steeple to get the church in proper working order. Donations from private citizens and local churches have helped raise the money for rebuilding the church. A substantial insurance payment has also been received by the congregation.
